

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 531 No One Could Rest Unmoved

Lucien jumped up from the sofa, "You, you, you..."

He was speechless. He had talked about Nina in front of Cameron yet she was the person that Cameron had been thinking about. Lucien felt like a fool.

"When did you guys hook up?" Lucien asked after quite a silence.
"We were classmates back in high school." Cameron didn't like Lucien's wording. But he didn't bother to correct him.

Lucien was startled. "So, you guys are old friends!"

He felt glad that he said youthful love was memorable on the rooftop. Otherwise, he wouldn't know how to face Cameron right now.

Cameron then told Lucien about what happened between Nina and him, that they were once together, but broke up later. He didn't tell the story in detail, of course.

Lucien vaguely understood at the beginning that the thing didn't work out because Cameron's mother wasn't approval of it. But then he got puzzled. So, he asked Cameron, frowning, "Then what's going on between you guys now? You came to her as soon as you got back. And you guys slept. But how is she on the dating program now? And, why don't you just tell her that you have feelings for her? Isn't it nice to be with someone you love?"

Cameron shook his head. "It's way more complicated than you thought."

He had told her that he had never forgotten about her over the years, and he thought that was enough. However, he soon got upset because Nina said she didn't want to be bothered by his mother again.

And Nina also showed her hatred of him over the years. Only then did Cameron realize that starting again wouldn't be easy.

Only those who had gone through the same things would understand his feelings.

Lucien asked in confusion, "How is it complicated? Isn't it all about two people loving each other?"

Wasn't love simple ?

Lucien didn't understand why Cameron rented the upstairs to Nina and why Nina participated in the dating program.

Cameron didn't intend to say anything more to him, but only solemnly explained, "So you can't leave for the time being." Lucien wanted to protest. Cameron said, "If my happiness rests in the air, I'll quit the company."

This made Lucien angry. If Cameron quit, Camcien Lifetech would be over.

He is good at management and social. But without the products developed by Cameron, he would have nothing to socialize about. He would have nothing to make money with.

Lucien walked around Cameron's office with his hands on his hips and complained, "You have to reimburse me for my air ticket money and hotel reservation money!"

Cameron smiled, "No problem. I can give you another 10% of the dividend at the end of the year." Lucien grunted, "Why would I need that?" He doesn't want money. He had said that because he was too angry. He needed some compensation to comfort himself.

Camcien Lifetech was founded by him and Cameron. Their dividend ratio was the same. He will not want more than 10% of the dividend for no reason. Camcien Lifetech wouldn't be like this today without either of them.

Besides, the relationship between him and Cameron was priceless.

Cameron didn't say anything more. At this time, his mother called.

Cameron frowned slightly, but he still answered the phone.

Colleen Donovan sounded cautious. "Changning, your father and I are sorry about last night. You decide your future. We shouldn't interfere too much..."

Cameron said, "It's all right."

Colleen was relieved when she heard that there wasn't much rejection in Cameron's tone. She then asked, "Where are you now?"

Cameron glanced at Lucien and said carelessly, "In a friend's company."

Colleen was silent for a moment. She sighed heavily inside, thinking, "His classmates and friends are now all successful in their careers. Doesn't he feel ashamed in someone else's company?"

She and Randall didn't know much about their son now. After what had happened the last night, Colleen could only change the topic. "Coming home for dinner tonight?" "I will." Cameron agreed.

He would not only go back home for dinner but also live there. Nina was casting the program. He couldn't let this stiff relationship between him and his parents go on. It wouldn't be good for Nina in the future.

So he went on saying, "Is my room ready?" "I'm staying home for a while."

Hearing this, Colleen was delighted. "It's long been ready, just come back."

The room was ready a long time ago because they thought Cameron would live at home after getting back from abroad.

However, they quarreled last night and he left home.

"Okay." Cameron didn't speak more. Colleen hang up the phone happily.

Lucien tutored from beside, "Are you going back to please them so they wouldn't make things difficult for you and Nina?"

Cameron glanced at him. "Do you speak so casually while socializing with others too? Why would I please them? They are my parents. We are getting along well all the time."

Lucien chuckled, "Go on pretending. I knew I was right." Cameron was shrewd and stubborn.

Cameron didn't want to talk to Lucien anymore, so he got up, and took his car keys. "I'm off."

Lucien hasn't talked enough with him. He wanted to know more details about Cameron and Nina. So he followed him and said, "Hey, tell me the whole story between you and Nina. I'm curious about how you started."

"No one could remain unmoved if someone is constantly pursuing them." "Me either," Cameron added.

"Are you making a fool of me?" said Lucien. "Are you talking about yourself? Melanie Blanchard has been pursuing you for so many years. Why haven't you been moved?"

Cameron stepped into the elevator, not intending to continue the conversation. "Dick head." Cameron thought. "I was moved because I liked Nina too!"

Frankly speaking, Cameron accepted it at the very beginning of Nina's pester. He pretended that he needed to think about it. But it was just a trick.

Was there any detailed explanation needed? Nina was such a gorgeous person. Of course, he had a crush on her at the first sight.

He liked her for her look. But he fell in love with her for her personality.

Nina looked like a girl different to deal with. But he knew that she treated her friends well and that she was kind and gentle on the inside.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 532 I've Cut My Hair

Cameron had a nice time dining with his parents. Because of what happened last night, perhaps, neither Randall nor Colleen mentioned work stuff.

At the end of the dinner, Colleen asked kind of cautiously, "Well, I mean, Cameron, I was thinking about holding a party for you tomorrow, to celebrate your return. What do you think about it?"

She then added, fearing that Cameron would refuse, "They missed you. Your grandparents, your uncle, and everyone." Cameron didn't hesitate. "I think I'm switched to the local time. I should visit them actually."

“It’s alright. They want you to rest well.” Colleen then added, “So, shall I book the restaurant?”

“Okay.” Cameron had nothing against the idea.

He couldn’t avoid this party after going back from abroad.

But he was thinking about something else. His grandparents from his father’s side were all alive. But they only had one son.

