

The Triplet Alphas

Evan chuckled silently as the warriors felt all pumped up and started gathering around the circle. Ethan stepped into the circle with a grinning face and tied his long hair into a low ponytail using the rubber band that always rested on his wrist. Five warriors stepped into the circle and the rest cheered.

"What do you think?", he asked his youngest brother, Econ, who was standing beside him.

"I think he is going to do it", Econ said, and not long after, Ethan removed his t-shirt. Displaying his perfectly toned muscles and eight-pack abs, he looked at the female warriors and unmated omegas who were present for the training. One look from Ethan brother and Evan felt the shift of mood in the air. While the girls started cheering and swooning over his body, a few young and teen warriors looked at him with respect and admiration. But for most warriors, who had already seen this countless times, they started booing and yelling about focusing on the match.

Respecting the tradition, Ethan bent down and touched the ground, picking a few grains of dust and applying it on his forehead. The ve warriors who were inside the circle, did the same thing and stood in different positions, ready to defend against any attack.

"Here I come boys", Ethan said before whispering Kabaddi, Kabaddi...

Being born to Moon Night Pack, the triplets were talk of the town the moment they were born. Their father, Edward Moon Knight, the former Alpha of our pack, and their mother, Ana Moon Knight, the acting Luna of our Pack, did a great job raising them and governing the Pack. The wolves of the Moon Night pack love and admire their Alpha and Luna to the point they respect and think of them as their God. Evan, being the eldest, was always drawn to be more assertive and authoritative, while Ethan, being the typical middle child, enjoyed all the limelight. Econ, the youngest, was always calm and quiet and, because of this, many assumed he was shy, while that wasn't the case at all. Even though they were identical triplets and just had a difference of seven minutes, their personalities were completely different.

From their early childhood, Evan was always the stoic and stern one. He loved being in charge and taking care of his two younger brothers like a pro. Ethan, on the other hand, had always had a thing for attention and that's why he was always the most popular. Their mom used to say, all the mothers back then wanted Ethan as either their son or son-in-law. The saga continued throughout all the school and universities, since he was always surrounded by a bunch of girls and boys who admired him, loved him and would do anything crazy just for his one glance. Econ, on the other hand, was completely opposite and different from both me and Ethan. Unlike his elder brothers, he was always calm and quiet. In a room full of people, he would just look at everyone and observe them from far rather than being talkative and mingle. Having the Alpha gene and their mom being the epitome of beauty, the triplets were all blessed with good looks naturally.

Last year, just before their 24th birthday, the three of them went to India for a long holiday. Impressed by the culture and people of the country, they ended up over staying and during that period learned different types of food, games, practices and so on. Kabaddi being one of the oldest games and forms of physical exercise in India, where people were divided into two groups. One person from each group would go to the opponent's arena and try to touch one of the opponents and come back to his side successfully. The teams took turns and the game usually ends with one team losing all of its members.

"Come on Ethan, show them what you got", their Beta Henry yelled from the top of his lungs. Just then, Ethan looked at his brothers and winked at Henry, smirking, without losing his focus and his breath. Everyone was moving so precisely and with the utmost precaution. Kabaddi itself was very fun from the very beginning, but in order to make it more interesting, they all went above and beyond, that includes head slamming each other, breaking a few bones here and there. But even wolves had certain limitations, that's why any fatal blow that could lead to something serious was absolutely prohibited.

"Kabaddi... kabaddi...", Ethan kept whispering and moving his feet sideways slowly. Just as he was about to touch one of the warriors, the warrior was quick enough to react and held Ethan's nger instead. Applying a little pressure, he twisted Ethan's nger, making him lose his focus for a second, which was enough for the rest of them to gang up on Ethan.

The warriors growled and whistled, conveying their love for their fellow warriors as Ethan struggled to break free from the barrier of the ve opponents. All of them were taking one step closer and closer, in an attempt to completely trap Ethan so he would never be able to free himself in the given time of one minute.

Everyone's focus was on the match, as time was going so fast. While the warriors were anticipating to defeat him, he knew his brother very well. He knew Ethan was just toying with everyone to build up the dramatic tension, so when he broke free, it would make him look like some sort of action movie star. Just as he hoped, at the last few seconds, Ethan jumped in the air as high up as he could, in the limited space. While the four warriors were confused and shocked, the fth one was quick enough to think at the moment and he jumped in the air. Just as Ethan was about to do a back ip, the warrior yanked back Ethan's ankle and both of them fell on the other warriors with a loud audible thud.

The warriors groaned simultaneously while Econ and Evan focused on Ethan's struggle. With the ve of them grabbing his legs, hands and ankles, he was nding it hard to even crawl on the ground.

" Come on Ethan, don't embarrass me like that ", Evan said loudly, cheering up his younger brother.

Hearing this, he gave Evan an annoyed look and cursed at him. Everyone's interests piqued as he started to crawl on the ground with all of his strength, dragging the warriors with them.

Ten...

Nine....

Eight....

The warriors were counting in chorus and everyone's heart was beating rapidly. Only seven seconds remained and Ethan was a mere an inch away from the midline. Everything started to feel like moving in slow motion as the voices disappeared and vision blurred. They all had only one focus which was Ethan's right hand, which was slowly moving up, despite all the restrictions.

Fooooouurrrrrr....

Tthhhhhreeeeee.....

The voices mued more than ever and everything came to a halt when Ethan's hand touched the mid-line. In a second, everything went back to normal as the warriors shouted and whistled, celebrating the victory of their alpha. With a smile on their faces, both Econ and Evan were about to take a step forward when Evan felt a burning sensation in my hand. The sensation was so strong that he felt like someone just dipped his hand in the hottest ame. He looked at Econ and he looked shocked and surprised too.

