Chapter 389

Anyone Would Have Done The Same "Those are meant for you, anyway."

Samuel's voice was hoarse.

"I'll pay you," replied Kathleen.

"You don't have to." He shook his head. "But I'm going to wear them for the date with Ryder." The woman's bright eyes met with his. Samuel was stumped. "So let me pay you.

If not, it'd feel odd," came Kathleen's implicit remark. Samuel lowered his head.

"Just wear them.

Since I bought them for you, you can wear them as you wish."

After saying that, he walked past her. "Thank you.

You're such a kind person." Kathleen grinned. Samuel was rendered speechless. I don't want you to take me as just a kind person! After that, Kathleen went to freshen herself up. She took a light-yellow dress out of the closet. The dress had a square neckline that would reveal her collarbone.

It was a sleeveless piece, and the hem of the dress was slightly above the knee.

The overall style was fresh and youthful. When Kathleen came out wearing that dress, Samuel was completely stunned by that sight.

Of course, he knew better than anyone else how fair she was. Alas, she dressed up so beautifully only to date another man. Samuel felt he was on the verge of losing his mind. She certainly knows how to torture me. "I'm leaving," said Kathleen before leaving. Samuel gulped and turned to look out of the window. Ryder had come to pick Kathleen up, and he parked his car right at the entrance. Kathleen left the house and got into Ryder's car.

Shortly after, the two left. Samuel started coughing all of a sudden. The injury he had suffered was no match for the pain he felt at this moment. His face paled in mere seconds. He took his phone and called Tyson.

"Go find out where Kathleen and Ryder are going for their date."

Tyson was startled.

"Mrs.

Macari and Mr.

Xenakis are going on a date?"

"Cut the crap.

Go!" Samuel ordered sternly. "Yes." Tyson immediately hung up the phone.

Wearing a grim look, Samuel called the butler.

"Help me get changed and call the Macari residence.

Tell them I'm picking the kids up." The butler was shocked.

"Mr.

Macari, are you still going out even when you're injured?" "Yes.

Go get ready." Samuel nodded. "All right." The butler dared not go against his wish, so he could only do as Samuel instructed.

Samuel's charming face grew more solemn. I wonder what Kathleen and Ryder are doing now. As soon as Ryder saw Kathleen, his lips curled into a grin. Kathleen got into the car.

"Mr.

Xenakis, aren't you going to start the car?" Ryder started the engine.

"Where are we going?" Kathleen asked curiously.

"We're going to a resort, and it's located on the outskirts of the city.

It's a resort invested by one of my business partners.

They're having their soft opening today, so they told me to pay a visit.

That's why I thought of bringing you there to relax for a bit."
Kathleen nodded at his explanation.

It seems like the date is pretty different from what I expected.
"They have malls and places for movies there.

I bet you will like it," Ryder said confidently as though he could read her mind.
Kathleen felt a little embarrassed.

"I wasn't expecting too much, actually." "But I can tell you've put in a lot of effort in dressing up."

The man flashed her a half-smile, and Kathleen responded with a faint smile.

"I'm merely wearing a bright-colored dress." In truth, she did not even put on makeup and had only applied lipstick. Even so, she already looked exceptionally stunning. Ryder chuckled.

"I heard that Mr.

Macari is injured.

Is he okay?"

"Not really.

It's still hard to tell if his hand could recover fully.

Even after he recovers, it's not necessarily that he could still use his hand as he did in the past," said Kathleen, shaking her head.

"What a pity." Ryder's gaze darkened.

Kathleen lightly clenched her hand.

"He wouldn't have gotten hurt if he hadn't tried to save me."

Ryder gave her a meaningful look.

"Don't blame yourself.

No one wished for this to happen.

Under such circumstances, I would've done the same to protect you if I were there."

Kathleen stared at him without saying a word.

"Anyone else would've done the same," Ryder explained.

Anyone else would've done the same? Kathleen looked out of the window.

To Samuel, maybe there is no such saying. An hour later, they finally arrived at the resort.

The resort was lively and bustling with people.

It was obvious that they had just started the business. Ryder parked the car and said to her, "It's their soft opening today, so there are not too many people.

There will also be some reporters around, but of course, I'll not make you go in front of the cameras."

Kathleen went into a daze for a moment before she snapped back to her senses.

"Okay." Then, they got out of the car together. It was a sunny day.

Kathleen's fair skin seemed like it was glowing under the soft daylight.

Even though she had a fair complexion, she did not look sickly.

Her skin was slightly pinkish, and she looked just like a peach.

Ryder's gaze grew darker.

He held an umbrella over Kathleen's head. Kathleen froze for a second before replying, "Thank you." "You're welcome.

This way," said Ryder, grinning. "Okay." Then, she followed Ryder to the reception.

"Mr.

Xenakis, you're here." A man clad in a suit walked over.