Colleen’s parents had passed away when Cameron was still a kid. But Colleen had a brother, who was a famous engineer, named Joshua Donovan.

Joshua was very attentive to Colleen. Colleen listened to everything he said. And Randall listened to Colleen’s order.

Cameron’s grandparents never meddled with his thing. And his grandmother adored beauty. So, she would definitely like Nina.

So, the only person Cameron needed to persuade was his uncle.

As long as Cameron’s uncle Joshua accepted Nina, every problem was solved.

After dinner, Cameron went back to his room. As soon as he disappeared from the kitchen, Colleen sighed. “I planned to invite Michelle to the party tomorrow. But now it looks like a bad idea.”

The girl Colleen mentioned was Michelle Byrd, Uncle Byrd’s daughter. The two families were colleagues and friends. They were very familiar with each other since the children were still young.

Now the children were all adults. Cameron was handsome and gentle. Michelle Byrd was beautiful and elegant. They were both outstanding among their peers. That was why their parents wanted to ship them.

Besides, Colleen also heard from Michelle’s mother that the girl liked his son. So, the wish was even stronger. However, she didn’t have the chance because both Michelle and Cameron were studying abroad.

Now, they have both returned. And they were both at the age of getting married.
Colleen wanted them to meet. Things wouldn't be better if they could hit it off.

But after what happened last night, Colleen thought she'd better quit the idea this time.

Randall nodded, "Yup. It's not the right timing."

He then said, "He is not even having a career. That's not part of the plan. How would Michelle think about it." Colleen felt ashamed. "Yes, right. I don't even know how to face Michelle's family."

Michelle majored in art and was now a painter. She became a teacher at university after returning abroad. And she was going to hold an exhibition of her work in a couple of days. She was a success now. And in comparison, their son had given up both the research institute and the colleges. Such a shame.

Randall got up and waved his hand with a headache, "Forget it, I don't want to mind about his business now. As long as he doesn't steal or rob, he can do whatever he wants."

Cameron had always been a model student over the years. Randall had never needed to worry about him. No one knew what made him so rebellious now.

Randall wouldn't beat his child. But he didn't know what Cameron had in mind, so a verbal lesson wouldn't do either.

As long as he doesn't commit crimes, he could do whatever he liked.
"Hey, you ..." Colleen was furious. "You are spoiling him." Randall didn't pay much attention to her complaints. He went upstairs.

Back to his room, Cameron tidied up his luggage and took a shower. Then took out a key from his bag and opened the second drawer of his desk.

Apart from many letters, there were also some other gadgets inside, including girls' hairbands and a couple phone case.

But some of the letters were torn apart and fixed with tape.

Cameron looked at those letters, which brought his mind back to the suffocating summer.

He tore up all the letters after knowing that Nina broke up with him because his mother gave her a check. They didn't write many letters at that time actually. Many of the letters were printed text messages. They were sweet.

The sweeter those texts were, the more he suffered later.

He couldn't stand watching them all torn apart, so he stopped half way, and took out the tape to fix the pieces one by one.

It was the first time that he had cried.

He locked himself in the room and sat on the floor crying. He was angry at Nina's being heartless, and at his being a coward.

Nina had abandoned him for money, yet he was fixing their letters. He couldn't even abandon the letters.

After flipping through the letters, he picked up the hair bands.

Nina had beautiful hair. She looked stunning with her hair down.

She had been outstanding in the crowd since a young age.

He couldn't stand seeing her have her hair down at school. So, he bought a lot of hair bands. Whenever he caught her leaving her hair untied, he would stuff a hairband into her hand and urged her to tie up her hair.

If she refused, he would do it by himself.

They were a sweet couple. Recalling the old memories made his heartache.

The phone case was a birthday gift from her. She drew the two cartoon figures and then customized the phone cases.

She wasn't a good drawer. But her drawing was cute in his eyes. He used that phone case until they graduated.

And all other stuff was their memories too.

At this time, he got a notification on his phone. It turned out that Nina had posted a photo in which she had short hair. The caption under said, "I've cut my hair, my past shall go with it."

Cameron turned to the hair bands in his drawer. He was reminiscence about her beautiful hair, but she had already cut it?!

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 533 Coming for Money

Cameron knew that Nina was filming a military-themed drama, so it was inevitable for her to cut her hair.

However, he was angry that Nina posted a picture like this at this very time. Combing with what she said that day, Cameron had a proper reason to believe that Nina wanted to piss him off.

He couldn't stand it, so he called Nina, wanting to ask for an explanation. However, he couldn't call her at all. It was obvious that he was blocked.

Nina was thousands of miles away, Cameron couldn't do anything at the moment. So he logged in to the account he never used and commented under the tweet, "It looks awful."

He was just venting his anger. However, he was soon cyber-attacked. Nina's fans went to his accounts and left countless mean comments. Some DMed him. Everybody was cursing him in the meanest way.

It was the first time that Cameron understood the power of fans. But he wasn't innocent. His comment was too mean. After all, Nina was beautiful enough to go with any kind of hairstyle.

The non-stop messages from Nina's fans made Cameron a headache. So he tossed his phone aside and sulked in bed.

After a while, his phone rang. He took it over with dismay. Then he suddenly sat up from the bed.

It was Nina's call. He wanted to answer it. But he stopped at the last second. That was unfair. She unblocked her when she needed him?

He was so angry that he decided not to answer her phone, but the next second he went against his words and answered it.

Because he knew that if he didn't answer the phone, he might not be able to contact her in the future.

Nina sounded lazily on the phone, "Cameron, don't look for trouble. Aren't you looking for scolding when you make such comments under my Instagram?"

She knew how powerful her fans could be. Cameron must have received a lot of scolding.

Cameron's focus was elsewhere, "How do you know it was me?"

It was the first time that he posted a comment with that account. He had only used that account to stalk her over the years. He had never commented or liked any posts. What gave him away?

Nina snorted, "I know everything, kid." Cameron's user name gave him away. It was the words that she once teased him with.

