

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 541 Go to Your Place

Fans knew Nina would come back to Riverside city today. So a lot of fans were waiting for her at the airport terminal.

Nina was with Sylvie, and she chatted with the fans while walking. Nina was always casual and willing to talk to her fans as long as she was not in a rush.

It was the end of April. Though it was still a bit cold, as an actress, she had already put on shorts to show her legs. But she wore a jacket to keep warm.

Nina heard someone screaming. Sylvie, the fans and she all thought it was another big star at the airport. But when Nina looked up, she saw Cameron walking through the door.

He was engaging and dashing. Women at the terminal all cried out loud. He was even more popular than Nina herself.

Nina stopped, pulling her hat down. She gave Sylvie a nudge. "Wait me a sec. I need to use the bathroom," she said.

Nina's gut feeling was that Cameron was coming for her. So she fled to the toilet.

There were so many people at the airport and she was surrounded by a bunch of fans. If Cameron did something to her, she would instantly be on the trending news.

Before Sylvie could respond, Nina popped off to the ladies' room on the right.

She took out her phone in panic, unblocked Cameron's number and phoned him.

Since last time Nina transferred 1 million to Cameron, she blocked him in case that they contacted again.

He picked up very quickly. Nina gnashed her teeth and kept her voice low, "What do you want?"

She hoped that Cameron could tell her she was overthinking. He didn't come for her but to pick up someone else.

To her disappointment, in a lukewarm tone, Cameron said, "You finally release me out of the black list."

He was complaining, which could prove indirectly that he came for her. Nina was so pissed, "Haven't you seen the fans outside? Do you want me to be on the headlines again?"

Not to be undone, Cameron retorted, "You make me feel like I've done something wrong. What can I do since I can't contact you?"

He was the unreasonable one. How could he still be so justified? Nina gritted her teeth. "I already gave you the money! I thought we both agreed that we would never meet again!" she growled.

Cameron said slowly, "That's what you thought. My proposal is that you buy my special service with 1 million."

Nina walked back and forth in the bathroom indignantly. After composing herself, she yelled, "Cameron, your days abroad not only turned you into a gigolo, but also a jerk!"

Cameron smirked. "You want me to go to the ladies' room or you walk out yourself?"

He added before Nina could respond, "Let's talk. Take my car."

Nina was on the edge of hysteria, "Are you mad? You want me get into your car in front of my fans?" Cameron asked back, "Then what do you want?"

"You...you tell me when and where to meet. Let's talk face to face." Nina proposed.

"As a big star, you must be under spotlight every minute. Aren't you afraid that people will take picture of us?" Cameron thought for a while and said, "Well, let's meet at your place. I'll meet you there later."

She was not happy with where things were heading. But Cameron hung up the phone before she could say anything.

Nina almost freaked out after spending so much time in the toilet. She didn't care about where they were to meet, she just wanted to get out.

Sylvie was waiting for Nina at the door. The minute Nina walked out, she said excitedly, "What took you so long? That eye candy has already left. It's pity you didn't see him. Don't you always say you love cute guys?"

Sylvie became Nina's assistant after Nina went popular. Though Sylvie more or less knew that Nina had a crush on someone, she had no idea who that person was.

Sylvie had never met Cameron, so she didn't know that cute guy was Cameron. Nina rolled her eyes. Yes, she loved cute guys, but not him. But having heard that Cameron had left, Nina breathed a sigh of relief.

Still mesmerized by Cameron, Sylvie mumbled, "That guy was so handsome. I haven't met such a cute guy in ages. I think there's a word perfect for him, but I can't quite remember it."

Sylvie pondered for a while and finally came up with the words. "Right! He's an elegant rascal! It's perfect for him!" Nina smirked. She had to admit that the words Sylvie brought forward was suitable. She couldn't agree more after being threatened by him on the phone.

Such an elegant rascal!

He looked polished and attractive on the outside, but was savage on the inside.

Nina cursed Cameron silently in her mind. She just realized she was duped by him. He said he would go to her place! There would be only her and Cameron in the room! What if something happened?

That night was already a fault. What should she do this time?

Plus, given that he was at her place, how could she not recall the thing happened that day?

She still blushed when thinking of what they've done on the sofa, in the upstairs bedroom and the bathroom.

He was up to no good!

Sylvie didn't know why Nina's face was turning red. She asked, "Nina, are you still alright? Why is your face so red?" Nina coughed and pulled down her hat, "I'm OK."

Cameron was such a jinx. Thought it's still daytime, her mind was occupied with sex and stuff.

Sylvie said worriedly, "Are you having a temperature? Do tell me if you feel sick."

"I'm really fine, maybe it's because it's hot." Nina found an excuse to brush off Sylvie's nervousness.

Sylvie looked at Nina's white legs, then looked at her long trousers. She didn't feel hot.

Superstars are probably different from average people.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 542 Aren't You Cold

But Sylvie still spilled the tea with Nina while walking. "Well, when you went to the bathroom, I chatted with your fans. And they told me that guy was photographed several days ago. Do you know what he did?"

"He gave each paparazzo a business card of his lawyer and warned them that if they posted his photo they would be sued," Sylvie screamed like a teenage girl, "He was so cool! Those paparazzi and photo scalpers should be punished!"

Sylvie was quite confused why Nina still remained calm after hearing the story. It seemed that she was not surprised. Sylvie asked, "Nina, aren't you surprised? Don't you think he's cool and decisive?"

Nina grinned. She was not surprised at all. That was exactly what Cameron would do.

When she first knew Cameron, she thought he looked suave and genial. So she helped him out when Manny Bowers tried to pick a fight. She was worried that Cameron might be bullied by him.

As she knew more about him, she realized that he was no pushover. He would give tit for tat if someone provoked him.

Giving out his lawyer's business cards to warn the paparazzi? It's just typical of him. They walked out of the airport terminal and got in to the car that had been waiting for them. The car drove away.

Sylvie said, "Sherlyn said the clothes you are gonna wear at the fan meeting has just arrived. They sent it to her because you were filming then. Do you want to go back home first or to try it on?"

Nina thought of what Cameron just said. They were gonna meet at her place. She touched her forehead and said, "I want to go home to take a shower first."

"OK." Sylvie answered and replied to Sherlyn.

Sylvie added, "Sherlyn told you to hurry up. She said she's busy lately. She needs to monitor the studio's decoration work after you try on the clothes."

Nina grinned. "OK."

After they decided the location of studio, Nina went to filming. Sherlyn was responsible for everything. She must have been very busy.

The driver suddenly said, "The car behind is following us. Could it be some fans stalking us?"

"No way." Sylvie turned alert and looked through the rear window.

Nina frowned and looked at the car behind. She faintly saw Cameron's figure. Nina turned to the driver. "It's OK. Just ignore it," she said.

It seemed that Cameron planned to follow her car to her place. Was he afraid that she might go back at her words?

Nina was troubled. To be honest, for a split second, she thought of the possibility of slipping away. Given the situation right now, if she really escaped, Cameron would block her way.

Sylvie asked nervously, "Seriously? Sir, you should watch out, what if they do something crazy."

They used to be stalked by crazy fans. So Sylvie developed the reflex of associating these people with danger.

"Done." The driver was more engrossed in driving.