"Of course, I'll have to pay a visit since you've invited me over. "After flashing the man a grin, Ryder said to Kathleen, "Let me introduce him to you.

He's my business partner, Leonard Sullivan." Looking at Leonard, Kathleen greeted, "Mr.

Sullivan, nice to meet you." Leonard was so startled that he cursed inwardly.

D*mn it! It's Kathleen! Why would she come with Ryder?

"Nice to meet you, too," came Leonard's reply.

When Ryder called Leonard the night before, the latter had thought that Ryder was bringing someone else over.

Leonard would not have expected him to come with Kathleen. Leonard had even prepared a room for Ryder, thinking that the latter could spend a pleasant time with his partner. Judging by the situation now, he would better forget about it. As compared to Ryder, Samuel was the one Leonard could not afford to offend. Leonard then instructed his assistant, "Go get the two key cards I've prepared for Mr.

Xenakis." Two cards? His assistant immediately caught the hint. Soon, his assistant brought the key cards over.

Leonard handed one to Ryder and another one to Kathleen.

"You can just tell them your room number when you're spending here.

There's no need to pay." "Thank you." Ryder accepted the card. Naturally, Kathleen took the card the card, too.

"Thank you." "I'll get someone to bring you there." Leonard was welcoming them warmly.

The staff then brought them to the resorts.

Kathleen and Ryder were staying indifferent resorts, but the buildings were right next to each other. After they left for their rooms, Leonard instantly called Samuel.

Despite his relatively calm tone, he sounded like he was gloating over Samuel's misfortune.

"Mr.

Macari, your woman followed Ryder to my resort here." Samuel wore a deadpan expression.

"I'm on my way there." "Didn't you say you're not coming to join the fun?"

Leonard shivered for a bit.

"Do you think I'm heading there just to join the fun?" Samuel questioned apathetically. "It doesn't seem like it." Leonard was full of guilt all of a sudden. "I brought Eil and Desi along." Samuel looked down at the two children sitting next to him.

"I'll be there soon." He ended the call as soon as he finished his words. Leonard stroked his chin as he pondered over Samuel's words. As expected from Samuel.

He truly has a knack for winning his wife's heart.

He's bringing the kids over.

I Like You Kathleen reached her room. She checked on her phone, only to see the system notifying her of Eil's and Desi's location. She froze for a moment. Ten kilometers away? Could it be that they're here too? As a matter of fact, Kathleen had gifted both of them two kid watches, which had a tracking system inside. She never thought that the watches would come in handy today. At the same time, Kathleen seemed to know who brought them there. With that thought in mind, she could not help but chuckle. Meanwhile, Leonard stood at the entrance to welcome Samuel. As the car slowly came to a halt, Samuel got out of the vehicle. Looking at the injury on Samuel's wrist, Leonard asked worriedly, "You brought the kids here all by yourself?" "Tyson's coming too," said Samuel coldly. Leonard was slightly taken aback.

"Is Tyson here to take care of the kids or you?"

Indifferently, Samuel replied, "I don't need someone to take care of me." "Me too." Eilam got out the car with Samuel. Although the former was still a kid, he could take care of himself well. Hearing Eilam's words, Leonard stared at him and began to ponder.

Eil is exactly like his father, even in the way they talk.

"The check-in procedure is done.

I'll bring you guys there." Leonard smiled. Samuel nodded in response. With that, Leonard and him got into the car together. Without delay, they started their journey and reached the resort's entrance very soon. Knowing that Samuel brought the children along, Leonard specially booked a children-friendly resort for them, which provided a small children's playground. In the backyard of the resort, there were slides, swings, and other fun facilities. Desiree liked the place very much. Eilam, however, was not a tad bit interested. He glanced at Samuel and uttered, "Daddy, I'll watch over Desi.

Go busy with your stuff." With that said, the little boy walked in the swing's direction and started reading a book.

Seeing that, Leonard crossed his arms and voiced enviously, "Mr.

Macari, could you tell me how to raise a kid so well? He's such a good boy.

How I wish I have a son like him!" Samuel's gaze turned intense.

"I've never taught him anything." Eil was dependable and sensible since young.

It's heart-rending to see him behaving this way.

A kid his age shouldn't be too mature.

I hope that he can grow up happily, albeit born a guy.

Unfortunately, being a Macari, it's almost impossible for him to enjoy a carefree childhood.

"Mr.

Macari, Kathleen is living right beside this resort." Leonard pointed at another resort not far away.

The resort where Kathleen was staying was a taller building.

In fact, she could easily spot them from her window. In the meantime, Leonard felt that he was well-intentioned.

Samuel gazed at him calmly.

"I brought them here to play, that's all." Hearing that, Leonard could feel the corner of his mouth twitch slightly.

