

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 561

Nina's Plan

Emelia turned to Nina after she warned Julian, "Is that your mother?"

Emelia knew Nina so well that she didn't even have to check the number on Nina's screen' she could just tell from her frowning that her parents had called her.

Nina didn't deny it and then told Emelia and Julian what her younger brother and parents did. Emelia said in rage, with her hand covering her abdomen, "How could they do that?"

Emelia had always been knowing the relationship between Nina and her parents. So Nina had done whatever she could do these years.

Her younger brother had almost become a burden in her life.

Nina was just a tool for Cory to use in her parents' eyes. They didn't care what Cory had done. They had asked Nina to buy her younger brother a house and a car. And even his college tuition fee was paid by Nina.

Now, they even asked Nina to pay off the debt for Cary.

Emelia was outraged. How dare they? Nina had given them a large amount of money these days. Like Nina said, they could solve Cory's problem by simply selling one of their houses. So why did they have to resort to their daughter?

Emelia also thought that Cory should solve his problem himself. He needed to learn a lesson from this. Otherwise, he would someday have himself ruined.

Julian saw how angry Emelia was and felt sympathized with her instantly. He held Emelia in his arms and then took out his phone to show Nina he could contact others for help. Then he asked Nina lowly, "You need help?"

Julian also knew how terrible her parents were. In his eyes, Nina should ignore what her parents asked her.

Nina shook her head slightly, "Thank you, but I can handle this myself."

Now Emelia was pregnant. If Nina's parents knew Julian had helped Nina, they might come to disturb Emelia. That would be a real trouble.

Nina knew how vital the baby was to Emelia better than anyone else. She didn't want Emelia to be bothered by her parents.

Nina had undergone the hardships together with Emelia these years. Emelia was more important than her parents for her.

Emelia felt quite worried, "But if they used your past against you..."

Emelia couldn't finish her words. Nina had done a lot to make herself who she was now. She didn't want to watch her best friend be ruined by her parents.

"Whatever," Nina said slightly.

"Now I've known clearly how shameless they are. But I've also got tired of my career. So, if my parents really do so, I can choose to retire at this moment."

Nina had made her plan. After she retired, she would buy a villa in a warm place and live there until she passed away. It would be ideal to live there while surrounded by the fragrance of followers and bird warbling.

"No, don't you do that. I know what an excellent actress you are. I want you to get as many good roles as possible. I want you to win the best actress even when you are over 80 years old," Emelia said with tears welling up in her eyes.

Before they became famous, they had dreamed of such a scene that Nina could get on the podium when she was over 80.

Emelia could still produce good stories when she was around 80. How good it was to win an award with one's best friend!

That's why Emelia felt like crying as she heard Nina was going to retire.

And thinking that Nina could be forced to retire thanks to her own parents, Emelia felt even sadder. It was constantly heard that actors and singers had to retire due to their parents.

Julian saw the expression on Emelia's face, and his face turned grim. He knew he shouldn't interfere in Nina's family affairs, and he also knew that Cameron would help Nina.

Nina also saw how sad Emelia was, and she patted Emelia's shoulder while saying, "Don't you cry. I won't retire. You know what I will do, don't you? I will never let my career be ruined that easily."

"I will give them whatever they want in the past to break with them. I've been waiting for a chance to do that, and now it has come. So I am not afraid to fight against them. I know their weaknesses, and I can handle them myself. Trust me." Then she gave a smile to Emelia.

Emelia could finally heave a sigh of relief hearing her words.

She knew that causal as Nina seemed to be, she was an intelligent girl. She wouldn't let herself be bullied by her family.

But Emelia still had to have a discussion about this with Julian later. She thought Nina still needed some help from Julian.

"Let's start eating. Now you are pregnant, and I don't want you to get worried. I don't want to see my godchildren starving," Nina seemed to get back to her old self again.

After the meal, Nina still had to fly to the shooting site. Sherlyn said she wouldn't find more commercial work for Nina. She was afraid that Nina would get in trouble if she left the shooting site again.

They didn't see Cameron as they got outside, and Michelle and Emelia felt better now.

Emelia didn't ask Nina why she kissed Cameron. But Emelia also knew Nina would have told her if she wanted to. So, she refrained from asking Nina about the kiss.

Nina knew she shouldn't tell Emelia about that. Could she say she would kiss Cameron only to irritate Michelle?

She couldn't.

So, Nina didn't say anything about this.

Julian and Emelia drove Nina back home and then left. Nina packed her luggage and went to the airport to meet Sylvie.

But right after she got back home, she received a call from Cameron.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 562 I'll Handle Your Parents

After being stopped at the airport by Cameron last time, Nina unblocked him on the contact list. And they had been in contact since then.

As a celebrity, Nina couldn't allow such crazy things to happen again. So, she gave up the idea of blocking him.

And besides, she didn't feel like blocking people was something that she, a successful woman should do. It was kind of childish to so, to be honest. Cameron called again and Nina picked up the phone.

"When is your fight? Should I send you to the airport?" Cameron asked.

Nina sometimes was envious of Cameron's attitude of taking nothing seriously. She would still blush thinking how she had hugged and kissed him just now. Yet he spoke in a tone as if nothing happened.

Nina said, while packing her clothes, "This is inappropriate."

"How come? You kissed me. You changed your mind again?" Cameron asked.

Nina felt kind of helpless. She knew that Cameron was going to pester her for the kiss.

She rolled her eyes to the ceiling and explained, "Come on! I mean, I am famous. People might take pictures of us."

Cameron said, "Alright, I see. You know, you were too changeable, and I fear. But it's all because if you won't make our relationship public. Otherwise, I can go anywhere with you."