Nina didn't say anything. She didn't plan to introduce Cameron to Sylvie. She hadn't told Sherlyn that Cameron was back yet.

She had already made up her mind to give up this relationship. She didn't want to have further contacts with Cameron. There was no need to fuel their anxiety.

Especially Sherlyn. She never encouraged Nina to wait for Cameron. Or in her words, Nina could date anyone she wanted, what was the point of waiting for someone that she couldn't meet?

Sherlyn would jump all over her once she found out that Nina still entangled with Cameron.

The car finally stopped at Nina's place. Sylvie wanted to wait for her inside the house. Thus, they could go to Sherlyn's together after Nina took a shower.

Nina stopped her, "You don't need to be with me. I can drive there myself. You should go to take a rest."

"I'm ok. I'm not tired." Then Sylvie said to the driver, "Sir, can you wait for us for a while?"

Nina hastily pushed her back into the car, "You two go to have a rest. I don't know how long it will take me."

Sylvie thought she was acting weird. But given that Nina was rather determined, she didn't persist. "OK then, I'll meet you at Sherlyn's in a while."

"Fine." Nina then went home with her suitcase.

Of course, she didn't go to take a shower, nor dress up. Having poured herself a cup of water, she waited for Cameron in front of the floor to ceiling window in the living room.

Ten minutes later, the doorbell rang.
Nina rolled her eyes and went to get the door.

The moment Cameron entered, he looked at Nina's long and white legs. He frowned and asked, "Aren't you cold?"

He had seen many of her street snaps showing legs and ankles. He really wanted to cover her up.

When he was abroad, the only thing he could do is to secretly help with her career. He couldn't care for her health. Since now he was back, he would keep an eye on her health.

She had already put on shorts in late spring. Wasn't she afraid that she would have joint pain when she was old?

Nina didn't expect that the first thing Cameron did when he got in was to boss around and judge her shorts. She threw him an angry glance and went indoors.

It reminded her of their school days. Cameron always told her to tie her hair up, which pissed her off every time.

She loved having her hair hanging loose over the shoulders. She thought it was cute to let her hair down and put on a white dress. Students dubbed her the girl of their dreams.

But she didn't know what was wrong with Cameron. He could take out a hairband anytime and forced her to bound up.

If she refused, then he would give her the silent treatment.

She was so crazy over him then. Once she saw he was not happy, she would tie up the hair. But now...she wouldn't care for him.

Nina found herself whimsical sometimes. She had been longing for him for such a long period of time. But now she gave up after he went back.

Nina collapsed into the sofa. She asked Cameron who was following behind, "What do you want to talk about?"

Because Nina had been cutting him dead, Cameron was also in a sulk. He asked her back, "Don't you know what I want to talk about?"

He couldn't get through to her number lately. Obviously, he was blocked again.

He could do nothing but to stop her at the airport. If he didn't go there, then presumably he still couldn't have a talk with her now.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 543 You Can Call Back Later

Nina had been mad and Cameron throwing the question to her with an aloof attitude made her even angrier, so she retorted, "I have no idea at all. How can I know what you are thinking? I can't read your mind."

Cameron commented, "You're lying."

Nina answered him with a sneer. How ridiculous he was! He had abandoned her years ago and disappeared without a word. But once he came back, he hoped to resume the intimacy with her. Did he ever care for her feelings? Why should she follow his will?

Pressing his lips, Cameron stood before the sofa and dropped his eyes to look at Nina who was sitting on it. She had a bob cut, probably for the filming, and she pulled back the hair into a ponytail for a neat hairstyle. Though not sexy and enchanting as she was in long hair, she looked cuter and more lively. Her fair long legs easily arouse the desire in Cameron, so he walked towards her and sat by her side.

Still mad, Nina tried to move away from him. But Cameron grabbed her back and pressed her against the sofa, imprisoning her in his arms.

Nina thought to herself helplessly, "Nina, do you remember last time you easily kicked away the stranger who tried to splash unknown liquid on Emelia? How can you become such a sweet little girl when you are with Cameron? Can't you fight back?"

To prove she was a strong woman, Nina struggled fiercely, but to her surprise, she couldn't break away from Cameron, and her wrists which were held by his hands were so limp that she couldn't gather any strength.

How could that be? Was Cameron a magician? Once he touched her, she would lose all her power to fight back? He was the buster to her.

Despite all her effort, Cameron only pressed himself closer to her, and that reminded Nina of what happened that night when both of them seemed to be enchanted, and it started when Cameron imprisoned her in his arms just like what they were doing now.

"Cameron, stop..." The moment when Nina tried to say something, Cameron pressed his lips on hers, robbing her of her breath and all the words she wanted to say.

When Sherlyn's phone call came in, Nina was on the bed and Cameron was mounting on her, his sweat dripping on her delicate collarbones. Hearing the call, Nina glanced at the screen and it was quite a shock when she saw it was from Sherlyn. She was supposed to go to Sherlyn's place to try on the gown but she forgot that completely and began making love with Cameron. It must be Sherlyn calling to remind her.

Pushing Cameron away, Nina tried to pick up the phone, but Cameron held her hand to stop her.

"You can call back later." His voice was harsh from restraining his desires, then he lowered his head to kiss her hard. How could she stop him halfway when they were making love? Didn't she know he was trying his best to contain his desire?

As for Sherlyn, she was extremely anxious since she couldn't get through to Nina. Out of agitation, Sherlyn complained to Sylvie, "What happened to Nina? Why doesn't she pick up the phone?"

Sylvie was also surprised to find Nina hadn't arrived yet, because after parting with Nina, Sylvie had first gone home to unpack her luggage, have a bath, and put on make-up before she came to Sherlyn's house. How could Nina be later than her?

Sherlyn had been calling Nina several times for twenty minutes, but Nina didn't answer. Sylvie also had no idea of what Nina was doing.

Finally, Sylvie said worriedly, "Shall I go to Nina's place to check on her? Maybe she is so tired from the filming that she is sleeping now."

Sherlyn frowned and said, "Does she feel uncomfortable when she was leaving the airport?" Sylvie thought for a moment and answered, "Well, I remember in the airport Nina's face was very red after she went to the restroom. Is that a sign of fever?"

Sherlyn shook her head and said, "No, I don't think Nina is that type of person who will continue working with sickness. If she was ill, she would complain to me and ask me to lower the workloads for her."

Sylvie nodded her head. "Yeah, I think you're right."

Working with Nina for many years, Sherlyn and Sylvie knew Nina well. Though Nina wasn't weak and delicate, she wouldn't force herself to work when she was ill.

"How strange! I have never failed to reach for Nina for all these years." Sherlyn mumbled as she prepared to call for Nina one more time. But just at this moment, Nina called back, and Sherlyn picked up the phone hastily, exclaiming, "Hello, superstar, do you know what's the time now? Do you remember your promise to try on new clothes? I have another arrangement later to check on the construction of the studio."

"I am sorry." Nina's voice sounded weak.

"Hey, are you ok? You sound ill." Sherlyn suddenly became worried.

"No, it was...I was...I have been busy." To Sherlyn's great surprise, Nina, who had always been witty, was stuttering.

When Sherlyn was about to say something, she heard a man chuckle through the phone and she was immediately alerted.

“What was the sound, Nina? I thought I heard a man chuckle!”