So of course, she recognized it immediately.

In addition, his comment was too mean. He could say that her new hairstyle doesn't look good yet he described it as awful... He deserved the curse of the angry fans.

"Kid?" Cameron wasn't quite satisfied with this address. "If my memory is correct, you are one month younger than me."

"So what?" said Nina bluntly.

Even though she was one month younger than him, so what?

This is just a nickname. It had nothing to do with age. And a successful woman of her age could call anyone kid if she wanted.

Cameron was pissed off by her articulation. So, he changed the topic. "Why did you block me?"

"Why can't I?" Nina asked back without much emotion. "We've made everything clear the other day in the call."

She didn't want any connection with him anymore. She didn't want to be humiliated by his family anymore.

This childish quarrel went on for a few minutes. Then Cameron fell into silence. He had always been the person who gave in when they argue in the past. It was not because he was bad at arguing, but because women didn't care about logic in an argument.

Yet he was a logical person. So, he shut up in case he was pissed off.

The atmosphere became awkward after Cameron stopped talking.

Just as Nina was about to end the call, Cameron suddenly said, "Would you lend me some money?" "What?" Nina couldn't believe her ears.

Cameron was from a wealthy family. Why would he borrow money from her?

Cameron leaned against the bed and squinted cunningly, "I'm currently between jobs. I can't support myself."

"Are you serious, Cameron?" Nina immediately raised her voice and asked incredulously, "You have studied abroad for so many years, and you told me now you're unemployed? Am I that foolish to you?"

After studying abroad, even an average person would have found a job, not to mention a top student like Cameron.

And he came from a prestigious family. If he failed to find a job, his family would help. At least, it wouldn't be a problem to find him a job at the university.

Nina didn't understand that a genius like Cameron would be without work.

Cameron explained, "You are right, I did study abroad for many years. But it wasn't my wish. My parents and some self-righteous people wanted that. I don't want to make a living by what I learned abroad now."

Cameron could be a good liar. The fact was, he became a successful businessman with that knowledge.

Nina was kind of stunned at his words, and the sorrow in his tone.

He sounded like blaming her for breaking up with him so that he could go abroad.

Nina felt disturbed. "Ask your parents for money! Why would I lend you? Do you want me to support you?"

"If you want, I wouldn't mind," said Cameron calmly.

Nina was shocked. Was this still the promising young man that she knew? When did he start to rely on women? And he seemed to take it for granted.

What had he gone through abroad over the years?

Nina pinched her forehead and said, "Cameron, I think you are having some mental problems. My good friend Jean is an excellent psychologist. I'll give you her phone number later. You can have a word with her."

Nina thought Cameron was probably mind-washed by the extravagant life overseas. He was crazy now.

"Didn't you say that you would pay me?" Cameron asked. He was done with all the nonsense.

Nina was speechless.

After the night they had sex, Nina left a note and said that if he needed any compensation, he could contact Sherlyn and name a price.

It was just to draw the line between them, to inform him that it was just a one-night-stand. She didn't expect he would take it seriously.

Nina almost cursed out.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 534 Currently Single

“What’s wrong? Want to default? ” Just as Nina was speechless, Cameron suddenly spoke.

Nina took a deep breath and sneered, “How much do you want?” “A million,” said Cameron bluntly.

That was a sharp number to Nina. Because Colleen had offered her a check of a million to break up with him. He must have brought up the number on purpose.

Nina didn’t speak, so Cameron went on saying, “Alright, let’s put it this way. Pay me a million and I’ll be at your service whenever you need me for a lifetime. I offer good service, you know that.”

Nina was amused by his words.

Was it the compensation for that night? How did it become the payment of a lifelong service?

“Alright, one million it is.” Nina agreed without hesitation. She then added, “But I hope you take the money and get lost in my life.”

Cameron was the one silent now. She was still so unreadable.

However, he wouldn’t accept this deal. “Did you say that you want to be my sugar mommy? And that you would...

Cameron stopped in time. He was on the edge of giving himself away.

He wanted to say, “And you would make me your lover with a check of 20 million?”

He was just here to fulfill her dream.

But he couldn’t say so. Otherwise, Nina would know that he had a connection with Viggo and Tymers Entertainment. And she wouldn’t believe that he was poor at the moment.

Nina was on guard. "Who did you hear this from?"

"What are you talking about?" Cameron started to play dumb. He had heard it from Viggo, of course. Viggo heard it from Nina. She said so at a dinner with Viggo and Emelia. She was drunk.

Nina didn't mention Cameron's name. But she complained about how her ex-boyfriend's mother had humiliated her and said that she would make him a lover with a check worth 20 million. Viggo was aware of their relationship. So, he naturally knew that the man Nina mentioned was Cameron.

Perhaps out of guilt, Nina sneered, "There are so many young boys to choose from, why would I choose you? You are old." Nina said so to trigger Cameron and to remind him of his current state.

"You know if I am old that night." said Cameron shamelessly.

"Get lost!" Nina cursed, and then hung up the phone.

"Don't forget to pay me." Not long after hanging up the phone, Nina received a message from Cameron with his bank card number.

Nina was speechless. Was he really out of job?

She didn't want to pay because she felt it was a trap. However, she had promised that day.

Nina felt annoyed.

After hesitating for a while, she called Manny Bowers, who she had gotten in touch with not long ago.

She needed someone to investigate on Cameron. She wanted to know if he was indeed unemployed. She didn't connect with her classmates. Manny Bowers was the only person she could count on.

And Manny was a guy. He should know something about the other guys.

“Hello, Miss Celebrity.” Manny sounded close when he picked up the call.

Last time, Emelia invited Manny to dinner and Nina went too. They were all mature now. Instead of feeling awkward, they felt that it was pretty easy to deal with old classmates.

“I want to ask you something.” Nina went straight to the point.

“What’s it?” Manny said with a smile.

“Well, I was wondering do you know how is Cameron Dauster doing recently?” Nina felt kind of embarrassed when mentioned Cameron. After all, they had a terrible breakup.