Nina didn't expect that Cameron, normally reticent, would make such a long speech and that she, usually articulate, were rendered speechless at the moment.

In the end, she gritted her teeth and said, "If you called to argue, then save it." Cameron laughed at the other end of the line. He was amused by Nina's words.

Nina, on the other hand, cursed, "Why are you laughing, Cameron, you are sick!" She couldn't stand him laughing while she was angry.

She couldn't believe that she had fallen in love with such a boring man. If she could go back to the past, she would, without a doubt, choose a boy that knew how to please girls.

"I'm not laughing at you but you were so cute." Cameron immediately explained.

"Cute?" Nina snorted, her voice sharp. "I guess you don't really know what this word means."

She was almost about to hang him up. She was pissed off.

But before that, Cameron said, "Jokes aside, I'm calling for something important."

Nina was curious about what could be important.

However, she heard him saying, "I'll handle your parents."

Nina thought she had heard it wrong. She wondered, "What is wrong with him? Take care of my parent's issue? But who does he treat me like? We slept twice indeed but we are not in a relationship or something like that. Was I not clear?"

"Can you be a little bit more respectful?" Nina said angrily.

“Respectful to whom? Your parents? No.” said Cameron.

“To me!”

Cameron was speechless. He didn’t understand how this would offend Nina.

He just didn’t want Nina to fight with them, after all, they are her parents. So he decided to offer a helping hand.

“It’s none of your business,” Nina said, annoyed.

“It is.” Cameron refused to give in. “But now, you should go to the airport.” He then hung up the phone, indicating that he didn’t want to speak more about this topic. Nina was pissed off by his cockiness.

Just as she was racking her brain for means to stop Cameron, Sylvie called, saying that she would be there in a moment and asked Nina to prepare herself.

Since there was nothing she could do, Nina gave up. She decided to let Cameron do whatever he wanted. She believed that he could handle her parents easily. Because he was a genius, and her parents were just losers.

She thought he would negotiate with her parents. Yet, to her surprise, he used force.

When Cameron called Nina, he had arrived at where Nina’s parents lived.

They were living in the villa Nina gave his brother, Cory, as a gift. They had rented out the other villas, each covered a big area, and both had good locations. Dominic and Marisa Midgarden had chosen them carefully.

The rent of the villas was lucrative. The money Nina’s family got from it each other was enough to make them live like kings.

Dominic and Marisa had stopped working since long time back. They idled around at home every day. The other thing they did was take care of their precious son.

All they had was from Nina.

They had lived under the support of Nina ever since she was just a nameless actress. They kept depriving her. Now, they couldn't get anything from her, so they decided to ruin her.

Cameron got off the car with a grim face. He slammed the car door and pressed the doorbell.

He knew that Cory was at home today and thought it was a good chance to teach all three a great lesson.

“Who is it?” Nina's father opened the door in annoyance.

Seeing the handsome man in front of him, Dominic paused,

He sized Cameron up and down and then asked in surprise, “Are you Cameron?”

Dominic was greatly impressed by Cameron, who messed up his plan on a rainy night a few years ago.

He took away his daughter and send her back the next day, looking as if he wanted to kill them.

Later the old man complained, saying that Nina was not a virgin, because he found hickeys all over her body when he ripped off her clothes that night.

Dominic was pissed off. He knew only later that Nina had had sex with Cameron.

He almost broke Nina's leg, because he was planning to sell her out for marriage at a good price.

So at that moment, he immediately recognized Cameron.

He remembered that Cameron was rich, The purpose he came here must be Nina.

Thinking of this, greedy thoughts appeared in Dominic's mind.

If Cameron still cared about his daughter, he'd be able to extort a great deal of money from him.

However, just as Dominic was emerged in his greedy daydreams, Cameron, out of disgust, punched him right in the face.

Dominic staggered backward and cried out painfully.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 563 Last Respect for You

Cameron hated Dominic so much that he punched with great force.

Dominic fell on the wall. He felt that his teeth were loosened.

“Cameron!” Dominic shouted. He was fat, but because of laziness, he was vulnerable. Cameron’s punch made him feeble. He couldn’t even speak.

Hearing the noise, Marisa and Cory rushed out from the kitchen and bedroom respectively. Seeing Cory’s mouth bleeding, Marisa shouted acutely at Cameron, “What are you doing? How can you break into someone else’s home like that? Are you aware this is against the law?” she then called out to Cory, “Call the police, now!”

Cameron sneered, “Yes, call the police, do it!”

Then, before they said or did anything, Cameron reached out to Cory and punched him violently.

Cory was not a good fighter either. For now, he was intimidated by Cameron’s ferocious face and did not even dare to fight back.

“Mom, Dad, help me!” Cory buried his head in his arms and called out for help.

Cory was 21 years old and was currently a junior in university. He was a bad student. To stuff him into university, his family had spent a great deal of money, yet it was just a terrible university. And even after becoming a university student, Cory never planned to study hard. He spent all his time playing video games.

He had been spoiled by his parents, and now his sister became a successful actress, so he had no motivation, he had his family cover his back anyway.

That was why he was so vulnerable. He couldn't fight.

Dominic struggled himself up and charged towards Cameron, Marisa did the same thing. Yet before they even approach him, they saw Cameron drag Cory upfront the ground and pushed him forwards. Dominic and Marisa had to stop. They didn't want to hurt their son.

Marisa cried at the sight of Cory's swollen face. "I can't believe this is happening in this country!"

Cameron ignored her. He knew very well about her tricks. She was trying to stop him by playing the victim.