Grabbing the phone, Nina covered Cameron’s mouth with all her strength to prevent him from making any voices. When she lied to Sherlyn that she had been busy, Cameron couldn’t help but laugh, which made Nina both annoyed and blushed, since what she was busy with was making love with him.

Warning Cameron again through eye contact, Nina explained hastily, “What are you talking about? What man? You must’ve misheard it.”

Nina couldn’t tell Sherlyn about Cameron because once Sherlyn knew, she would be as mad as hell. Besides, she was not sure what kind of relationship Cameron and she were in, so she hoped she could tell Sherlyn about him only after she figured these questions out.

While Sherlyn still insisted, “No, I am completely sure that was the voice of a man. I am not deaf!” Then, Sherlyn began to criticize Nina, “Nina, I warn you. This is not a good time for romantic relationships, and if any rumor is exposed, your career is done.”

“Princess Leilania” became a blockbuster, and as the main actress, Nina also gained enormous popularity. If rival companies spotted any rumor about her at this moment, she would be in great trouble unless her love story was filled with twists and turns that moved all people to tears.

The topic made Nina stressed out, so she tried to distract Sherlyn and said, “How about the gown? Strapless or backless?”

Nina asked this because there was no need to try on gowns revealing her collarbones or her legs. When Cameron was making out with her, he left numerous marks on her collarbones and even on her legs deliberately.

He even left marks on her legs. Was this man insane?

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 544 She Abandoned Him This Time

“How about the gown?” Sherlyn said sulkily, “Of course it would be designed to show off your good figure. Your image is supposed to be enchanting and sexy.” When Sherlyn met Nina for the first time, she was greatly impressed by Nina. With both a pretty face and a wonderful figure, Nina seemed a perfect actress to her, and she believed Nina was born to be a superstar.

As for Nina, she had always been willing to show off her beauty and her good shape when walking the red carpet or attending other activities. In fact, the reason why Nina became famous at the very start was that she gained popularity bit by bit with her outstanding appearance. It never occurred to Sherlyn that one day Nina would be worried about her outfits.

Nina explained with hesitation, “Well...I...has an allergy, and my skin doesn't look good these days. Could you contact the brand investor to change another type of gown for me?”

Sherlyn was shocked. “What are you talking about? Contact the brand to change the gown for you? Tomorrow will be the meetup!”

Standing beside Sherlyn, Sylvie asked through the phone puzzledly, “Nina, are you allergic? But your skin was completely fine a few days ago.” As Nina's assistant, Sylvie spent all the time with Nina during the filming. They had meals together and slept together, but Sylvie never noticed anything wrong with Nina's skin. To be honest, Nina's skin was in such a good condition that Sylvie nearly envied it. Even when they were filming in mountains, a relatively bad condition, Nina's skin was still white and smooth while Sylvie got several pimples. So, Sylvie could not believe it when Nina said her skin was allergic.

Sherlyn agreed with Sylvie and said, “Yeah, Sylvie is right. We all know your skin is always good and I don't remember you having an allergy to anything. How come you're having allergies right now?”

Nina tried to justify herself. “I think it was due to the filming in the mountains. It was so moist there, and my endocrine went disordered. Now I get several pimples on my back.”

After a while, Nina added, “Besides, I have my hair cut short, so I think it would be better to wear trousers instead of a gown.” Sherlyn was rendered speechless since she found she had to agree with Nina. She nearly forgot Nina had her hair cut short for the filming. Considering the hairstyle had to match with the clothes, Sherlyn had to compromise and said, “Well, you are right. A gown may not match your short hair. I will contact the brand to see if it can deliver a set of trousers for you now.”

But still vexed, Sherlyn didn’t forget to warn Nina about the time, “You’d better hurry up and come here right now. When the clothes arrive, you can try on them at once. We need some time to adjust if the clothes are not suitable.”

Nina retorted humorously, “Oh, come on, Sherlyn, don’t be so stressed out. If the clothes are not suitable, I can wear my own clothes. You have to admit I have quite a taste in fashion.”

Sherlyn shouted, “No way, Nina. You have to wear the clothes of the brand! It is our investor!” Nina had represented the brand and wearing its clothes when attending public activities was her duty and it also served as an advertisement for the brand.

“Fine. I will be right there in a moment.” Nina couldn’t tolerate the preaching from Sherlyn, so she obeyed Sherlyn immediately.

While Sherlyn, satisfied with Nina’s answer, hung up the phone and turned to contact the brand.

When Nina was talking to Sherlyn, Cameron just stared at her lazily with a cold and angry sneer on his face. She would rather lie to her agent and assistant than tell them she was with him. Also, when they had just finished, she broke away from his embrace without any hesitation, ignoring his feelings completely.

Once Sherlyn hung up the phone, Nina was about to get down from the bed, not even taking a look at Cameron. She knew Cameron was staring at her, but she was not in the mood. She cleared up her mind during the call: It was the second time. When she calmed down after the passion, she would loathe herself for compromising with Cameron again and again.

She was a superstar and there were countless men who wanted to sleep with her, but it turned out that she was slept by her ex- boyfriend and not for one but twice. Thinking of this rendered her both embarrassed and annoyed, and that was the reason why she gave Cameron the cold shoulder.

But when she threw back the covers, Cameron dragged her back, forcing her to fall back on the bed and imprisoning her in his arms.

“You want to run away again?” Forcing her to look at him, Cameron asked.

Nina exclaimed, “Haven’t you heard my agent was mad and urged me to go to her place?”

Cameron grunted, sneering at her intention to distract the topic.

Nina couldn’t stand his attitude, so she glared at him and said angrily, “Cameron, let go of me!”

However, Cameron wouldn’t listen to her. Pressing against her tightly, he questioned her, enunciating every word, “I think you have something to say to me.”

Nina slammed back, “What about you? I think you owe me an explanation.”

Cameron fell into a brief silence and mumbled, “I think I prove myself by what I did. I will not sleep with someone who I didn’t love.” Cameron thought his acts had proved he was still in love with her after all these years.

At first, he was both disappointed and angry because Nina gave up the relationship so easily, so he decided to give her the cold shoulder when he came back from abroad and he wouldn’t forgive her unless she chased after him to coax him.

But at the moment when he arrived at the River City, he found himself couldn’t be mad at her or ignore her. What he wanted was to find her and stay with her happily. So, after having supper with his parents, he came directly to her. Even if he hadn’t quarreled with his parents, he would come to her nonetheless.

All these years when he was abroad, he never came into close relationships with any women but went to her immediately once he came back. It was her who he loved with all his heart and it was only her that he wanted all the time.

Raising her eyebrows, Nina said, "So what you are trying to say is that you sleep with me only because you love me, aren't you?"

But before Cameron could say anything, Nina sneered and continued, "But, sorry, darling, I am casual in a relationship. I sleep with you not because I love you but because I need someone to quench my desires." Then, she pushed Cameron away and went to the bathroom.

Cameron was quite upset. He didn't understand why Nina would treat him so cruelly. Viggo had told him that Nina had been loving him all these years. She would keep a distance from any actors and admirers and would clarify all the rumors in person.

But why after all these years, when he finally came back, she was abandoning him now?

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 545 Give Me the Answer I Want

When Nina locked the bathroom door and was ready to take a shower, Cameron's voice came again. "Nina..." Nina shouted angrily before he could finish. "Shut up!"