Manny wasn’t sure. “I heard he’s back recently.”

“I knew that.” “But do you know where he works?”

“Well, I don’t.” Manny denied. “You know that he wouldn’t even look at a bad student like me. We didn’t connect after graduation.” Manny then said somehow jealously, “He was so promising at that time, he must have been successful now.”

Hearing the answer, coupled with what Cameron said just now, Nina almost choked.

She smiled and asked Manny, “I don’t know either. But please, could you keep an eye on it? And let me know if you get any information.”

Manny agreed without hesitation, “No problem, it’s on me.”

Nina thanked him.

“Don’t mention it. This is what friends are for.” Manny laughed and said, “Don’t forget to invite me to your wedding when you marry him.”

“Wedding?” Nina was confused. “Mine? Who am I going to marry?”

Manny for a moment, then said quickly, “I mean, Emelia invited me to her wedding not long ago. You would invite me too when you get married, right?”

Nina was puzzled at Manny’s words. But she said, “Don’t count on me. I’m not interested in romantic life now. I just want money.” “Alright! I’m going to sleep now.

Don't forget about it." "I'll keep you posted on whatever I get." Nina then hung up the phone.

Considering there must still be people cursing Cameron online, Nina commented, "Everybody has thier own taste. It's normal that some like it and some don't."

Nina meant to appease her fans so they would stop attacking Cameron. However, Douglas immediately liked the comment as if saying that he was the one who liked the hairstyle.

He couldn't express his love to Nina on his social media, because Sherlyn and Nina had warned him. In order not to affect Nina's career, he could only like her comment.

There had been rumors that Douglas was chasing Nina. Now after what he had done, they were immediately on the trending list.

Nina was so annoyed.

Before Sherlyn called, she posted a statement on Twitter, "I'm currently single. Me and Mr. Cleveland are just friends. Otherwise, why would I join a dating program?"

Nina didn't mind being on the trending news. She just didn't want Cameron to mess up with her again after he saw the news.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 535 Billionaire

Nina had faced all sorts of gossip of her during the years of being a beautiful and popular female star. But she had never been so passive.

She realized long ago that she didn't understand Cameron well. He had been acting weirdly after he got back this time. He was even more unreadable to her now.

She was worried that he would go crazy after reading the news. That was why she made the statement.

After the post was done, Sherlyn called.

“What’s wrong with Douglas Cleveland?” Sherlyn was angry. Did we ask him to be careful of what he says?”

Sherlyn didn’t like Douglas. He was a downright playboy. Everybody knew that. He meddled with different actresses or even online celebrities.

It was such a shame to be liked by such a man.

Sherlyn had talked to Douglas in private. She warned him not to express his love for Nina in public unless he wanted to destroy Nina’s career.

Out of Sherlyn’s expectation, Douglas agreed. And he had indeed acted well after he went back abroad and started to chase Nina again. However, everything was ruined now.

Nina was speechless too. “Who knows what’s wrong with him.” But he didn’t say anything. It was just a like.”

Sherlyn snorted, “Then what’s wrong with you?”

Just ignore the negative comments! You didn’t care about it before.”

Sherlyn didn’t know that Cameron had come back and they had slept. So, she didn’t know that the person who left the mean comment was Cameron. She thought it was from their rivals.

If Nina didn’t reply to the comment, Douglas wouldn’t like the comment. And there wouldn’t be rumors about them.

Nina was silent. It was to attract her fans and save Cameron. Douglas’s like wasn’t part of the plan.

Sherlyn yelled at the other side of the call, “Speak!”

Nina was upset, “What should I say?” I’ve explained it on Twitter.”

Sherlyn bit her teeth and warned earnestly, "Listen to me, you have to stay away from Douglas. If something happened between you and him. Jillian Harrison would laugh." You know how much she wishes to see you with a playboy and lead a miserable life."

Jillian Harrison was Nina's rival. They became an actress at the same time. They both played an unimportant role in a popular soap opera.

Maybe because of a similar experience. They were once good friends. They interacted a lot on all sorts of occasions. They posted birthday tweets for each other.

However, as they went closer, Nina realized that they could never be friends. They had different views.

Nina was a person with integrity.

Jillian would do anything for profit.

For example, she had stolen Nina's resources without worrying that it might affect their relationship.

Nina knew that to grow strong in this industry, one must be shameless. However, she just couldn't do it. So, she had remained a nobody for quite a time, while at the same time, Jillian became popular.

Since then, they stopped connecting. Nina wasn't jealous. She just didn't want to deal with such people anymore.

They would never be real friends anyway.

Later, Jillian slowly dropped. However, Nina's career became better each year. So, they became rivals, especially when they wanted the same resources.

After what Jillian had done, Nina decided not to take one step back. She was never a person who would let herself be bullied.

And it was Jillian who started.

What disgusted Nina even more was that Jillian had been imitating her over the years. She copied the way Nina dress and the way she talked.

Nina was known for being straightforward and honest. So Jillian acted like she was the same.

They were now incompatible.

Nina pursed her lips when Sherlyn said that Jillian would like to see her cry.

Sherlyn then said, "By the way, I have something to tell you. So, I heard that Douglas wants to join the dating show and went to stop him. But before I did anything, I heard that someone had taken this opportunity before him."

Nina was surprised to hear that. Sherlyn continued, "I tried to know more about the person, but the director wouldn't say anything.

So, the only thing I know is that he is from a decent family. He became a billionaire at a young age, and he is now at the front tier of his industry. I'm sure you would like him."

Nina thought of Cameron when she heard the person was from a decent family. But when Sherlyn said he was a billionaire, Nina knew it couldn't be him.

Cameron said he had no money. He was even asking her for money. And she had told him that she didn't want to be bothered by his mother. He must have given up the idea.

So, the person who cut in front of Douglas can't be Cameron.

Sherlyn said, "In my opinion, you should choose this guy to go on the date, no matter what happens. Douglas must be out. If you guys have any interaction in the show, rumors will be out of control."