But he had come here with a purpose, which was to teach these three people a lesson with his fist. He knew negotiation wouldn't work when dealing with shameless people.

He dragged Cory up with one hand, glanced over the villa, and said grimly, "I thought the loan shark had destroyed this place. But it looked like nothing happened."

Marisa stopped crying.

Cameron sneered. It was obvious that Marisa had lied to Nina in the call. She told Nina that the people had broken into the villa but that was just a lie. She just wanted Nina's sympathy.

At the mention of the loan, Marisa suddenly realized that she should firstly have a look at the young man who came here to make things difficult for them.

"My name is Cameron Dauster." "Cam...Cameron Dauster?" Marisa opened her eyes wide. She remembered this name.

However, Cameron was not in the mood to chat with them. He asked, "I heard you guys ask Nina to pay for the 1 million loans that Cory borrowed?" He said grimly.

Then he grabbed Cory's collar which made Cory shiver.

Having been beaten by Cameron so violently just now, Cory was terrified of him.

Dominic and Marisa trembled in guilt. They didn't even dare to look at Cameron in the eyes.

Cameron was young, yet intimidating.

He glanced at them again and asked, "And you guys want to ruin her?"

None of the three dared to look at him. Cameron then laughed, saying, "Good! Good! You guys had almost ruined her years ago, and now you want to do it again. What lovely parents she's got!"

Hearing Cameron's words, the three of them broke out in a cold sweat.

The next second, Cameron changed his tone. He said quite indifferently, "If that is the case, I'll have to ruin you guys first." Dominic and Marisa were startled. They asked Cameron in panic, "What do you mean? What are you going to do?" Cameron didn't speak. Instead, he let go of Cory. Cory immediately fell to the ground, his legs numb.

Cameron walked to a cabinet. He guessed it should be where Dominic put his collections.

Nina, his beloved girl, paid for everything. Thinking of this, Cameron's eyes turned red. He grabbed one of Dominic's collections and smashed it on the floor.

Dominic fell to the ground, his heart broken too. He almost fainted.

"Stop it!" Dominic cried, yet he couldn't make a sound, perhaps because he was too emotional.

Cory slumped on the ground all this time. He was too scared to move.

Marisa charged toward Cameron, wanting to stop him. Each of the collections was worth a lot of money.

Cameron moved aside in annoyance and Marisa failed to stop in time. She threw herself into the cabinet and made several collections fall.

Dominic couldn't stand one more loss.

Marisa snorted at Cameron, "Wait! The police will be here right away."

She then took out her phone. She believed that Cameron could be arrested for breaking into someone's house and for deliberating attack.

However, Cameron didn't care at all. He grabbed one more and smashed it on the ground. Then, he wrapped his palm with his other hand, and said, "Since I dare to do it, I don't care about the consequences. Or do you think you guys can defeat me? Call the police." he continued indifferently, "And let the police officers see how the most famous actress is being parasite by her parents and brother. Let them judge. Ask them if they think Nina is responsible for Cory's loan."

Marisa's hand holding on the phone trembled. She was guilty and afraid. Cameron then said, "And also, ask the police if Cory should be arrested for gambling online."

Marisa's face turned pale instantly. Her hand shook so violently that she couldn't hold the phone. She fell to the ground heavily. "What do you want?" she asked, knowing that it was not wise to offend Cameron.

Cameron said idly, "Very simple. I want you guys to stay away from Nina. Do never hurt her or threaten her again. You guys have gotten a lot from her over the years. It should be enough for the rest of your lives. And as for your good-for-nothing son, Nina had been generous to him enough. In a nutshell, you guys have nothing to do with Nina from today on."

Cameron decided for Nina. He then added, "Nina didn't tell you guys to stay away from her world, it was her last respect for you guys.!"

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 564 Pleased

The Sanchezs froze.

They weren't willing to cut off their line with Nina. If that happened, they wouldn't get any money from her anymore.

So, Dominic said to Cameron with scorn, "Did you decide for her? Who do you think you are?"

“It’s none of your business.” Cameron sneered.

Dominic was pissed off. “Nina is my daughter. She had to ask for my permission when she marries someone. And I won’t allow her to marry you if you treat me this way!”

Cameron glanced at him in disdain. “You called her your daughter but have you treated her like a daughter? As far as I know, she had been supporting herself by being a model since high school. You didn’t even allow her to go to high school. And you never gave her a penny after she entered college.”

Dominic said shamelessly, “So what? I’ve raised her. She’s responsible to take care of us.” Cameron couldn’t be angrier. He clenched his fists, suppressing his urge to punch Dominic again.

Cameron’s silence encouraged Dominic, he thought he had controlled Cameron. So he said even more aggressively, “Ask her to come here and tell us that she wanted to break up with us. I don’t believe she could. If she does it, however, I’ll call the media and expose her.”

Before he finished, he received another punch from Cameron, which sent him to the ground. His arrogance was instantly gone.

Marisa and Cory were both stunned. They couldn’t believe that Cameron, looking so gentle, would be capable of such violence.

Cameron walked over and looked down on Dominic. “Do you know what this punch was for?”

Dominic was so painful that he couldn’t speak.

Cameron said with a gloomy face, “Because you were threatening her again.”

Dominic’s face changed. But he couldn’t do anything.

“I would have punished you long ago if you weren’t her father. Yet since you never learn your lesson, I’ll teach you.

Remember every word I said just now. There was no joke.” After that, Cameron slammed the door shut and left.

Marisa instantly burst into tears.
They couldn't live without Nina. Although they don't need to worry about money now, how can they bear losing this ATM?

Dominic snorted, "Stop crying! Help me up."