She wasn't in the mood to talk to him since she was quite mad at him. What she wanted was not his expression of love but an explanation for why he had disappeared without a word and had never contacted her all these years. If he still loved her, why didn't he contact her? Was he happy to see her suffering from the pain of loss? All these years, if he had shown any sign that he still loved her, she would not be so desperate.

When she knew he was angry with her since she took the check and gave up the relationship so easily under his mother's pressure, she was depressed and regretful, suffering from insomnia and anxiety for a long time. When he finally came back, he didn't say a word about his sudden disappearance. How could she reconcile with him if he didn't want to explain anything? Besides, it was when she finally decided to give up her affection for him that he came back. How could she face him with a clear mind?

But Cameron didn't give up, continuing, "I just want to ask you something. Do you...still love me?" "No, I am over you," Nina answered without hesitation.

Outside the bathroom door, Cameron fell into a brief silence but he insisted, "Open the door, look in my eyes, and say it again."

Nina rolled her eyes. She would never open the door because if she did so, all the advantages would be taken by Cameron. So, instead, she yelled at him, "Cameron, get out of my house before I finish showering or I will break your legs. You hear me?"

Cameron sneered, "Great, I would like to see if you can really break my legs before I make your legs limp from sex." Nina blushed at his words. It never occurred to her that Cameron, a shy and timid boy years ago, would become such a licentious man.

Finding Nina was embarrassed, Cameron felt much better. Then he said, "I can leave now and I will give you enough time to think about our relationship, but you'd better give me the answer I want." Leaving his words, he walked back to the bedroom to put on his clothes before he left.

To be honest, Cameron was quite upset at Nina's attitude. The last time when Nina ran away from him, he told himself it was probably because she was shocked by his sudden return and needed some time to accept him. But this time, several days later, she still gave him the cold shoulder even when she accepted the fact that he was back. She even said she was over him, which hurt him like a sharp knife. All these years, when he was struggling, knowing that she was missing him filled him with the power to move on and overcome difficulties. But what she said today broke his heart into pieces.

When Nina went out of the bathroom, Cameron had already gone. Watching the empty bedroom, Nina felt as if there was something lost in her heart. Wrapping herself in the bathrobe, Nina sat on the bed blankly until her phone rang.

It was Sherlyn on the other side of the phone, and she asked sulkily, "What the hell are you doing, Nina? The brand has already delivered the clothes."

“I will be there in a minute.” Nina recovered from her emotion and said calmly.

“Whatever, take your time.” Sherlyn sighed and hung up the phone.

Nina put on some casual wear and drove to Sherlyn’s place.

The brand has delivered two outfits, one of which is black and the other is white; both had one suit jacket and a pair of trousers.

Nina chose the white one because the tops only exposed her waist rather than her collarbones. So, she could show off her good figure without the worry of revealing the marks on her collarbones. The black suit had only the outerwear, without any innerwear for matching, which was the style she actually adored, but she couldn’t wear it now since Cameron left so many marks on her body.

Nina was about to change her clothes in the dressing room and Sylvie prepared to help her but was rejected by Nina. If Sylvie spotted the marks, Sylvie would undoubtedly go crazy.

Craning her neck, Sherlyn tried to peek into the dressing room, asking, “You’re acting weird today. What happened?”

Pushing Sherlyn’s head out of the room, Nina closed the door and began to change her clothes, saying, “Well, I am weird every day. Haven’t you noticed that already? I am an odd person.”

Since Nina tried to cover the fact with self-mockery, Sherlyn didn’t ask further.

A few moments later, when Nina put on the white suit and went out of the dressing room, Sherlyn and Sylvie were utterly stunned. She looked wonderful with her short hair and suit, both handsome and enchanting.

Sylvie swallowed and exclaimed, “Sherlyn, I think Nina could perfectly handle different styles, no matter handsome or sexy.” Sherlyn yelled excitedly, “I totally agree with you!”

Pulling back her hair, Nina adopted several poses casually, while Sylvie was completely enchanted by her, exclaiming, “My god, Nina, I’m such a big fan of yours! You are so handsome!”

Nina asked, “What do you think? If the clothes are suitable then I will wear them tomorrow. The size is just fine. There is no need for further adjustment.”

Sylvie kept nodding in agreement. "I think they are perfect. Wearing them tomorrow will make you a headline."

Sherlyn also nodded. "Yeah, I agree."

"Okay." Once the clothes were chosen, Nina breathed a sigh of relief. She then turned to Sherlyn, asking, "you said you would go to the studio to supervise the construction process. I have nothing to do right now, so can I go with you?"

Sherlyn had been supposed to take Nina with her, so she agreed at once, and drove to Haytan Tower. Though Nina asked Sherlyn to handle the issues of the studio, Sherlyn thought it would be necessary for Nina to check on some details.

After parking the car, they went to the elevator. When the door was about to close, a young man went in. He was wearing a pair of sunglasses, businesslike but a little unruly.

When he spotted Nina, he pulled off his sunglasses suddenly and asked in disbelief, "Nina Sanchez?" "Yeah..." Nina admitted unwillingly. She thought she was well disguised but people just kept recognizing her.

The man said with both excitement and surprise, "Oh my, I heard about you many times but it is the first time that I meet you in real life. You are such a beautiful lady, no wonder."

Nina glanced at him, bewildered. What did he mean that he heard about her many times? Did someone tell him about her? Why did he say so?

He must not be her fan or other strangers, for what they generally said would be you were much more beautiful in real life than you were in the TV shows.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 546 My Happiness Whatever

The young man turned out to be Lucien Fowler, who had been back from a business meeting, and he was excited to encounter Nina in the elevator.

Though he had seen Nina several times before in business, he didn't know Nina was admired by Cameron, his good partner, so he didn't have any special feelings by then. But later he had known Cameron was fond of Nina, he naturally became curious about Nina and the relationship between her and Cameron. After all, Cameron was a man of self-abnegation but totally lost his mind when he was dealing with Nina. What a mysterious woman Nina was.

As Nina's agent, Sherlyn was worried that Lucien was up to no good. When he spotted Nina, his expression was so strange that Sherlyn was afraid that this man was thinking of something indecent. Therefore, Sherlyn leaned on one side, blocking out Nina from his view.

While Nina had also noticed the unusualness of Lucien, so lowering her cap, she said to Sherlyn casually, "During the filming, I was trained by several female commandos, and you guess what? Compared to them, I am too weak. They can easily tackle dozens of strong men with bare hands but I can only tackle two."

Hearing this, Lucien was rendered speechless. Nina was warning him, wasn't she? There were altogether three people in this elevator. While Sherlyn was on Nina's side, he was on his own. So, what she said about tackling two strong men meant that she could easily beat him up.

He also remembered that Nina had made a headline because she was good at fighting, and had kicked down a stranger who wanted to splash unknown liquid on her friend at a news conference. Thinking of these, Lucien felt a shiver running down his spine, and he thought to himself, "My God, how come a superstar has become so good at fighting..."

Eyeing Lucien, Sherlyn added, "Well, it will be quite enough if you could tackle two strong men. Even though you can tackle only one, it will not be a problem."