"I want that playboy to stay away from you as far as possible." Sherlyn tried her best to protect Nina. Nina said, however, "What if I just don't like that person?"

"You are an actress. Just do your work then. The guy is from a good family. It sounds better to have rumors about him and you than Douglas, no?"

Nina said kind of helplessly, "So you believe what they say. What if he is a playboy too? It doesn't make him more reliable being a person without fame."

Sherlyn waved her hand. "I just trust him! I've met all kinds of people over the years. I trust my judgment."

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 536 Isn't It Nice to Be Single

Sherlyn was determined to separate Nina and Douglas "Anyway, stay away from Douglas!" She was almost yelling at the end.

"And I don't want to hear you saying things like marrying Douglas. You will kill me, seriously."

Sherlyn felt like Nina looked sick recently. She didn't know why.

One day after drinking, Nina said she was tired. She would like to get married and stop working as an actress. And she said Douglas was a good choice. He was handsome and rich. And since she didn't love him, she won't be hurt."

Sherlyn was pissed off hearing this. Every woman wanted their man to be devoted, yet Nina wanted the opposite. She must be out of her mind.

Thinking of Nina's words, Sherlyn got angry again. "Douglas is far from being good enough for you."

Nina rubbed her ears, feeling bored. "Alright, alright! Just leave this to me."

"My mother wouldn't care about who I marry." she then added wryly.

Nina was just a tool to produce money in her mother's eyes. Her parents didn't care about who her husband would be, as long as he was rich.

The only thing they cared about was money.

As long as their son can live freely, everything was fine, including marrying Nina to an old man, which they had done once. Or, in other words, selling.

Sherlyn knew about Nina's ridiculous parents. She said to Nina with pity, "Nina, you are at the age of getting married. I don't mind that you suddenly marry someone and quit your career. I'm just afraid that you would choose the wrong person."

After years of thriving in the industry, Nina was now rich and famous. She wouldn't need anyone to support her for the rest of her life.

But money didn't represent real happiness. Sherlyn wished Nina to marry the right person and enjoy the rest of her life.

"Sherlyn, I got what you mean. Thank you." Nina knew that Sherlyn was seriously caring for her. So, she became more serious.

Sherlyn grunted, "Better! I'd prefer to see you single than with a random person.

Speaking of which, is it nice to be single? Just like me. I have my career and my money. I can do whatever I want.

Sherlyn was 37 or so, about the same age as Viggo.

It was too late for a woman to be in a relationship at such an age.

Sherlyn was not in a hurry. Instead, she was enjoying her life to the fullest.

Nina smiled, "Yup, it's super! You are my role model."

Sherlyn smiled too. "But we are different. I didn't meet any guys that I like. You are still young. You still have the chance."

Such as Cameron.

Then, Sherlyn talked about the business with Nina. "By the way. 'Princess Leilania' crew is about to hold a conference in a couple of days. I've asked for two days of leaves for you. You can go back to participate."

"Princess Leilania" just ended a few days ago, it was the most popular period drama of the year.

Everybody who played in it, both famous actors like Nina and Marvin, and new actresses like Zella, all received a great reputation.

The producer and the platform decided to hold a press conference. Of course, this fully proves that the show was popular. After all, only popular shows held a press conference.

Nina didn't want to go back to Riverside City. "Can I skip it?"

Sherlyn didn't understand. "You are the leading actress. NO."

And there must be many sponsors watching the conference. Maybe you'll get some endorsements.

Don't you like money? Here is your chance. Are you sure you want to skip it?"

"But..." Nina wanted to say that she indeed loved money and wouldn't let any chances slip away. But she didn't want to face Cameron.

She had hidden here to avoid him.

But if she came back, she'll have to face him.

What if he comes over to pester her?

She couldn't sleep with him every time. That wasn't appropriate. And what would they look like?

Sherlyn warned her, "You have to be present, to show your professionalism and your respect to 'Princess Leilania'." "Alright, okay." Nina knew what she had to do when she came down.

She must not offend anyone if she wanted her career to go on.

Besides, the show was Emelia's first work. It was a milestone. Even for Emelia, Nina had to show up.

At the same time, Manny was calling Cameron.

They got in touch a while back when Olivia accused Emelia of copying.

Cameron's call was a great surprise for Manny back then. Manny didn't expect that the top student in the class would actually call him.

Cameron wanted Manny to prove that every word Emelia put on paper was real and Manny did as asked. He wouldn't have done it even without Cameron's request.

Manny had no idea where Cameron got his number from. But he was sure that Cameron did it for Nina. He didn't want Olivia to defile what happened to him.

Or he was probably helping Emelia. After all, if Emelia was in trouble, Nina wouldn't be happy either.

Manny said in the call, "Nina called me and asked me about you. What should I tell her?" Manny wasn't a good student in school. But he was pretty sensible when it comes to feeling.

He had sensed something from his last call with Cameron. He knew that there was something between them. So, he decided to call Cameron.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 537 Going back to Riverside City

"For real?" Cameron laughed. He immediately understood what Nina wanted. She must have doubted him after he asked for money.

So, he told Manny, "Tell her then that I had a fight with my parents after I returned. So, I couldn't even get into the search institute or university. I'm now homeless."

"What?" Manny was kind of stunned. "This is not real, right? Are you seriously without a job?"

Cameron was a genius in Manny's eyes. He thought that Cameron must be super successful now.

Cameron thought for a second, "I indeed rejected the offers of the research institute and university"

He had two companies under his name now, but he didn't want to make them public yet, in case it disturbs his later plans.

And he wasn't interested in those jobs. So, it was pretty true.

Manny paused, then said earnestly, "I see. Look, bro. I'm no one important, but I have a small company now. If you don't mind, you can come here..."

"Thank you. But I'm fine now." Cameron stopped him. Just tell her what I said. "

"Alright." Manny signed after hanging up the call. So even top students could be doing poorly. Cameron was a legend. He was always the top student. And he was handsome, rich. Every girl in school adored him.