Only then did Marisa remember Dominic was here. She immediately went over to help him. Cory was out of his wits.

Dominic was pissed off seeing his son being such a coward. He kicked Cory and cursed, "Are you a man? Why didn't you fight back?"

Cory said with a trembling voice, his hand covering his swollen face, "He was so strong and so fierce, I can't fight him."

Cory only dared to bully those weaker than him. Yet in front of Cameron, he didn't even dare to breathe out loud, let alone fight back.

Dominic couldn't be angrier seeing his son so useless. With Marisa's support, he sat down on the sofa.

Marisa sighed, looking around the messy living room. "What should we do now?"

Dominic said with indignation, "Take a picture of me and Cory's face, as well as those broken pieces. And send them to Nina. If she doesn't react, that means she and Cameron are on the same boat and it'll be tricky. If she's still a human, she should give us some money as compensation, or at least, pay off the loan for Cory."

"Alright, I'll do it right now." Marisa always listened to Dominic.

However, Nina didn't respond, nor did they answer their calls.

"She's on the airplane?" Marisa guessed, they knew that Nina was always on the trip.

"Try again later. She has to know what Cameron had done to us today." Said Dominic.

Then he asked Marisa to dress the wounds for him and Cory.

Nina was indeed on the flight back to the crew. She saw the videos and missed calls when she got off the plane,

Having received no response, Marisa sent Nina some audios, crying, complaining about Cameron's behavior, and told her that Cory and Dominic looked miserable now.

Nina took off her sunglasses and watched the video.

She couldn't believe Cameron did it. But after hearing Marisa's complaint and thinking about Cameron's words, she had to believe it.

Cameron promised her to handle her parents yet she didn't expect he would do it this way. However, for an unknown reason, she suddenly felt pleased.

She didn't want to bother with her family anymore. There was no love between them.!.1. 11

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 565 There's Nothing Money Can't Do

Nina calmed herself down and got in the car and headed to the crew as if nothing happened.

She didn't call Cameron, nor Marisa.

She knew Marisa would call again to complain about Cameron.

As for Cameron, she didn't have much to talk to him. He's become more and more strange to her. Maybe she had never understood him. But he seemed to be crazier and crazier.

Marisa called again at dinner time when Nina had just returned to the hotel.

"Did you see my message?" Marisa complained.

"Yes," said Nina emotionlessly. She found a comfortable position and lay down on the sofa.

"Then why didn't you call back?" Marisa was angry. "How could Cameron do this to us?"

"Cameron did it. What does it have to do with me?" said Nina, still calm.

Marisa was furious. "Why? Isn't he your boyfriend? Aren't you with him?" Marisa thought they were a couple, that was why Cameron fought for her.

"Be careful of your wording, mom. I'm still single. I've said that million times. Don't you watch the news?" Nina corrected her immediately. It was also her trick. Because she knew Marisa would call her asking for compensation. But if she had nothing to do with Cameron, she wouldn't be responsible for what Cameron did.

"What?" Marisa didn't expect Nina to deny it. She was suddenly speechless.

"Is there anything else? If not, I need to have dinner now." Nina was about to hang up.

Marisa immediately called out, "If you are not together, why would he fight for you? Nina, you've gone too far. Your father and I have raised you, and yet you asked someone to beat us?"

Nina rubbed her ears. She had had enough of such words. They indeed brought her up but they never give her any money.

She was grateful, that was why she allowed them to deprive her of all his years. However, they hurt her again and over again, and eventually, her gratitude disappeared. She had no feeling for them now.

"I won't say this again but I have nothing to do with him. If you want revenge, go for him." After saying that, Nina hung up the phone.

She believed if she insisted that she had nothing to do with Cameron, her family wouldn't be able to do anything. She could be a bad person too sometimes.

Marisa was pissed off by Nina's words. Dominic, who still found it hard to utter a full sentence because of the pain, asked with difficulty, "What did she say?"

Marisa almost smashed her phone. "She said she had nothing to do with Cameron and that if we want to avenge, we should go for him."

Go for Cameron? How dare they?

“What?” Dominic almost jumped up from bed in anger. “What does she mean? She wouldn’t pay?” “Yes, she sounded cold. She has no conscious.” Marisa cursed.

Dominic gritted his teeth, yet angry as he was, he could do nothing. Nina was not even at Riverside City.

“Let me think.” Said Dominic.

“What if the loan sharps find us? What should we do?” Marisa asked in concerns.

They liked showing off. Therefore, where they lived was no secret to their creditors.

It seemed like the only thing they could do was to run overnight.

They didn’t want to pay the money.

“I said I’ll think about it. Can you be quiet?” Dominic yelled at Marisa, venting his anger on her.

Marisa pursed her lips and left the room.

She had been used to Dominic’s insult and therefore she didn’t even have the thought to retort.

Just as Nina hung up the phone, someone knocked on her door. She walked over in slippers, thinking it was Sylvie, who had gone out for food.

However, it was Cameron. Seeing him, Nina paused. And Cameron entered the room before she could do anything.

Nina wanted to stop him but it was too late. She quickly checked if there were reporters or cameras outside. It was her instinct as a female star.

Then she lacked the door and shouted at Cameron, “How did you get here? How did you get in?”

To protect the actors, the crew had booked all the rooms above the tenth floor. This meant that outsiders like Cameron shouldn’t be allowed to get in. Yet he was here now, weird.

Cameron took off his coat slowly, and said, "There is nothing money can't do."

Nina was amused. "My money. You are shameless." She thought Cameron was just that poor unemployed guy. She was unaware of his fortune.

Little did she know how much he had spent and how much he had asked Lucien to do just to keep his identity secret from her.