Lucien knew for sure that what they said was a warning that they could beat the bejabbers out of him if he was trying to do something bad. He was a bit vexed since he did nothing wrong except for taking several glances at Nina. How could they mistake him for a hooligan and even threatened him?

When the elevator stopped at the floor of Camcien Lifetech, Lucien walked out of it angrily, thinking, "Great, Cameron, you are going to compensate for what Nina did to me. She was threatening me!" So, once he went into his office room, he called for Cameron to complain about Nina. But before he could speak anything, he heard Cameron speak wanly, "Are you busy now? If not, can you come to my place? Let's have some drinks"

Cameron sounded heart-broken and Lucien held back what he was going to say about Nina since Lucien knew Cameron for years and Cameron was good at controlling his emotions; he wouldn't frown even when facing a catastrophe unless he was hurt by Nina. Forgetting about the complaint, Lucien grabbed the car key and walked out of the room, saying, "Fine, I will be right there." When Cameron was so upset, what he could help with was keeping company with his buddy

At the same time when Lucien left the office, Nina and Sherlyn arrived at their studio. It was Nina's first time visiting the studio because it had been Sherlyn who was responsible for all the issues, including choosing this place as the studio.

Nina was surprised to find the room so bright, with sunshine pouring in through the big French windows, which fills the room with warmth and light. Outside the window was the sea, stretching to the horizon and leaving Nina with amazement.

"What do you think? Isn't it perfect?" Sherlyn asked happily.

Nina nodded and said, "Yeah, it was awesome."

Standing in front of the window, Nina stretched herself and said, "I am filled with power now. It will be better if one day we can purchase this place rather than rent it. That will be more awesome."

Sherlyn smiled and said, "Well, it's up to you to make fortune, my superstar. Work hard every day so we can purchase it as soon as possible."

"No problem," Nina answered.

Then, Sherlyn showed the design drawing to Nina, which made her feel perplexed and she couldn't help complaining. "Dear Sherlyn, you know I am not good at these works. I totally entrust you to handle the design. As for me, I will try my best to choose several pieces of furniture when it comes to decoration."

“Great, now you are throwing all the responsibilities on me. Am I right, my boss?”
Sherlyn knew Nina well, so what she said was only to make fun of Nina.

After a discussion about the issues of employment, Nina rubbed the back of her waist and said, “Is everything done? I want to go back to have a rest.”

Sherlyn was bewildered and asked, “Why are you so tired?” Nina had a strong body and she had never been so tired even when filming late at night.

Nina blushed at Sherlyn’s question and put down her hands immediately. In order to hide her embarrassment, she lied, “You should understand it is exhausting to act in a military-themed drama.”

The day before yesterday, she had been acting in a fighting scene for a whole afternoon and when she finished, she was soaked in sweat. But compared with making love with Cameron, the filming seemed a lot easier. The tiredness was different and making love with him last night made her thigh limp and ache even at this moment.
Sherlyn picked up the file and said, “Fine. Let’s go. I’ll drive you home.”

On her way home, Nina received a phone call from Emelia. On the other side of the phone, Emelia asked, “Are you back? Shall we dine together tonight?”

Nina answered happily, “Sure, I miss you so much.”

Emelia had been on a honeymoon with Julian in the suburban resort and Nina could tell from Emelia’s blogs that she was enjoying herself. Julian would prepare the meals for her and all she needed to do was to enjoy the flowers, read some books, and write her own stories. Every day after supper, Julian would take a walk with her in a garden full of peach blossoms, treasuring every minute with his beloved.

Nina thought if it wasn’t because Emelia had to attend the screenwriter meet-and-greet of “Princess Leilania”, Emelia wouldn’t be back from the honeymoon so soon.

Emelia smiled and said, “Nina, I miss you too.”

Then, she continued, “Just come to my house tonight. Julian will make dinner for us. He becomes a really good cook.” Nina could tell Emelia was filled with happiness when talking about Julian. So, she couldn't help but make fun of Julian, "Well, I am so lucky to have Mr. Hughes cook for me." While Julian answered her with a grunt.

Putting down the phone, Nina smiled heartedly. It was wonderful to see Emelia and Julian live a happy life together. But thinking of herself, Nina sighed helplessly and thought, "My happiness? Whatever."

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 547 The Nice Guy Incident

When Nina got home, she threw herself into the comfort of her bed and took a nap. In the evening, she woke up, got dressed up and drove to find Emelia.

Julian served a grand dinner. Emelia brought a plate of delicious braised beef to Nina and said with a smile, "This is your favorite and I made it for you myself."

Before Nina could say anything, Julian said to Emelia with a jealous tone, "I don't want you to tire yourself in the kitchen, but look what you have done for her, preparing an entire pot of braised beef!"

Since Emelia's pregnancy, Julian had hired a full-time chef to cook for them.

And during their days spent in the suburban resort, he cooked for her the whole time.

He couldn't even bear to let her finger dip into the cold water. However, after their return, Emelia spent most of the afternoon in the kitchen to make Nina her favorite dish.

Julian felt tired of being jealous. After being jealous because of men, now he even got jealous because of a woman. But there was no one to blame but his wife's bestie.

Emelia smiled and served water for her best friend and her husband, "It's so tired for Nina to work in the crew. The least I can do is to ensure that she has a good meal."

Nina had a stiff and weak connection with her parents. Over those years, most of Nina appetites for good foods had been satisfied by Emelia, especially when filming became exhausting. She made a phone call to Emelia, and her favorite dish would be there waiting for her.

If she was filming in the vicinity of Riverside City, Emelia would drive to make the food delivery herself. Even during the three years of marriage with Julian, she treated Nina the same as always. That was enough proof to show how good their relationship was.

Nina snorted and said, "Julian, could you please stop being so hostile and jealous with me all the time, okay? You managed to get Emelia back, and I take half of the credit for that."

Julian snorted, "I got Emelia back by myself, OK? How come you get half of the credit?"

Nina shrugged her shoulder and said, "If I had insisted on disagreeing with Emelia getting back to you, do you think she would still take you back?"

Julian gritted his teeth and was speechless.

He really didn't know if Emelia would listen to Nina or not, but he knew that Nina's friendship was very precious to Emelia. Many people believed that commitment between lovers was priority, but Emelia and Nina had been experiencing too much together, and their friendship had the same weight in their hearts.

After seeing that Julian was choked by her words and became speechless, Nina couldn't help laughing, "So, as a matter of fact, you owe me a lot of thanks for having this wonderful life with your amazing wife. Don't you think so?" Julian glanced at her with a fake smile, and then said, "Yes for sure. I really owe you a big deal, Nina."

Having said that, he suddenly changed the subject of the conversation, "How about this, in order to express my gratitude to you, how about I introduce a nice guy to you? Young, talented, one in a thousand."

When Julian said this, there was something inexplicable hiding in his eyes.

Julian knew about Cameron's return from abroad, but since Nina hadn't told Emelia yet, he certainly wasn't in a hurry to inform her.

As a matter of fact, he intended to use Cameron to stir up the water, just to relieve his depression from "losing the battle" with Nina.

Nina felt quite uncomfortable being stared by Julian like that. She found that this whole “introducing a nice guy” thing was some sort of funny business.

Was this “nice guy” Cameron Dauster?