" Silence ", he growled loudly using his Alpha voice and everyone shut up, confused as ever.

"Gavin, what's happening?", he asked his wolf, worried about something had happened to his parents.

Before his wolf could respond, he received a mind link and the triplets started to run towards the pack inrmary followed by their beta and a few warriors.

Ignoring the commotion outside the inrmary, they all ran towards the ICU. Evan's mind was racing at a million miles per minute and he could feel his brothers going through the same thing. Being identical triplets, they could all feel what the other was feeling. The noises of someone's growling and shouting made them all run faster than ever and within a second, they were in the ICU, standing in front of their mother.

Before one of them could even look at the Luna, a loud thunderous growl from the other side made them stunned and shocked. Their eyes travelled to the source of the growl and Evan saw four nurses trying their best to hold one girl. Just then, the girl looked at the triplets and their eyes met. Evan's wolf Gavin howled in pleasure as Evan started into that girl's amber-green eyes. But that feeling didn't last for long as in a second, she screamed louder than before, stomping her foot and thrashing her hands.

Seeing her like this, he subconsciously released his pheromones and his brothers did the same thing. As all of their pheromones started to hit her and she slowly became quiet and stable. It didn't take long to sedate her and let her sleep peacefully.

*****

Ethan's heart raced a million miles per second as all of us entered the room. Before he could even look at his mother, a sweet scent of natural honey hit his nose. He felt his wolf Nathan's presence in his consciousness and turned his neck towards the source of this intoxicating scent. His breath hitched, his limbs froze and he felt his heart pounding inside his chest as he looked at the source of the scent. Held by four nurses, with her long black hair and amber-green eyes, she looked like an absolute goddess to him.

"Mate", Nathan howled in his head while he continued staring at her.

Her out of the blue screams disturbed his sweet admiration and he looked at his brothers who were also xated on the girl in front of them. Suddenly she started being more violent, thrashing her legs and arms, so Evan released his pheromones. Understanding the situation, he did the same thing and too their combined pheromones soothed her. Within a second she fell asleep and, just as he had imagined, she looked like an angel from heaven while sleeping.

"Boys", their mother shouted, and he immediately turned my head towards her.

"Mom", all of them said simultaneously and surrounded her since she was the reason they all came here in the rst place.

"What happened?", Evan asked.

"Are you okay?", Ethan asked.

"What happened to your hand?", Econ inquired.

As Econ mentioned the hand, others looked at it and their eyes widened when they noticed the blue marks.

" What's this?", they all asked simultaneously and their mother started explaining things.

All of them were horried after listening to everything. How could someone so angelic do such damage? After getting theie mother checked up and cleaned up, they summoned the guards and nurses who were present at the sight. After listening to them, they decided it was best if that girl was transferred to the south wing of the inrmary, far away from the wolves.

"Do you think she will be comfortable here?", Evan asked, looking at her. Ethan didn't say anything, neither did Econ, so all of them just stood there in silence and watched their mate, who was snoring lightly.

*****

Econ's mind was busy processing all the things that he had just heard while his wolf Cole had been yapping and purring inside my head continuously. Never in his life had he imagined that he would meet his mate under these circumstances. Being identical triplets, it was always clear to them that they were going to share a mate and they were all okay with it, since they were used to sharing things. Back in high school, even though they were the heartthrobs and many wolves, including male and female, wanted to have some fun and adventurous nights with them, they never dated anyone. They had grown up seeing theire father's love for their mother and they three made a vow to give that kind of love to their mate. At their eighteenth birthday all of them were excited, hoping this would be the year for them to feel divine love. But sadly, that didn't happen as they never met their mate. The little hope they had started to icker and waiver as, year after year, they didn't nd the other half of our soul. Being frustrated and hopeless, Evan started training and managing pack business, while Ethan started to have countless adventurous nights. Econ found a way to release my frustration through some other activities. At the age of twenty-ve, when they e were almost sure that they would never get a chance to meet their mate, fate played with them a big time literally dropping their mate in their laps.

"Do you think she will be comfortable here?", Evan asked.

Looking at her face and hearing the light snores coming from her mouth, he get the feeling she would indeed be comfortable here.

"What do you think we should do with her?", he asked, not wanting to waste more time by staring at her.

As expected, both Evan and Ethan didn't say anything, they were also too confused, just like him.

"I don't know what to do with her now, but it's clear that she isn't what she looks like. Just a scratch from her claw and we all saw what mom's hand looked like. So we can't allow her to leave", Evan said, taking a deep breath.

" I think we should search for the lake again, where the warriors supposedly found her. Perhaps we could nd something they had missed. From all the things we heard, it was still quite suspicious how an almost harassed girl appeared right in front of our pack border, poisoned our mother with a single scratch despite mom being nice to her and taking care of her for the past week and not to mention, she is our mate", he said with a deep sigh.

" You got that right, given how her face looks so innocent and angelic, it's hard to imagine how she managed to poison mom with a single scratch. I think, as for right now, we should keep her under observation and station six to eight guards along with four nurses. They will be instructed to report everything directly to us", Econ said.

Both Evan and Ethan agreed to his suggestion and immediately called for eight warriors along with four nurses. After explaining to them everything, the triplets explicitly ordered the warriors to inform the. directly even if a small incident occurs. Once that was taken care of, Ethan went to check on mom while Evan and Econ, along with Gamma Theo, went to the exact spot from where their mysterious mate was rescued. Even after searching for an hour or so, they didn't nd anything substantial. Feeling dejected and disappointed, they all went back to the pack house and resumed their work.