Cameron wanted to hug Nina, but Nina dodged.

She was annoyed when he hooked up with her without explaining anything.

She thought he had perhaps believed that she couldn't resist him and would never break up with him.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 566 Argument

Cameron was angry.

He instead asked in concern, "Have you had dinner?"

Nina crossed her arms, and asked, frowning, "You said you'll handle my parents. With your fists?" Nina didn't want to mention it, but since he was there.

"They called you?" Cameron asked.

"Yes." Nina didn't deny it.

"They'll never learn." Cameron said grimly.

He didn't expect them to bother Nina so soon. He had done it when Nina was not at Riverside City just to avoid this. He had underestimated how shameless they could be, now it seemed.

Nina was angry seeing him act like this. "Cameron, who do you think you are?"

"Are you angry?" Cameron asked, trying to figure out how she felt.

“I don’t need you to do this for me.”

Nina didn’t care if Cameron beat Dominic and Cory. But she didn’t like it when Cameron acted like they were intimate.

Cameron walked to Nina, stared at her, saying, “Nina, you are smart. You know we can’t do anything else when dealing with this kind of people.”

Nina was amused. Cameron used to call her silly, especially at school, when she was troubled by questions, but now she was a smart girl in his eyes.

Cameron added, “You are their daughter, at least by name. You can’t do such things so I did it for you. Otherwise, they won’t stop bullying you.”

Nina didn’t speak. So, Cameron went on saying, lifting his brows, “Are you waiting for Emelia and Julian’s help?”

Nina snorted, taking one step back. “No matter what, I don’t need you to do that.”

“You are lying.” Cameron touched her lips.

Nina stepped back yet behind her was the wall. Cameron smiled and grabbed her into his arms.

Nina didn’t intend to give in this time. She kicked him. However, it seemed like after a few years, Cameron was much stronger now. He controlled her with just a few moves. He pressed her to the wall and started to kiss her.

Nina was pissed off. She had never expected Cameron to be so swift. She thought he was a quiet boy at school.

That wasn’t her fault, because Cameron never told her that he could fight.

He would have fought back against Manny Bowers that time if she didn’t show up to help. But thanks to that, otherwise, they were probably still strangers.

Just as he was about to kiss Nina, someone knocked on the door. He was forced to stop.

“Nina, I bought dinner.”

Sylvie had the key to Nina's room, however, she respected Nina's privacy. So she knocked whenever she came. And she didn't enter the room until getting Nina's response.

Hearing Sylvie's voice, Nina became anxious. Sylvie mustn't know that Cameron was there. If she told Sherlyn, Sherlyn would rush over even at midnight.

Nina pushed Cameron to the bathroom. "Hide yourself!"

However, Cameron refused. "Why?"

Nina was speechless.

She looked up at the man and found him looking serious. It seemed like he wanted to make his identity known

Nina had a headache.

"Are you there, Nina?" Sylvie asked again.

"Yes, I am." Nina immediately said, fearing that Sylvie would get in.

"Wait for a moment, please. I'm in the middle of something." She said to Sylvie.

"Okay." Sylvie replied.

Then, Nina said to Cameron softly, yet angrily. What are you trying to do? If she caught us, my manager will kill me."

"You hide me from outsiders. And now even your close friend?" Cameron said aggressively, "You didn't even tell Emelia. If I hadn't show up at the press conference with my grandmother, you probably wouldn't even tell Emelia that I have returned." Cameron looked sad when he spoke. "Nina, I knew how close you are with Emelia. Why are you even hiding it from her?" Cameron felt most hurt when he knew that Nina didn't even tell Emelia about their relationship.

“Yes, we are close friends. And that was why I didn’t tell her.” Nina responded, “Because you and me, we have no future.

Emetia is pregnant. I don’t want her to worry about me for this shit.”

“This shit?” Cameron couldn’t believe his ears. “Is this how you see our relationship?”

“Yes... What else?” Nina said, kind of guilty.

She thought she wasn’t wrong. The thing between them was a crap.

Nina felt a headache whenever thought about their parents.

She was very successful now, yet sometimes, she still felt she wasn’t good enough for Cameron.

He was up in the sky. She was buried in the dirt.

Cameron stared at her. Nina could see the great sorrow in his eyes, so she pursed her lips, and turned her head, avoiding his gaze.

“Good, Nina!” In the end, Cameron said curtly, his voice was kind of trembling. He loosened his grip and went straight to the door.

Nina was startled.

Wouldn’t Sylvie catch him if he went out now? However, Cameron was too sad to think about anything. He had lost his mind.

Sylvie was frightened seeing a man walk out of Nina’s room. She rushed in and grabbed Nina’s hand, said nervously, “Nina, I saw a man walking out of here.”

“That was Cameron,” Nina said helplessly.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 567 Dragged into the Room

“Is that...Cameron?” Sylvie felt relieved.

Luckily, it wasn't other guys. Cameron was good-looking, and he was a gentleman. He had Nina had a deep bone. Sylvie favored him for no reason.

However, then she realized something. "How did she get in? Did anyone see him?" Nina didn't care anymore. She buried her face into the sofa, silent.

She thought she would be happy that Cameron left in anger. Because after the argument, he probably won't come for her again.

He was a proud person.

But why wasn't she happy? She felt empty. She couldn't breathe.

"We have booked every room above the 10th floor. Someone might have seen him." Sylvie muttered to herself. "Anyway, let's have dinner first."

Nina didn't have any appetite. "I'll eat later. Don't wait for me."

"Nina. Is there anything?" Sylvie noticed something was wrong. "Did you guys have a fight?" Cameron went out in a rush, but Sylvie noticed his gloomy face. He must have argued with Nina.