Now he was unemployed. Thinking of this, Manny was pleased with what he had now.

Manny was now having a video company. He can be regarded as a successful person somehow.

But soon he realized that it was Cameron rejected the offers. In other words, if he entered the research institute or university, he would still be above average.

Manny shrugged. Top students were just different from ordinary people.

Cameron saw that Douglas liked Nina's post and also saw Nina's statement. He didn't care about Douglas but Nina's statement made him upset.

Currently single? Then what about that night?

Viggo called at this time. Cameron picked it up and heard Viggo say, "Nina is sure to show up at the press conference of Princess Leilania'.

"So she would return from the cast?" Cameron knew that Nina was on the crew for a military drama and wouldn't come back in a while. He had thought about going to visit her. It was perfect that she had to come back for the conference.

"Okay." Viggo said honestly, "But she would stay for only one or two days. They wouldn't give her too many days of leave.

But 'Princess Leilania' is popular now. She would leave the crew again for endorsements or advertisements sooner or later.” Viggo knew what he was thinking about. So, he said this to reassure Cameron.

“Thank you.” Cameron said.

“I wish you good luck,” said Viggo.

After the call, Cameron lay down on the bed, thinking. At this time, his father knocked on the door.

Cameron got up and put everything in the drawer. Then opened the door.

Randall didn't intend to get in. He stood there with his hands behind his back, glared at Cameron, and said, “Your mother hasn't been in a good health in the past few years. Don't make her angry.”

Cameron frowned slightly, asking, “What's wrong with her health?”

He had never heard anything about Colleen's health condition. Otherwise, he would have come back once in a while. But Colleen didn't look sick in his eyes.

Randall grunted, “It's normal for old people to feel sick. There is nothing severe. But she can't be angry all the time.” Cameron understood now, his father was just not happy with what he had done after returned.

He questioned even more about Colleen 's health condition. He squinted at his father, which made Randall guilty. He stared back. “Why are you looking at me like that? Is that how a son should look at his father?”

Randall was kind of angry at Cameron's interrogating eyes.

It looked scary. It didn't belong to someone intellectual.

“I'm sorry. I'm not a good son.” Cameron said, withdrawing his stare.

Cameron's sudden change of attitude surprised Randall and pleased him. He was about to criticize Cameron more. Cameron said seriously, “I'm free recently. I'll take my mom to the hospital and have a body check. We have to find out what the problem is so the doctor could help. ”

Randall was speechless.
What a cunning boy!

Randall had lied about Colleen's health so as to teach Cameron a lesson. Colleen was perfectly fine. She slept well and ate well every day. And she did Yoga to keep fit. She was totally okay.

Randall didn't know what to say. Cameron took out his phone, pretending to call. "I have a friend working at the hospital. I'll ask him to arrange that."

Randall felt his chest hurt. Colleen was fine. But she wouldn't be fine after she found out about this.

So, he stopped Cameron grumpily, said kind of guiltily, "It's later. Get some sleep."

Then he left.

Cameron smiled proudly at Randall's angry back.

Randall he had spent his life in the academic field. He was old, but he was not as thoughtful as Cameron, who was both a scholar and a businessman.

Colleen looked everything but sick.

Even if she was unhappy, it only started after Cameron returned.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 538 Devoted

Going back to his room, the more Randall thought about it, the angrier he got. He covered himself with a blanket.

After finishing her skincare, Colleen asked, "What's wrong?"

Randall felt ashamed of being defeated by his son.

He came out from the blanket and said, "We should leave him alone, even if he wants to be with Nina."

He suspected that Cameron had acted weirdly just to prepare for being with Nina. However, he had no evidence, because Cameron had never mentioned Nina yet.

Colleen felt kind of nervous hearing the name Nina. "Did he tell you that he was going to be together with her?"

Colleen wanted to forget about the name. However, Nina was so popular over the years. Colleen just couldn't avoid her.

When she bought cosmetics, she found Nina endorsed her favorite brands.

When she bought jewelry, it was Nina's endorsement again.

When she watched TV, Nina was everywhere.

The same was true with movies.

Even when she went on shopping. Nina's face was all over the place. Nina was dazzlingly beautiful. Those big posters of her smile made Colleen dizzy.

Even after years, she still remembered Nina clearly.

She liked 'Princess Leilania' very much. She watched all the episodes although she was against Nina.

Yet she had to admit, Nina's role was charming.

Every time she watched an episode, she would persuade herself by saying that she liked the role Nina played, not Nina. And it was all the writer's credits.

Facing Colleen's intense questioning, Randall shook his head and said, "He didn't say anything about staying with Nina." Colleen was puzzled, "Then why did you suddenly say that?"

Randall opened his mouth. But then he felt that his son's mind was beyond words. So, he said, "Just let him be."

He meant to say that Cameron wouldn't listen to them anyway. But he didn't want Colleen to be angry, although it was the fact.

Colleen snorted, "Do you think I want to care about his business? I'm just doing it for his own good."

Colleen said seriously, "Think about it. How can he live a peaceful life with such a woman?"

"Nina is filming outside all day. She is close with different actors each day. How could our son accept that?"

Randall replied, "You are talking as if all the people whose partner is actor are living a miserable life."

Colleen was speechless.

When she came to her senses, she slapped him angrily, "What do you mean? Are you standing with him?"

"I'm not. I was just..." Randall didn't finish his sentence.

He meant to say that it was just because he could do nothing about it.

"Just what?" Colleen asked.

Randall had to hug her and coaxed her, "I just don't want you to argue with him and get angry."

Randall's words made Colleen feel better. Colleen leaned against him and sighed, "I don't know what he's thinking all day. I'll ask my brother to talk to him at dinner tomorrow."

Thinking of his brother-in-law, Randall nodded, "Well, it's time for his uncle to educate him."

The couple pinned all their hopes on Joshua, but they didn't know that Cameron had the same idea. In his eyes, Joshua could be a breakthrough.

The next morning, Cameron received the money from Nina. It went with a text saying, "take the money and do never show up in front of me again."