It stood no reason that Cameron should know Julian. Julian was a businessman, and Cameron had studied abroad for many years, and was a man of academics. They couldn't have any intersection with each other, could they?

After thinking about it for a while, she smiled and responded, “Sure no problem. It's about time that I meet someone. Since you have the right guy to introduce to me, I see no reason not to see him.”

Emelia, who was listening to the conversation the whole time, was so confused. She looked at Julian and asked, “Why do you suddenly want to introduce a man to Nina?”

Julian was never the kind of person who had the time and the heart to manage dates for other people. This man was too proud to do matchmaking.

Besides, he did know that in Nina's heart, Cameron was the only man.

Most importantly, Nina's mood had been really unstable recently as she had just taken over the romantic variety show despite Emelia's dissuasion. Emelia had no idea of how to deal with her mood swings and then Julian had to bring this up.

Emelia was a little displeased, and Julian felt guilty for a moment for causing her to frown.

He was a little regretful. He shouldn't have upset Emelia just to “win her over”. “Sorry...” He apologized without hesitation, “I won't do that if you don't like it, Emelia.”

Julian spoke to himself in his head, “Just forget it man, don't bother with that woman, as long as your wife is happy. Happy wife, happy life, remember?”

Nina unceremoniously laughed out loud, for his cowardice.

Today's Julian was really enslaved by Emelia.

Emelia didn't need to say anything serious, and she didn't even need to make any particularly angry-looking expressions. A pair of slightly frowned eyebrows was the only thing that was needed to shut him up.

Even though Julian had compromised, Emelia raised her eyebrows and asked, "Well I think it's a good thing that you are thinking of Nina, but can you at least tell me who's the guy? I'd like to be informed."

"That..." Julian hesitated and stuttered a little, "it's a friend I know. I think he is a good guy, like in every aspect."

He didn't dare to mention the name of Cameron, and the fact that he had returned at this time, for fear of scaring his wife.

And this topic, he believed, should be brought up by Nina herself. Emelia gave him a "you know exactly what you have done" look, and then sat down with her eyes looking down.

Julian was full of remorse. He really shouldn't have tried to "win the battle". Now look what he had done, he made Emelia unhappy.

Nina was extremely heartless, and continued this conversation, "Mr. Hughes, since you think this guy is excellent in all aspects, I would really love to get to know him. How about this? After the fan meeting tomorrow, I will fly back to the crew in the evening. Could you please arrange a dinner date with him for me?"

Julian was about to lose his mind.

Could she just stop for a minute? Couldn't she see Emelia was already upset?

Just as Julian was about to say something, he heard Emelia said in a cold voice, "I think Nina's proposal is actually good. I think you should arrange this dinner, so that we could actually know this man and help Nina make her own decisions."

Julian was so embarrassed. He knew that he got what he deserved by talking too much. He swore to God that he would never do that again.

"Babe I was just kidding." He started to try to change the subject, "There is no way I would do that. You know who I am right?"

In order to ease the tension, he served Emelia with broccoli, "Babe, try this, it's good for your health."

Emelia looked at the green broccoli in her plate and said with a poker face, "I know, Julian, I eat vegetables every day." Julian wailed loudly in his mind. It's all done for today.

Emelia was angry with him.

Emelia must believe that this whole "a nice guy" incident had confused Nina in a very inappropriate time.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 548 Deceiving the Enemy by Showing His Injuries

Because he had been with Emelia for a long time, and because he had really spent his time figuring out what was going on in this woman's head, he knew Emelia's mood by just observing her actions and expressions.

She was never a sour face. But those remarks she made about vegetables, were exactly the sign that she was not happy and tried to make him look bad.

Julian winked at Nina, expecting her to say something nice about him.

Pitifully, Nina completely ignored his winking, and shrugged to show that she didn't even care. Now he knew the consequences for making fun of her by bringing up that "nice guy".

Julian really felt a pain in his head. He had finally understood that Nina was not a soft cookie. It's better not to mess up with her next time.

At that dinner table, Nina didn't bring up Cameron's return. She didn't even know how to raise the subject.

Such chaos!

Who would thought that not long after Cameron got back, the only place where they had connections with each other, was on the bed. Nina couldn't feel more shameful.

After dinner, Nina had nice small talks with Emelia and then left their house with a big box of takeaway braised beef, happy and satisfied.

Watching her car disappearing into the night, Emelia headed back to the house, without a single word with Julian.

“Please be careful babe. Watch the steps.” Julian was frightened as she took every step. Her belly was starting to pop and he was so worried about her that he wished he could carry her wherever she went.

Emelia said nothing, but withdrew her hand from his, which, was an indicate that she actually, was unhappy.

She sneered at him, “I bet you know the relationship that she had with Cameron, yet you still talked about introducing a guy and stuff like that! It’s really abominable, Julian!”

The “abominable” man could not argue back with his wife, so he said, “I am really sorry Emelia. It is my faults. All I ask of you is not to be upset any more, please! I’ll change.”

Emelia stared at him, and strangely insisted otherwise, “No, Julian. You have to bring that guy to her this time. You said that. You made a promise. You’re gonna do that.”

Julian was so confused by her words. What did that even mean?

Was she complaining about him introducing a guy to her just a minute ago? What happened now?

Emelia continued,” You know what? I’m gonna see this time what kind of man you could find for Nina.”

So that was what she really meant. If “the guy” he brought to the dinner was no compare to Cameron, he would face even worse consequences.

Julian wanted to cry, but shed no tears. He couldn’t even image his future days...

“So you sure that’s OK?” It seemed that he had to tough it out this time. He almost confessed that the guy was actually Cameron himself, so see what would happen to him.

Emelia nodded repeatedly. "Yes, definitely."

She didn't know that Cameron was back. No one ever told her. She had no idea of who "that guy" could be. She forced him to introduce the man to Nina just to teach him a lesson.

Julian, with a heavy heart, made a promise to his beloved wife, "OK, if that is what you want."

If Nina was still reluctant to tell Emelia that Cameron was back, he had to do it himself in this way. He decided to think about the further arrangements next and call it a day.

Life is hard. He thought to himself.

Lucien was called to have a drink at Cameron's residence. By the time he had arrived, half of the bottle was already empty.

Lucien sat down and asked, "What happened man? Didn't you just hook up with Nina again?"

By mentioning up Nina, Cameron was dragged in deeper depression. With the wine glass in his hand, he murmured, "Tell me man, why she didn't want me anymore?"

"What the fuck? She dumped you?" Lucien understood that there was something going on between the two, but he never expected that Nina would break up with him.

He thought it was a small argument between a young couple, and they would soon get over it.

"Yeah. She said she didn't love me anymore, and she had gotten over it." He let out a self-mocking laugh, raised the glass and drank up.

Lucien was confused. "OK dude, so as she was saying, she didn't love you and she wanted a break-up, then why she slept with you, twice, for God's sake!"

"I want to know why too, man." Cameron poured another glass of wine for himself and started drinking, but the wine turned into ashes in his mouth.

Lucien signed, "I'd say, man, you should think for yourself, right? Look at you! You can get any type of woman as long as you want them! Remember Melanie Blanchard, and that chick that your parents and all your family like? There are women everywhere in the world man! You have a forest in front of you! "

Lucien didn't mean what he said, but he said that to give comforts to Cameron and to calm him down.