"No," Nina said grumpily.

"Then what happened? Haven't you slept together? What's wrong?" Sylvie asked bluntly. She was a straightforward person. Nina almost choked.

She raised her head from the sofa, glared at Sylvie, and said unhappily, "Go back to your room. Leave my dinner here."

She couldn't imagine what Sylvie would say next.

"Okay." Sylvie replied, she then asked, "But shall I tell Sherlyn that Mr. Charming came for you?"

Mr. Charming?

Nina was speechless.

“Don’t tell her. He won’t come again anyway. She’ll get angry if she knew.” After that, she buried her head into the sofa again.

“I see.” Sylvie went back to her room with her dinner.

As an actress. Nina only ate salad while Sylvie’s food was delicious. When they ate together, Nina sometime would pick some meat from Sylvie’s food. Now, Sylvie was gone, she could eat only vegetables.

And not knowing why, vegetables tasted awful tonight.

Nina kept repeating her own words in her head. The word she used to describe their relationship. The more she forced herself not to think about it, the harder she found to keep Cameron’s painful look out of her head.

She tossed away the script and opened a wine.

However. Julian called. Nina’s first thought was that maybe something happened to Emelia.

However, she heard Julia ask, “Have you argued with Cameron?”

Nina was speechless.

Why did everyone ask her this question?

People argued only with close ones. She and Cameron were pretty much strangers at the moment, why would they argue? However, how did Julian know?

Thinking about this, Nina asked, “How did you know it?”

Julian snorted. “He called Emelia. She was about to sleep.”

“What? What’s wrong with him?” Nina was kind of speechless.

“Don’t you know?” Julian asked, his voice full of blame.

He booked the top floor of your hotel. He’s in a bad mood now. I hope he won’t do stupid things. If you have time, check on him.” “I don’t...” Nina wanted to say that she didn’t have time. But Julian had hung up the call.

Nina was angry.

Julian said that Cameron had booked the top floor of their hotel. Although the place where she filmed was relatively remote, the hotel here was incomparable to the luxurious ones in the city, yet it'd still cost a lot to book one entire floor.

There were only two president suits on the top floor. Even the crew couldn't afford it.

Thinking of the one million Cameron had taken from her, she felt pissed.

She didn't think that Cameron would do stupid things because he was not a child. Why would she check on him?

After the call, Nina walked around the room and finished almost half of the wine. She went to the top floor with a bit of drunkenness. She needed to talk with Cameron about the money.

If he went on wasting money like this, she wouldn't be able to afford it. She wouldn't spoil him like a prince.

The top floor was very quiet and spacious. Nina was kind of timid. Although she was now one of the most popular actresses, she had never lived in a president suit.

But then she thought to herself, technically she was the one who paid for it, so she got a bit more courage.

She took a deep breath and knocked on one of the doors.

There were only two rooms, she didn't know which one Cameron was at, but whatever.

The door opened, and a man in a robe appeared in front of her, emotionlessly.

She peered at his naked breast and instantly blushed.

She was kind of angry at herself. She glared at Cameron and complained, "Cameron, how dare you waste my money having fun here?"

Cameron said indifferently, "Did you pay me to get lost in your life? Why do you care about the money?"

Nina didn't know what to say. She kicked Cameron on the leg and snapped, "Then get lost, why are you still pestering me?"

She failed to kick him. Yet Cameron grabbed her arm and dragged her in.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 568 Popular with Men

Nina fell into his arms. He picked her up by the waist and carried her to the bedroom.

Nina knew what was going to happen. She sighed silently. Again! She struggled, wanting to get rid of him. "Let go!"

She was determined to escape. Therefore, she used a lot of strength to struggle. Cameron lost control of her and she got down from him and then, unexpectedly, fell on the sofa.

Cameron smirked, bent over, and trapped her on the sofa, saying, "You want to do it here?" Nina was so angry that she almost scratched his face, she thought, "What the hell are you talking about? Did you see I just fell?"

Before she could protest, however, Cameron had undressed his robe. Nina wanted to kick him yet when she moved, she felt a sharp pain in her ankle, she had hurt it.

Seeing this, Cameron stopped. He immediately went checking. "Did you hurt yourself?"

Nina nodded. When she saw his naked body, however, she immediately turned aside.

"Let me check." Cameron immediately got up from the sofa, half-knelt to check her foot.

Nina was suddenly shy. She didn't understand why. They had done things much more intimate.

She thought he must have kept his robe open on purpose. He could have tied it up yet he didn't. Now, his perfect muscles were right in front of her eyes.

She couldn't help but think, "What did he do these years? Working out on his body? Shouldn't he focus on his research?" He rubbed her ankle with his slender fingers, asking, "Does it hurt?"

"Yes." It didn't hurt much, to be honest. But out of prudence, Nina exaggerated.

Cameron seemed to have seen her through. He enforced his force on her ankle, and said, "It won't affect the sex."

Nina was pissed off. She grabbed the pillow beside her and threw it at him.

The man was not mad at all. He put the pillow back on the sofa, got up, and said, "I'll go get you some ice."

He sounded cold but gentle. Nina's heart beat faster.

She couldn't help it. He just knew how to please her. She liked his elegance, his calmness, and even his voice.

But...

Nina buried herself in the sofa and sighed heavily inside.

How happy would she be if love only concerned two people!

Soon he came back with an ice bag. It was so cold that Nina moaned. She was very sensitive.

Cameron was amused. He knew that she looked fragile, but she was stronger than anyone.