Cameron naturally didn't reply. He always ignored messages that he didn't like. Nina took Cameron's silence as an agreement. So, she went to focus on work.

Colleen booked a large box in the hotel. Cameron was the last one to arrive. As soon as he entered the door, he saw his mother sitting next to his uncle Joshua, complaining.

Cameron immediately knew that his mother must be complaining to Joshua and asking Joshua to have a word with him.

Cameron walked in quietly and greeted everyone.

During the dinner, while Joshua was out smoking, Cameron followed him out.

As expected, Joshua was waiting for him in the corridor. He was not out for smoking.

Joshua glanced at his handsome nephew, squinted, and asked, "Tell me, boy, what are you going to do?" What Cameron did after returning home had long been spread among the family.

Cameron, of course, was not an aggressive person. He started cautiously. He looked at Joshua's sharp eyes and said, "Uncle, if I say ... I've been devoted, what would do you think?"

He had been devoted to the girl he liked.

Joshua got it immediately.

He glanced at Cameron, then looked ahead and said, "It is a good thing to be devoted. However, you're too young. How many people have you met? How many times have you fallen in love? How many changes have you gone through?"

"You are not devoted. You don't want to let go of something you have never had."

Cameron retorted, "I've never been a naive person, and I'll never have those special feelings for things I don't get." Besides, it was not something he had never had.

He once had that girl. He was once madly in love with her.

They were nearly straight to the point. So Cameron said simply, "And I don't think it's necessary to fall in love for a few times more. For me, falling in love once was enough."

Joshua raised his eyebrows. "So, you've made all this fuss just to be with Nina?"

Cameron turned his head away. "You guys all think that her family doesn't match with mine. So I made myself homeless to match with her."

She is now the most famous actress. And I am nobody. I am the one not good enough for her." Cameron's words were somewhat resentful.

He always thought that his parents were well educated and his family was reasonable. That was why he was so committed at the beginning. He thought he would be blessed by the whole family.

However, his family was deeply biased. They insisted that Nina was not good enough for him. They ruined their relationship.

He had the reason to be resentful.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 539 I Belong with Nina Now

Though Joshua had long been calm, he was stunned by his nephew's discontent.

Several years ago, Colleen gave Nina Sanchez a million-dollar check and asked her to leave. But Cameron Dauster did not seem very sad then. He packed his stuff and left the country.

It was believed by all that Cameron and Nina's relationship was not serious. Cameron was bound to forget about her after dabbling in the sensual world.

As for Nina, how could she still stay single in the corrupted entertainment circle?

The teenage relationship will be enshrined by both of them as a piece of beautiful but dusty memory. They were possibly not able to recognize the person before them when they bumped into each other years later.

But now his outstanding nephew, Cameron, dared to throw a tantrum and say that he still loved her. He even shed all his fortune just to match with her.

Joshua took a deep breath. Now he came to understand why his sister was so vexed lately.

“Alright, alright,” Joshua clenched his teeth.

“You are still too young to say so. You will find a better one after dating more people.”

“For instance, I think Michelle Byrd, the date that your parents find you, is not bad.”

Joshua planned to leave after leaving the words.

His sister kept on nagging him to bring Cameron and Michelle together. Since Cameron didn't seem to be sold on it, Joshua was now thinking about forcing him to meet her.

Cameron stopped him and said seriously, “I don't think it's appropriate, uncle.” Joshua sneered, “why? how can you know she is not the one if you don't go to meet her?”

“I don't mean that I am not willing to meet other girls,” said Cameron. “I just think it's not appropriate since now I belong with Nina.”

“What do you mean you belong with Nina?” Joshua was so confused.

The way Cameron put it really made him feel uncomfortable. How could a man say that he belonged with another woman?

Cameron took out his phone and showed Joshua the 1 million transferred from Nina.

“She kept me as a secret lover, so how can I betray her?”

“What?!” Joshua failed to restrain himself from calling out.

“Well, it is what it is,” Cameron said slowly, with his phone in hand, “She gave me 1 million so I belong with her now.” Cameron could tell lies without turning a hair.

Nina paid him 1 million to not ever meet again. He lied to Joshua that she paid money to keep him a lover.

Joshua was irritated. Cameron was so rebellious that he started to feel offended and humiliated.

How could a man from Dauster and Brennan family sponge off a woman?

What's more, he even managed to remain calm and poised before him.

Joshua was on his last nerve. He was so pissed off that he didn't even know what to say. He yelled at Cameron, "You are a postdoc in biology! You think you are only worth a million?"

Joshua thought Cameron would feel shamed, but he replied in an injured tone, "My mom used to pay her 1 million and asked her to leave me. This is exactly how much she thinks I am worth."

Joshua nearly choked at his words. Heart-stricken and extremely furious, he even staggered a little.

Cameron was waiting to bite back. The blame should lie with his mom, for she undervalued her son!

Leaning against the wall, Joshua heavily panted. He stared at Cameron with exasperation.

How could his sister and brother-in-law who behaved themselves all their lives give birth to such a maniac?

"Uncle, are you still alright?" Cameron asked and pretended to be caring.

Joshua shook his hands off, "Get out!"

As a prestigious figure in the academic world, he had long been composed. But today he was almost driven crazy by Cameron.

It took him a while to simmer down. Joshua looked into Cameron's eyes and asked, "So you've made up your mind to be with that actress?"

"I just want to follow my heart. By far she's the only one that i want to spend my life with." Cameron was smart enough to know that at this point there was no need to make things worse, so he toned down a little bit.

What was truly going on in his mind was that he wanted no one but Nina.

But he knew if he blurted that out, Joshua would flip lid or even kick his ass. So Cameron only confessed his desire to spend rest of his life with Nina.

Joshua sneered and walked away.
It was totally beyond his control.

Though his sister told him to lecture Cameron, it was already beyond his capability.

Before receiving the call from his sister today, Joshua thought Cameron would care for his feelings and listen to what he said.

Nothing was farther from the truth.

He could only patronize the young Cameron.