Tsk! Who would believe that? Anyone who isn't a fool knows that he came with an ulterior motive. "If so, you should go and enjoy yourself with the kids.

There are electric tourist vehicles here.

“I’ll leave you guys to have fun,” mentioned Leonard. Right after saying that, he left.

Samuel then lifted his head to look at the resort afar while pursing his thin lips. At that time, the watch on Eilam’s wrist rang. It was a text from Kathleen that read: Why did your father bring both of you here? Eilam replied: I don’t think he brought us here to play.

Mommy, are you at the resort too? That text left Kathleen dumbstruck almost instantly.

Eil has quite a strong intuition! Kathleen: Yes. Eilam: Mommy, are you here alone?

Kathleen: No, of course.

I’m here with my male friend. Eilam: Will he be our new dad?

Kathleen was bemused by the littleboy’s words.

She replied: No. Eilam: Anyway, I know what Daddy is up to by coming here.

Kathleen was curious,so she asked: What is it? Eilam: To stop you. Feeling puzzled, Kathleen replied: Stop what? Eilam: You’re seeing someone else.

He’s here to interrupt you, undeniably. An unexpected burst of laughter escaped from Kathleen at his text.

Kathleen: I’m afraid that his plan may not work.

Eilam was rendered speechless.

Kathleen: Doyou want me to go over and find you guys? Eilam: Don’t worry, Mommy.

Enjoy your time here with your friend.

After all, you and Daddy are divorced. Kathleen beamed and replied: Okay.

I will! Eilam: All right. Meanwhile, Kathleen smiled faintly. Will Samuel be angry if he knows what Eil saidto me? It was at that moment the doorbell rang out of the blue. Hearing that, Kathleen went to open the door. Ryder was standing outside.

He changed his attire from a while ago into his casual wear.

Just now, he was wearing a suit, looking extremely professional.

After changing into a different outfit, he looked even more elegant. "Let's go out for a spin.

Then, we can have lunch together afterward." Ryder flashed her a smile.

"Sure." Kathleen nodded.

She packed her stuff and followed him out.

They then went to the backyard and drove off in the electric tourist vehicle. Their vehicle happened to drive past the resort where Samuel was staying. At that time, Samuel was on the second floor and spotted them from the window.

His eyes turned maliciously bloodshot as he watched them from above.

He knew that he had no right to get furious.

Nonetheless, he could not control his emotions.

"Mr.

Macari, it's time for you to take your medicine." Tyson walked over with a glass of water.

He responded gruffly, "I'll take it after having my meal.

Go and get Eil and Desi here.

Let's go for lunch together." "Sure." Tyson nodded. Afterward, he went downstairs and asked the two children to get prepared.

A moment later, Samuel came down as well.

"Daddy! I've only been playing for a while.

I still want to play," complained Desiree. Gently, Samuel responded, "Be a good girl.

Let's go eat first." "But I'm not hungry." The little girl patted on her stomach.

In fact, they had just eaten when Samuel went to fetch them earlier. "You will be hungry later.

Let's go," replied Samuel, his gaze darkening slightly. After giving his remark, he grabbed Desiree's hand and departed.

Tyson and Eilam followed closely behind as they made their way to their destination. The latter heaved a sigh inwardly. On the other side, Ryder brought Kathleen to wander around the place. Both of them were not starving yet. The scenery there was breathtaking.

As the water shimmered under the sunlight, the lake looked stunning.

Besides, the resort was not opened to the public officially, so the place was not crowded and was extraordinarily quiet.

After parking the Carin a shaded place, Ryder gazed at the lake and asked Kathleen, "How do you feel?" Kathleen nodded.

"It's pretty nice.

The scenery is picturesque.

Furthermore, it's not crowded here, so it's very relaxing." "I knew you'd like it here." A wide grin started to form on Ryder's handsome face.

He looked genuine and innocent, like a young boy, when he smiled. Noticing that, Kathleen was taken aback.

"Ryder, do you like me?" He was stunned by her frank query.

"You don't have to look at me like that.

I'm not stupid, and you're acting way too obvious," said Kathleen quietly.

He stared at her with an intense gaze.

"Judging from your straightforwardness, I assume you're not interested in me at all, right?"

The unexpected question flustered Kathleen as well.

"Why do you say so?" "If you like me, it would give you butterflies in your stomach at the beginning of our relationship.

However, you aren't shy around me by asking me something so direct.

Hence, I'm certain that you don't like me," Ryder muttered frankly.

She nodded, confirming his deduction.

"Sorry, Ryder.

I don't like you." The man chuckled and replied, "Kathleen, I've liked you for a very long time."

"What?" Kathleen was stunned upon hearing that.

"I've seen your performance on stage when I went to your school in the past.

Since that day, I have had a crush on you.

Nevertheless, knowing about what happened between you and Samuel, I decided not to interfere," explained Ryder in a husky voice.