Nina was angry seeing him smile. She snorted, "Why are you so happy seeing me painful? It was all your fault!" "Okay, it was my fault." Cameron didn't argue this time, which kind of surprised Nina.

They looked at each other in the eyes.

Maybe it was the silence, Nina's heart beat faster and faster.

She took back her foot and said, "Thank you. It doesn't hurt anymore."

Cameron withdrew back his gaze, put away the ice bag, and said, "I's late, let's sleep."

Sleep? Nina immediately got up from the sofa, waving her hand. "No, I should go."

She had some negative connotation of the word "sleep", so she forgot what she had come here for. She only wanted to leave.

Cameron wouldn't let her go. He approached her and threatened, "If you stay, we'll sleep and do nothing else but if you insist on leaving, I'll have to fuck you."

Nina was astonished at his words.

She couldn't even accept the word "sleep".

Before she answered, her phone rang. She took it out and found it was Andrew Sonfield, an actor from the cast of Nina's current TV show.

This drama was mainly about how a female soldier grew strong. Most of the story was about the army, yet there was a romantic part too. And Andrew Sonfield was her boyfriend in the drama.

Nina didn't know how old Andrew was, and she wasn't interested to know, but they were about the same age. Out of respect, they call each other Mr. or Ms.

So Nina picked up the phone and asked, "Mr. Sonfield, what's up?" Andrew asked gently, "Are you in the hotel, Miss Sanchez?"] Nina lifted her brows. And instead of answering the question, she asked, "Is there anything I can do for you?"

Andrew smiled, saying, "You said on Twitter that you got allergic, I was allergic too a few days ago and the salve I used was very helpful, so I was thinking maybe I can bring you one."

Cameron sneered; he knew what this man was thinking about.

Nina knew it too. So she refused. "Thank you very much, but don't bother, you can bring it to the set tomorrow."

Sylvie had reminded her when she joined the crew that Andrew seemed to like her.
Because the way he looked at her was weird.

Nina didn't take it seriously. She was too beautiful. She had admirers in every crew, both famous ones, and unfamous ones. She was always very popular with men.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 569 You're Not Allowed to Leave

But Nina didn't expect Andrew would propose such a thing. It was simply inappropriate doing so late in the night, although the crew had booked these few floors.

Being refused, Andrew said, kind of embarrassed, "I was worried that it will get more serious if it was delayed, So I brought it to your room immediately after I came back. I didn't know you were not in the room."

He had a social activity today. He should mean that he brought the salve to Nina's room immediately when he came back. That was a lot of courtesy.

Nina said, smiling, "Don't worry, I'm feeling much better. I have something to tell my assistant so I am not going now. I'll take it tomorrow in the set. And we can grab a coffee together."

"Okay." Andrew couldn't do anything but agree. They hung up the phone after that.

Nina took a deep breath. She was suddenly glad that she had come to Cameron's room. Otherwise, if she opened the door for Andrew and was caught by the camera, she wouldn't be able to explain.

The paparazzi equipment was getting more advanced, which bothered the celebrities very much. Some paparazzi followed them wherever they went, or even stalk them with drones. There might be some hidden cameras in the hotels. Therefore, actors had to be careful all the time.

Nina had just finished the call when she heard Cameron's complaint, "You know he doesn't have any good intentions, why did you propose to have coffee with him?"

Nina said kind of grumpily, "What am I supposed to do otherwise? Taking his salve for granted?"

She didn't want to owe anything to Andrew. She had to stay away from him yet she couldn't just refuse him. After all, they were in the same crew.

Cameron snorted, "Why do you have to take it? You are not allergic anyway."

Then he glanced at Nina, his eyes seemed to be mocking her.

Indeed, she wasn't allergic. But someone captured her hickey at the press conference. It was all Cameron's fault.

Thinking of this, she was more pissed. "How can I refuse him? We are going to stay in the same crew for a long time. We'll act together."

Cameron pursed his lips, listening to her excuses. Then, he pressed her on the sofa, and said heavily, "You are not leaving tonight."

Then he pressed down on her and devoured her.

Nina's words made sense, yet he couldn't help feeling jealous when he thought that there was a man constantly trying to please her.

He had heard over the years that Nina had a lot of admirers. But when he saw it himself, he realized Viggo was not exaggerating at all, but rather, he underestimated the situation.

He had planned to give her a break tonight, but then he changed his mind.

The next morning, Nina was awakened by Sylvie's call.

"Nina, where did you go? Why aren't you in your room?" Sylvie asked anxiously. She went to wake Nina up this morning.

She knocked on the door several times but no one answered, so she opened the door, only to find it empty. She instantly got anxious.

" Nina stammered. She clenched her phone, not knowing how to respond.

She was tired, sleepy. She couldn't make out a reason.

"If you are too sleepy, just sleep for a bit longer." Cameron said beside her. Then approached to kiss her.

Sylvie was startled by the man's voice, she asked with a trembling voice, "Nina, where are you?"

Nina moaned; she couldn't speak. Cameron had occupied her lips.

That was too much!

Sylvie blushed. Then, she heard the man say at the other end of the call, "I'm Cameron, when does Nina start to work?" "Very soon!" Sylvie said.

Nina was about to be late, that was why she went to her room. Yet no one was there.

She then heard the man's charming voice again, "Can you ask a leave for her?"

Nina shouted at him, "Shut up!" Hearing this proposal, Nina immediately woke up. She had taken a leave for the press conference of "Princess Leilania".

She couldn't do it again.

And her role was important today. She can't make the entire crew wait for her. So she snatched her phone back and said to Sylvie, "I'll be there very soon. Please prepare some breakfast for me. Bring it to my room."