Now Cameron would drive him crazy.

Cameron didn't stop Joshua. He stood still and smirked, with his hands in pocket.

Since his uncle had already flinched, his parents would no longer poke their nose.

Colleen stared at Joshua after he entered the box. Joshua didn't dare to say that Cameron took Nina's money in front of Cameron's grandparents. He was afraid they would be so pissed off.

Joshua forced a smile and exchanged a look with his sister. He tried to hint that they would talk about it later.

Colleen knew things didn't go well upon seeing the expression on Joshua's face.

If things went well, he would not look like that.

Obviously, Joshua was also kayoed.

Colleen was bummed out.

Today she called Michelle, telling her that now she was not able to arrange a date for her and Cameron. She thought Michelle would be upset. But it turned out that she was not glum at all. Michelle even reassured her on the phone. Now Colleen felt so sorry for her.

Michelle was smart, good-natured and from a distinguished family. Why Cameron didn't fall for her? Did Nina have any strength besides that pretty face?

She had asked around. Nina's parents were philistine, selfish and greedy. Colleen was hysterical even at the thought of getting along with them.

They shared nothing in common.

She had known Michelle's parents for years who were both professors in university. They would only become closer if Cameron and Michelle got married.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 540 He Was Not Rational

After the dinner ended, Colleen asked Joshua, "Did you talk to Cameron? What did he say?"

Joshua decided to cover up the thing that Cameron took 1 million from Nina in order not to drive his sister crazy. "Cameron is about 30 years old. He can mind his own business. I think you'd better leave him alone," he said.

"What?" Colleen was shocked, "You told me to leave him alone?" She thought Joshua was able to persuade Cameron to change his mind.

Joshua didn't answer her, but talked to Randall who was standing beside them. "The weather is pleasant lately, I think you two should take a walk, even a trip."

Randall nodded, "I think so."

Randall understood what Joshua meant in split second. Joshua must have suffered a setback. Joshua just didn't want to ruffle her feathers by unfolding the whole story.

"Joshua, wait," Colleen still wanted to say something, but Joshua had already walked away.

She stared angrily at Joshua's back and gave Randall a sullen glare. Then she slowly walked out of the restaurant with a hand in her chest.

As for Cameron, he slowly walked with his grandparents. Cameron knew no one could accuse him of anything in front of his grandparents.

Cameron acted like as if nothing happened. He asked, "Grandma, what drama are you watching lately?"

His grandma was a huge fan of TV stars and dramas. She loved watching all kinds of TV series since young. Now she had plenty of time on watching TV.

Plus, she was open-minded about all kinds of dramas.

Grandma couldn't help laughing when it comes to TV dramas, "I binge watched a lot." "For instance, 'Princess Leilania' is very engaging," she then ate her words, "no, no, it's fantastic!"

"The development of the plot is so thrilling and convincing. And the acting is not bad. Especially the leading actress, I love the role she plays."

Cameron smiled at grandma's praise for Nina. But he still didn't say a word, for he didn't know if grandma was sounding him out or simply paying compliments.

After all, his grandparents knew about the thing between him and Nina.

Even though they didn't say anything about it, it didn't mean that they were fond of her. Cameron thought the right move was to wait and see.

Without his reply, grandma changed the topic, "well, I heard that there is gonna be a fan meeting in a few days. I really want to be there."

Cameron was shocked. "Grandma, it isn't appropriate. The place will be jammed with people pushing and shoving."

By the way, isn't his grandma a little bit old to be starstruck?

Grandma gave a sniff, "You are not afraid that I might be pushed or shoved. You must be thinking that I am too old for this." Grandma asked her husband before Cameron could reply. "There is no such rule saying that an old lady can't be a fan, right?" His grandpa asserted, "Of course no. You can go to see whoever you like."

Cameron lost his words.

Grandpa really loved to spoil his wife. He had been doing it for decades.

This was why grandma could stay young and go after TV stars.

Having thrown a glance at Cameron, grandma said as if inadvertently, "Well, you once dated that leading actress, right? Can you contact her and let me get in the backstage?

Then I don't need to squeeze myself through the teens."

"Ahem..." Cameron was so stunned that he even started to cough.

How could grandma suddenly come out with the fact that Nina and he once dated? Without any cushion? "What? Are you still in touch?" grandma asked. Cameron didn't know how to respond.

Grandma suddenly realized, "Well, you were still young then and had no ideas about true love. It had been eight or nine years now. Maybe you two don't even remember each other."

"I'm sorry Cameron. It's my fault. I've gone too far." Grandma sincerely apologized.

Cameron also got it together. "I know the director of this drama. If you really want to go to the fan meeting, I can contact him." "Really?" grandma was excited, "yes Cameron, please do grandma a favor."

She was afraid that Cameron thought she had some ulterior motive. "I also love the leading actor, the female costar, the director Viggo Johansen, and the screenwriter who was recently trending on twitter."

"She was so talented. How can she write such a beautiful story? I want to take a photo with her." Grandma was really familiar with the creator of "Princess Leilania".

"OK, I'll see to it," Cameron said.

Grandma then asked him another tricky question. "By the way, how do you know the director? How can you know someone in the entertainment circle since you've been abroad in recent years?"

The way grandma asked the last question suggested that she got a fix on some gossip.
Even grandpa who had remain silent shot a stare at him.

Cameron reacted quickly and offered a standard answer, "I don't see why I can't be a fan. I've been Viggo's fan since high school. I even went to his concerts for several times.

Grandma was dubious. "You? You are too rational."

Grandpa said before Cameron could respond, "I don't think he is rational. He is pretty crazy."

Cameron looked at grandpa.

He could feel that grandpa was suggesting something. And Grandpa had him there.

Maybe his obsession with Nina was the proof for his craziness.

Being stared at, grandpa turned impatient and waved his hands. "What are you looking at? Shouldn't you send us home?" Cameron looked away and drove grandparents home. Before he left, grandma had him promised to take her to the fan meeting.

Cameron said yes, because he knew he could see Nina again.
