

The Pinnacle of Life Chapter 487

Alex took out a wooden artifact from her purse. Its appearance was of a stake for exorcism. It had a tapered tip with a cylindrical handle, and was about fifteen centimeters long. It was black in color with hints of red. In fact, when Alex entered Serena's villa last time, he could sense a faint malicious Yin energy with vampiric impulses coming from her. Later, he could feel a stronger evil energy from her purse.

The hints of red found on the stake were actually bloodstains.

The whole artifact was polished from the core of an ancient locust tree that was struck by lightning. Runic scriptures and the avatar of a hideous demon were engraved onto it. It was quite terrifying at first glance.

It was unknown where Serena got her hands on the Stake of Exorcism. It was actually a cursed object as its body was soiled with the blood of many evil beings. However, Serena actually brought the demise upon herself by carrying it around in her purse daily.

If the Stake of Exorcism were to be possessed by a spirit, she would have to spit three liters of blood. More importantly, it was really possessed. As a result, she bore the brunt of it, she had an unwed pregnancy, bearing a haunting fetus inside her belly that would be born on this very day.

Extremely embarrassed, Serena said, "You... What are you doing with this? Give it back to me!"

Alex snickered. "Are you tired of living already? Do you know what this is? It's a mystical tool used specifically to quell demonic creatures. The blood of countless demons and evil entities has been stained on it. Do you see the hints of red? Isn't it extraordinarily enchanting? You don't think that they are aesthetic paints, do you? These are the results of the perennial bathing in demonic blood. Well, you used it to... Hmph!"

“Ah!” Serena was stunned as she looked at the Stake of Exorcism with full of fear on her face.

“Where did you get this from?” asked Alex.

Serena stammered, “I... I bought it from a shop during my trip to the western highlands.”

Alex shook his head and was bereft of speech.

“This item will only bring you nothing but trouble if it ever remains with you. I’ll take it away and deal with it,” he said indifferently.

“Okay. Okay.” Serena wouldn’t dare to touch that thing anymore, she would get a nightmare if she ever thought of it.

Alex nonchalantly put it in his pockets, but he was happy deep down.

The Stake of Exorcism was actually a mystical tool that lived up to its name, and the materials used for crafting were conscientious. More importantly, it had gained an evil attribute after consuming the blood of countless demonic beings. It could be used to vanquish most of the evil entities.

As for the stake which had been used by the old woman Serena to... Cough, cough, the pros outweigh the cons anyway!

As long as the stake were to be processed a little, it should be just a small issue.

“Rockefeller... Master Rockefeller, about this thing on my belly... How do I deal with this?”

She lifted up her shirt, exposing the black spot on her belly button. At this moment, the black spot once again expanded, and it was already as big as a bowl. It was a frightening sight as a human face was faintly visible on it.

After thinking for a while, Alex took out the Stake of Exorcism again and said, "Since this stake is the instigator of this issue, then we'll use it to cure your illness!"

After flipping his hand and turning the Stake of Exorcism for several cycles, he suddenly asked with a strange expression on his face, "This stake of yours, did you wash it?"

"I did, it's as clean as it ever could be." Serena nodded immediately.

"Well then."

Alex bit his tongue and spat out a mouthful of blood onto the Stake of Exorcism.

Condensing his Chi onto his fingertip and using blood as a medium, he scribbled a bloody rune onto the stake. Then, he spat out another mouthful of blood onto Serena's belly.

"Seal!"

In the next moment, Serena was surprised to find that the huge black spot on her belly started to disappear at a speed that was visible to the naked eye. Wisps of black smoke came out of her belly and entered the Stake of Exorcism.

A few moments later, the black spot on Serena's belly button had disappeared completely.