Unexpectedly, he was not calmed down. Instead, he said something that sounded like an extremely paranoid person, "I want her, only her."

Lucien didn't know how to react.
That dude was in deep trouble now, he thought.

"I can't watch him go down like this." Lucien thought to himself. He could not resist and said, "Look at you bro, with all the drink and wining and crying. That chick is at her prime now! So I think you haven't heard about it yet right? I was just back at the company and I saw Nina with her agent. They were heading upstairs to the studio to check for the progress I guess..." He told him all about how Nina and Sherlyn worked together and threatened him.

Lucien told him all about this, in an extremely aggrieved tone. He made those accusations only to hope that Cameron could make it even for him.

Unexpectedly, Cameron, after hearing his complaint, who was still depressed a second ago, suddenly smiled, and his eyes were glinting with affection, "How adorable! This is exactly her style of doing things. "

In hearing this, Lucien almost got choked.

Cute?

What was Cameron saying? Did he even hear himself?

What Nina had done to him was everything but cute!

That was pure abomination!

Love could make a man blind. That was so true.

Cameron's choose of words had proved that he was really out of his mind.

Cameron continued to add comments on their encounter, "Man, it's lucky for you to stop what you were doing. From what I know about her temper, you could've been knocked down in a second. Just don't do that anymore OK?"

Again, that left Lucien speechless.

His complaints had won no compassion from Cameron. Instead, all he got was sarcasm.

Lucien was too annoyed to be here anymore. What a friend! All he ever cared about was some woman that had dumped him.

Too annoyed, Lucien reached for the wine glass and planned to drink it off, but Cameron stopped him, "Stop drinking. I need you to take me to Nina's place later."

Lucien finally broke out and hummed with anger, "She doesn't want you anymore, dude! But you are rushing to deliver yourself to her door, Have some dignity, man!"

"And by the way, I remember you called me to have a drink with you, not to be your driver!"

Even having been drinking a lot, Cameron still managed to give his friend a contemptuous expression, "It's a trick. You just don't know it yet. I'm deceiving the enemy by showing my injuries."

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 549 He Thought He Had All the Cards

Lucien laughed at Cameron's words. What for God's sake did he mean by "injuries"? Since Cameron insisted on humiliating himself, he would let him.

At eleven o'clock at night, Lucien drove this drunk man to Nina's doorstep. However, Nina ignored the ringing of her doorbell and his calls the whole time. She didn't even show up.

Lucien, even as an outsider of their relationship, felt so much embarrassed, "Hay man, let's go! Just forget it! It's almost midnight now, and the neighbors would call 911 if you continue making noises here."

Cameron was inexplicably stubborn and refused to leave. He said he would never leave until he met Nina.

He knew she was at home. She was just ignoring him and torturing him on purpose. A few minutes later, two security guards and a property staff member showed up.

The property staff said to the two with a serious look on his face, "Gentlemen, the owner of this household called us just now and said that someone was harassing her in the middle of the night, and hope we will come here and check it out."

The property staff worked for the owner of the property, and they all knew that the owner of this house was Nina, the famous actress and celebrity. When she complained about someone harassing her, they came here in a second.

Because these two men could be crazy fans of her and it seemed to be an obligation for them to protect the benefits of this big star.

So the property staff urged again, "It's too late now. Come on guys! Time to go!"

Lucien was so embarrassed that he regretted his decision of coming here with Cameron. The first time in his life, he was chased away like a dog. It was really disgraceful.

Well, it would not matter too much if Cameron was someone working behind the stage. On the contrary, he was a man of high status and has a high exposure on the media. If he got recognized and accused of harassing another female celebrity in the middle of the night, then his career as a successful businessman in Riverside City would be officially over.

Thinking of this, he raised his hand to cover his face as if this really would work, then he snatched Cameron by the arm and said in a low voice, "Let's go."

Cameron refused to leave and raised his hand to continue knocking on the door. Two security guards immediately stopped him.

The property staff looked extremely serious, "Sir, if you continue to behave like this, we will have to call the police."

As soon as the property staff came over, he smelled a strong odor of alcohol, and immediately deduced that Nina might be in danger.

This handsome and decent looking guy, however, could have a very bad character. Getting drunk and knocking at someone's door at the middle of the night was the opposite of his looks.

Cameron pursed his lips. Since things had already gotten to this point, he couldn't stay any longer even if he wanted to.

Though being drunk, he still understood that if the police was called, he and Nina both would be in trouble.

Finally, he agreed to leave and drove away with Lucien.

As he got into the car, he couldn't resist but looked back at the second-floor bedroom window of her house, and coincidentally, Nina, who was hiding behind the curtains there, caught his eye.

Originally, she wanted to see if Cameron had really left or not, but as soon as she stuck her head out, she saw him looking back. Nina trembled, not for anything else, just because his face, though hiding in the dark of the night, was filled up with the confidence to get her. She closed the curtains with fright and surprise, and then started to walk back and forth in the bedroom with anxiety.

Cameron was definitely crazy. He looked as if he was gentle and considerate, but down in his heart, he was crazier than anyone else.

Because if he wasn't crazy, how could he have been with her? How could he be with someone who was so different from him in all aspects, and loved this person as much as he could.

Nina was finally relieved when she heard the engine of the car started.

This troubled night was finally over.

Tomorrow, she would fly to the crew after attending the press conference, and she could avoid Cameron for another time.

However, it turned out that she was too naive in thinking this way.

Before the press conference the next morning, Nina was getting ready for the make-up in the dressing room, and Emelia was there too.

Emelia was the screenwriter of "Princess Leilania", and she would also be in the meet-up today. She was wearing very light makeup today because she didn't want to steal the spot light from the leading characters. She wanted to be as low-key as possible this time.

After Nina's makeup and hair were done, the event had not yet started. Nina and Emelia were chatting in the lounge.

Julian was also there, making company of Emelia. He wanted to take care of her for today, although Emelia felt that he was a little bit on the way. However, she implied that, he just refused to leave.

After a while, there was a knock on the door, Sylvie stood up to open the door.

After recognizing the person standing outside, Sylvie couldn't help but giving out an exclaim. Hearing that, Nina and Emelia turned back. Nina was startled. She stood up from the chair, feeling herself falling apart.

Emelia just put a strawberry in her mouth and almost choked on it. The strawberry was careful handed to her by her husband Julian, and having seen the person outside the door, she was so shocked that she almost swallowed the strawberry as a whole.

Ignoring her almost being choked, she stared at the man outside the door in astonishment, "Cameron?"

Sylvie grasped the door frame as she got dizzy by hearing the name, Cameron.

Did she hear it right?

The man outside the door, Apollo on earth, was actually the sweetheart of her boss?

Sylvie used to be quite confused about Nina's obsession with this man. She was so gorgeous and beyond compare yet she just couldn't forget a man that she had not seen for years. She had so many other choices, all styles of men working in the entertainment industry or wealthy businessmen, you name it. She ignored them all.

Now she understood why. No one could compete with this man, she thought to herself. Once you were in love with him, you were never able to love another.

As people in the lounge had all kinds of reactions, Cameron outside the door was quite at ease.

He gently helped a silver-haired old lady get inside the door, and politely greeted everyone, "Excuse me ladies, I would like you to meet my grandma. She is such a big fan of your TV shows, so I used my connections in the crew to help bring her here to meet with you. I hope you would not mind."

