

The Pinnacle of Life Chapter 244

'The manufacturing cost of Blood Energy Pills isn't too much. In fact, the rate of efficiency of making these pills is quite high. I was able to make thirty pills in a single pot. In the future, I ought to make a lot more and keep them around just in case they're needed.' Alex Rockefeller was lost in thought as he walked out from the basement.

He suddenly bumped into Maya Howards.

After resigning from Dorothy Assex's company, Maya seemed to have changed the way she dressed. Now, she wore extremely short pants that showed part of her butt. She also had on a pair of thin, gray leggings that highlighted her long and attractive legs.

Although Alex didn't have a thing for legs, he was still mesmerized by the sight.

"Alex, come help me out with moving stuff." Maya waved at Alex before pointing at the trunk of her Benz.

When Alex got closer, he could smell something fragrant.

It wasn't the smell of perfume. Instead, it was something natural. People who had physical characteristics like this were very rare, but Maya happened to be one of them. After exercising, the scent grew even stronger, and it was tantalizing to say the least.

"That's a lot of stuff. Are you moving here for good?" Alex asked sarcastically.

"Yeah. Am I not welcome?" Maya asked.

“Ahem. Of course, you are.”

However, in reality, she wasn't really moving in. The truth was that she was going over to Michigan next week so she was going to terminate her rental contract in her previous place.

Indeed, she had always been renting in California because she wasn't from the area.

Her original home was in North Tokyo.

Maya didn't have many relatives back in North Tokyo and her parents spent most of their time overseas and were rarely home anyway. She didn't seem very close to them.

“Why didn't you tell me before that you were moving so much stuff? I could've helped you!” Alex exclaimed.

“You should be embarrassed. I tried calling you on the phone, but you didn't pick up. Did you block my number?” Maya rolled her eyes.

“How's that possible? My phone... ” Alex trailed off.

Suddenly, he recalled that his phone was still in Cheryl Coney's office!

“Ouch. My waist hurts a little. I accidentally hurt myself when I was walking up the stairs,” Maya said.

“Do you want me to help you with that?” Alex asked.

“Can you actually fix this too?”

“Sure. You can help me with it, but don’t make it worse.” Maya warned.

Alex immediately agreed and asked Maya to lie on the couch.

However, Alex nearly fainted at the sight of her long legs clasped tightly together. It was the most wonderful sight he had ever seen.

After trying very hard to calm himself down, Alex used his Chi to massage her. Later on, he activated the Silver Frost technique for her. After giving her a few pills to swallow, the sound of her bones shifting back in place could be heard.

Maya was shocked.

Suddenly, she couldn’t hold her fart in anymore and farted loudly. Her face immediately turned red. She wanted to hide in a hole somewhere.

Of course, this had happened because of the pills Alex gave her.

“Your fart was so strong that your pants nearly came apart!” Alex laughed loudly. Maya was too embarrassed to lie still. She quickly got up and ran away.

An hour later, Alex quickly rushed over to Premier Hospital in California.

The woman who didn't receive Alex's treatment of Seven Needles of Exorcism was now experiencing a significant change in her condition.

Her entire body was spasming and she was frothing at the mouth. It seemed quite similar to what Rose Carson had experienced the day before.

The woman's father was panicking. He pulled Clarence Fawl aside and started questioning him loudly. "Doctor, what's going on with my daughter? Why is this happening all of a sudden? Why are all the other patients fine but not my daughter? Explain yourself!"