After reminding Sylvie, she turned around, and glared at Cameron, "Cameron, I have things to settle with you after I finish working today."

She had totally forgotten what he went to Cameron for last night.

After threatening Cameron " Nina got up and put on her clothes quickly. To avoid meeting anyone she knew in the elevator, she walked back to her room through the stairs, like a thief.

She took a quick shower. When she came out of the bathroom, she found Sylvie waiting outside with the breakfast.

Seeing Nina, who was in a towel, she immediately turned around and exclaimed, "OMG! You guys must have had a lot of fun last night."

Nina blushed; she then went back to her bedroom to change clothes. And before she left, she mocked Sylvie for knowing too much.

Sylvie signed, saying, "That's too risky. What if you guys were caught by the camera?" she asked, "Why don't you make your relationship public? So you won't need to worry about being caught." Otherwise, people would judge.

Nina was amused. She opened the door abruptly after changing her clothes. "Are you bribed by Cameron?" Sylvie immediately shook her head. "No, not at all." "Then why are you speaking for him?"

"I am not speaking for him." She was just impressed by the puppy love of Nina and Cameron. She didn't want to see them end up in tragedy. In addition, after meeting all kinds of celebrities, Sylvie thought Cameron and Nina were a perfect match.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 570 Avenger

Nina didn't have the time to argue. She took over the breakfast and rushed to the car to the set. She had her breakfast in the car.

However, after she finished eating, she had a stomachache, not knowing if it was because she had eaten too quickly.

She had always had a bad stomach. As an actress, she often had no time to eat. And she had been on a diet to keep fit, although it wasn't easy for her to get fat. However, she was greedy for food. So she often ate a lot and then nothing at all. That was how her stomach was damaged.

In the set, she came across Andrew. He handed the salve to her, saying, "Try this out, it's very useful." "Thank you." Nina took it over. And then she suddenly remembered that she had promised to have coffee with him.

She wanted to ask Sylvie to handle it. Yet Andrew went on saying, "Is your allergy alright? Girls' skin is very delicate. You must not be neglected."

Nina smiled, "It isn't serious. I'll try this salve."

She thought this was the end of the conversation yet Andrew didn't leave. He went on asking, "Why aren't there any marks on your arms? My arms are full of acnes." He then showed Nina his arms. Indeed, although he had dressed the salve, his allergies were still visible.

Nina lifted his brows, saying, "I guess each person has different symptoms. My arms are fine." Then, fearing that Andrew would continue the conversation, she quickly said, "Thanks for the salve. I need to go to the dressing room now." Then she left.

She got a feeling, however, that Andrew was testing her. He mentioned her arm on purpose. It seemed like he was doubting the red mark caught by the reporters was not from allergy.

But even if it was proved to be hickey. What could Andrew benefit from that? Nina couldn't understand.

The stylist was not in the dressing room. Nina asked Sylvie to buy coffee. Yet before Sylvie moved, the stylist came in with a coffee in her hand. She thanked Nina for it, "Darling, thank you for the coffee, it's very helpful in the morning." The stylist was a female, and she was very close to Nina. Therefore, she called her darling.

"Me?"

The stylist nodded. "Yea, didn't you treat everyone to a cup of coffee? It has just been delivered. And we each have one." Sylvie was confused.

She murmured to Nina. "But I haven't gone yet."

Nina was puzzled too. Then she suddenly thought of the person capable of doing such a thing. She called Cameron immediately.

"Did you order the coffee?" She went straight to the point.

"Yes." He sounded kind of lazy. "Is it delivered?" Nina suppressed her anger, and said, "Cameron, do you know that every penny you spent came out of my wallet?"

Nina didn't care about the money. She would have done the same thing. After all, it was weird to treat Andrew alone.

However, she couldn't stand Cameron, who had no job, no income, wasting money like this.

Cameron said innocently, "I knew it's your money, so I made the order under your name."

Nina was speechless.

It was not about the name.

Cameron continued, seemingly unhappy, "Nina, am I just a loser in your eyes?" Nina snorted, "If you are not, why did you even ask me for 1 million dollars?" "Well, maybe I was just..." He didn't finish the sentence.

Maybe he was just trying to approach her.

Sometimes she was smart, yet sometimes, she could be super dumb.

Taking a deep breath, Cameron explained in another way, "You know, as a top student, getting scholarships couldn't be easier for me."

He had founded his enterprise, from Tymers Entertainment to Camcien Lifetech, on his scholarship. He never asked his parents or friend for money.

"Are you saying that the money you spent is yours?" Nina said, lifting her eyebrows.

"Yes." Cameron answered.

"Interesting!" Nina sneered. "You better pay for your president suits with your own money." After saying that, she hung up the call.

She couldn't put up with his cockiness. He called himself a top student. She knew that was true in the past. But after so many years, he couldn't have been reduced to a bad student.

She thought that if he had paid the least attention to his study, he wouldn't end up like this.

She asked Manny Bowers for Cameron's current situation and Manny told her Cameron's life was miserable. And he talked about Cameron with great scorn, which broke Nina's heart. Otherwise, she wouldn't have agreed to give Cameron the money.

She couldn't stand seeing her loved one living such a miserable life, and being ridiculed by people like Manny.

Nina sat down with a long face. The stylist asked curiously, "Wasn't it you?" she then added, "Oh! I see. It must be one of your admirers who did it."

Nina rolled her eyes, saying, "I wish so. Yet I'm afraid it's not an admirer, but an avenger." Nina indeed felt like that Cameron was taking revenge on her for having dumped him for 1 million dollars.

Not knowing if it was because of her anger at Cameron, she felt her stomach hurt even more.