It was very clever of him not to come to Nina directly. Using "grandma" as an excuse was such an unexpected move.

Emelia was stunned, and she had not recovered yet from the shock that Cameron had returned.

Julian put his arms around her, and gently patted her shoulder to calm her down.

As a famous actress at her prime, Nina had experience in dealing with various situations. So at this moment, after the initial panic, she immediately showed her superb professionalism. She smiled and walked over to say hello to Cameron's grandma, "How are you Madam? Please come in! You have a good taste for fashion. I don't know you actually know about the show that we are making."

She thought he was here for her, which startled her a great lot. But it turned out that he was here for his grandma, which kind of eased her down. What a lovely old lady! She found it very intriguing when older people managed to keep up with the trend of today.

Although Nina greeted the old lady kindly, she still kept a certain social distance. She didn't expect the old lady to be such enthusiastic. She grabbed Nina by the hands and said, "Nina? What a pretty girl you are. You look so much more beautiful in real person."

Nina glanced at Cameron next to her, then looked at her hands that were being held. She could not even manage a smile.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 550 A Man with a Successful Career

Nina could not help feeling that the old lady's attitude towards her was with too much enthusiasm. She seriously suspected that the old lady knew something about the relationship between her and Cameron.

Fortunately, Viggo Johansen rushed over at this time. He smiled and explained to Nina and the others, "Mr. Dauster and I are friends, so I thought it was OK to do a favor for this lady and let her visit the cast."

Nina glanced at Cameron and thought, when did he have friendship with Viggo Johansen? Cameron looked back at Nina's inquiring gaze calmly, and Nina couldn't see anything suspicious in his face.

Viggo greeted the old lady and Cameron into the lounge. Emelia finally got back to her mind, and she immediately pulled Nina aside and asked her in a low voice, "When did Cameron come back? Did you already know that?"

The reason why Emelia asked this was because she saw that when Nina saw Cameron's appearance, her expression had no drastic changes. Obviously, she knew about Cameron's return for a long time. Maybe they even had met each other before today.

Nina's head hurt really bad. She replied to Emelia in a low voice, "This is a long story. I'll tell you in detail when the event is over." Emelia nodded. She also understood that now was not the time to talk.

"Are you the screenwriter?" As soon as the two finished talking, Grandma came over with a smile on her face. This time she greeted Emelia.

Emelia responded with a smile and said, "Yes I am. Please just call me Emelia."

"What a talented young lady!" Grandma sincerely praised Emelia, but she didn't hold her hands affectionately to express her liking, and she had not examined her with meaningful eyes as she did with Nina.

Nina eyebrows slightly frowned, and she was sure now that the old lady knew something.

But she was not sure if it was Cameron who took the initiative to talk about their past with his grandma, or the lady heard about it from Cameron's parents.

If she knew of her existence from his parents, probably his mother would not say anything nice about her. After all, it was his mother who trashed her into nothing with hurtful remarks.

When Grandma and Emelia were making small talks, Nina stood by the side smiling, without making a sound. An outsider couldn't tell that there was anything tricky between her and Cameron. This was good acting, and Nina was very good at it as she had done it a million times on the big screen.

Grandma talked about a wide range of things with Emelia, from the plot of "Princess Leilania" to the child in Emelia's belly.

The old lady was also really sincere and told Emelia a lot of things to pay attention to during pregnancy. Emelia smiled and kept her words in mind.

She had to admit that this grandma of Cameron was much more approachable and easier to get along with than his mother.

“Cameron, come here and take some pictures for us!” The old lady called out to her grandson.

Cameron walked over and took out his mobile phone to help the old lady take pictures with Nina and Emelia. Nina’s expression was a little stiff, and it wouldn’t be comfortable for anyone to pose in front of their ex, would it?

The old lady was very satisfied with Cameron’s photography skills. Just when Nina thought that it’s time for the guests to leave, Grandma suddenly came over and asked her seriously, “Nina, do you have a boyfriend?”

Nina did not know how to respond to such a question.
Was it appropriate to ask her such a thing in front of so many people?

When the old lady finished her words, people in the lounge suddenly stopped talking, and looked at Nina with different expressions, especially Emelia. She always suspected that there was something strange between Nina and Cameron.

It stood to reason that Nina had waited for Cameron for so many years, and now that Cameron was back, Nina should be happy. But she could not see happiness in her at all, and she seemed to be hiding from him the whole time.

Could it be that Nina really gave up on him?

Emelia remembered that Nina had mentioned to her several times before, that she didn’t want to wait for Cameron any more. Emelia couldn’t help frowning.

Nina was muted by the old lady’s words. The lady simply pulled over Cameron, who was standing right next to them, and enthusiastically promoted, “How about my grandson?”

Nina was speechless.

Grandma exactly knew the situation but she chose to play the fool. It was all a trap. She came here to talk to them, take pictures with them, just to bring that up, binding Nina with Cameron.

So did it mean she wanted Cameron to be with her?

Nina didn't speak anything, and gave Cameron a casual glance. Cameron pretended to be Grandma's good boy, as if he would listen to everything his grandma arranged for him, and he would not dare to object to his grandma's decisions at all.

Not getting any response from Nina, the lady continued to promote her grandson, "Cameron is an excellent young man. He just came back from abroad, has a doctorate degree in biology. Look at him! He is handsome and considerate. The most important thing is that he is no playboy."

"For so many years, he has only been thinking about one girl, you!" But of course, the old lady muttered these words to herself in her mind.

Nina's lips curved into a smile, "Madam, I would like to ask, what is your grandson's current job?" "As for that..." she did not know how to reply to that question.

She turned her head and glared at her grandson. She smiled, slightly embarrassed, "He doesn't have a job yet. But with his ability and his academic records, that would not be a problem."

Grandma was annoyed by the fact that Cameron indeed had no job. Cameron was not willing to work in any universities or institutions no matter what, and that made her lose face in front of Nina. She was with such a good will to help to make Nina take him back, but that good will was turned into nothing by one simple question.

However, why did Nina suddenly ask this question?

Grandma suspected that Nina knew about his unemployment a long time ago, so she deliberately used it to dispel the idea of getting them back together. But how did she know that?

Have they met before?

Probably not. Her son and daughter-in-law never revealed that to her...

Considering her old age, the lady was too tired and stressed out from all the thinking.

Nina continued to smile gently, "I'm sorry, Madam. I think it's better for me to find a man with a successful career to spend the rest of my life with."

This implied that her grandson was a jobless failure that no one wanted. The lady had nothing else to say, "Indeed..., that is better for you I guess..." She murmured.

The old lady felt so self-abased at this moment. She didn't know yet that her grandson actually owned two companies, Tymers Entertainment and Camcien Lifetech. He was as successful as she said.

Cameron glanced at Nina carelessly, "So you said you like a man with a successful career?" Nina nodded without changing her facial expression, "Yes indeed." Cameron raised his eyebrows, "Okay."

After saying that, he stepped forward to hold his grandma in his arms and said, "Let's go grandma. The meetup is about to start."

The old lady had no choice but to say bye to Nina and Emelia. Nina stared at Cameron's back, really annoyed.

What did he mean? What did he mean by throwing the word "okay" at her?