

TIMELESS LOVE

CHAPTER 11 BIT LEON DAVIS

Leon raised his glass and showed a polite smile on his lips. He responded to the greeting of Hathaway by doing so, and then he turned and left. When Hathaway looked up and drank, she glanced at his tall and straight back with her eyes full of drunkenness, and she secretly gnashed her teeth.

She really wanted to scratch the handsome face of Leon Davis!

Because of his doing nothing to save her from ruin, she had to sell the design company she had quietly run with her friend abroad to pay off her debts.

Although the size of that company was only her, her friend and two employees.

However, she started her own business step by step. This company had gone from being unknown at first to being famous now just like her child, which bore all her efforts, but now...

Hathaway didn't dare to go on thinking about it because it made her feel very distressed.

Drinking would make a weak person brave.

After the drinking had gone through three rounds, Hathaway's mood became very bad and she was full of resentment against Leon, so she blocked him in the corner of the corridor.

This time, she did not do this to seduce Leon but to vent her inner dissatisfaction!

Hathaway wrapped her arms around her chest in high heels and her beautiful chin was lifted up. She stared at Leon without fear. Leon just went back from smoking, so he still had a light tobacco smell.

He raised his eyes and glanced at her posture. He stepped around her and walked beside her, showing that he didn't want to talk to her at all. Hathaway went aside to stop him. After going back and forth several times like this, Leon finally looked at her helplessly and said, "What do you mean by doing this?"

Hathaway cursed angrily, "Leon Davis! You are a man without conscience!"

Leon said with an indifferent smile, "Since I didn't sleep with you, I have no conscience?"

Hathaway ignored his cynicism, stamped and accused him, "It's all your fault. You hurt my child, Purr..."

She suddenly covered her face with her hands and began to cry. Leon just felt helpless. How could this woman curse him inexplicably?

The impatience on his face was obvious. This time, he spoke more viciously, "I didn't sleep with you. How can you have my child? With all due respect, did you have the man for your child?"

He talked about her innocence and reputation again, and Hathaway was so angry that she couldn't feel sorry about her company but stared at him with her red eyes.

After a while, she rushed forward and grabbed his hand, and then she directly bit on his joint.

Although Hathaway wanted to scratch Leon's face, she didn't have the courage after all. Leon Davis was a famous person in South City. If she made his face ugly, she was afraid that she would suffer serious losses.

Leon didn't have any reaction and he simply hadn't expected that Hathaway would suddenly attack him.

After throwing her off, Leon glanced at the two rows of neat and deep teeth marks. He had a feeling that he was going to faint because of anger. "Hathaway Taylor, are you fucking crazy?"

Hathaway also broke out all the negative emotions and refuted him directly by looking at his terrible eyes. "I think you are the one with mental derangement. Don't you have the illness of loving men? Or do you suffer from impotence?"

Leon revealed a very gloomy expression.

What Hathaway did and said really touched his bottom line this time. To be exact, her remarks could touch the bottom line of any man.

He went up and grabbed her with his hand, and then she rudely carried her out. Hathaway struggled, "What are you going to do?"

Leon smiled, "What am I going to do? What can I do? Of course, I want you to see if I am impotent!"

Hathaway felt that Leon didn't want her to see if he was impotent but wanted to strangle her.

She turned around and began to shout.

"Barry!"

"Barry White!"

"Help!"

Her voice was too loud, so Leon kissed her directly in the corridor and leaned over to block her mouth.
