

Triplets On SM 1061

Chapter 1061-of time.

She didn't expect that there was such an existence as " martial art families".

If it weren't for the clinics this time, she probably wouldn't have known about such things her whole life.

At that moment, she seemed to have suddenly remembered something. "By the way, what was that Unbounded Land you just mentioned?"

"It's the name of a place. It was said that when martial arts were deteriorating hundreds of years ago, the marital art families went to hide there to protect themselves. You can see it as a country. There are lots of forces of different scales in there. Apart from what I've just told you, the major martial art families are split into two major forces. One is the Grandset and the other is the Martial Art Union. They are the two dominant forces within Unbounded Land."

Selon told Molly everything he knew and held nothing back.

Molly quickly realized what was going on. "So that's what's happening."

She had never heard anything about the Unbounded Land.

What had never thought there was such a place in the world.

However, after Selon's introduction, she finally realized the cause and effect of this trip to Domster.

"Does this mean that when we go to Domster, we're going to come in contact with the martial art families? Will it be dangerous? If what you said is true and the martial art families are as powerful as you say, then they're not easy to deal with. If we offend them by accident, then what will the result be? I think the Shepard family is also going because of the Treasure of Ancient Medicine, right?"

When Molly asked the questions, her voice was sharp.

Selon paused. He didn't deny what Molly was saying. "That's right. You should know that the Shepard family has thousands of ancient books. If we're able to fully understand the books then it would be a great thing for the family."

"To you, it may be a great thing, but to other doctors, not so." Molly quickly pointed out the downside.

Domster was already in chaos at the moment. Everyone agreed to go because they wanted to save lives.

However, the martial art families were now involved. No one knew what would things be like when they arrived in Domster.

It was obvious that Selon knew about this.

He had already prepared himself.

"I know what you're worried about, Dr. Joye. That's why I've already told the elders in the family that my goal this time is to save lives and my team will not be involved in other things. The elders agree with me as well and they've arranged extra men to protect our medical team. On top of that, I've also sent men to notify the other doctors of the situation as well. If they feel it's too dangerous then they are free to drop out. They can make that decision before we set off tomorrow."

With that said, Selon looked at Molly. "Dr. Joye, what's your decision? I can understand if you want to drop out."

Molly didn't give an answer immediately. Instead, she hesitated for a while.

Selon was being very sincere and told her everything. He had also made arrangements for the doctors who would be going along as well. He was being very responsible.

Molly felt that she would be the unreasonable one if she was to drop out.

Their purpose was going there to save lives anyway.

However, there was something she wanted to check with Selon first.

“Mr. Shepard, when the trip to Domster ended, if you were able to get your hands on the Treasure of Ancient Medicine, is our deal about reading the ancient books still on?”

This was something the Shepard family had agreed with prior to this.

Selon smiled when she heard the question. He then replied confidently, “That will not change. It’s a promise that the Shepard family made anyway. However, you should know that you will have to fight for such a chance yourself.

Whoever makes the most contribution going to Domster this time will be able to read more of the ancient books.”

With that said, the smile on Selon’s face widened. “I have quite a lot of faith in you.”

Chapter 1062-Molly was finally able to feel relieved. “That’s alright then. I’m not planning on dropping out of this trip to Domster.”

When Selon heard those words, he breathed a sigh of relief and smiled.” Looks like I’m not wrong about you, Dr. Joye.”

Then, he stood up and said, “Since we’re sorted here, it’s getting late. You should get some rest. I won’t keep you up any longer and I’ll see you tomorrow morning.”

“Okay. See you tomorrow morning.”

Molly stood up as well and said goodbye to Selon.

Selon quickly left the courtyard.

Molly only went back to her room after Selon had left.

When she was lying on her bed, all she could think of was what Selon had just told her.

Things about the martial art families and Unbounded Land.

All the unfamiliar terms kept on repeating themselves in her mind. This caused her to only fall asleep after a long time.

When she woke up, the sun was already up.

Molly didn't sleep well, so she felt a little dizzy.

However, everyone would gather in the morning, so she quickly got up, washed and ate breakfast.

After she finished doing those things, she brought her luggage and went to meet up with Selon and the others.

Meanwhile, at the entrance of the Shepard family's courtyard.

A lot of medical teams who were going along had already gathered there.

Most of them looked very experienced and they were mostly in their middle ages.

There were a lot of men and women.

When Molly showed up, she attracted the attention of a lot of people.

She was too young and was very good-looking.

She not only had snow-white skin, but her facial features and temperament were also magnificent.

Molly didn't seem to fit the picture standing there in the crowd.

Someone couldn't help but mumble, "She can't be one of the clinic doctors this time, can she?"

"She's too young. Is she up to the task?"

'Maybe she's a member of the Shepard family? She doesn't look like she's an ordinary person. She is probably an equal match to Mr. Shepard...' Just when everyone was having a discussion, Molly pretended not to hear anything. She walked to the crowd and stood at the side.

At that moment, Selon saw her and quickly walked over.

"Good morning, Dr. Joye."

'Morning."

Molly nodded and scanned the medical teams who had arrived. She made a rough estimate in her heart and said, "Looks like some people dropped out?"

You're just a little short of 100 people here."

Molly had found out, so Selon didn't hide anything. He said honestly,"

About a dozen doctors dropped out."

Molly wasn't surprised to hear this.

After all, not everyone had the courage to face an unknown danger.

Dropping out was actually quite a smart move.

Molly didn't say anything, she just nodded her head.

Then, she looked at the middle-aged man beside Selon.

The man had a serious expression on his face and his eyes were sharp. He was also emitting a strange aura.

Out of politeness, Molly asked, "Mr. Shepard, who is this?"

"This is Uncle Jose Shepard, a distant relative of my family. He's also my father's assistant," said Selon.

Molly immediately knew what he meant and quickly greeted the man politely.

"Greetings, Mr. Shepard."

The man had a very cold attitude. He nodded in response and then just ignored Molly completely.

"Everyone should be here by now, let's set off," the man said to Selon.

Selon didn't mind, so he nodded. "Okay, I'll go make the arrangements right now."

Soon, the Shepard family's cars gave the entire medical team a lift to the airport.

The Shepard family had booked a whole plane, especially for this clinic.

Everyone boarded the plane in an orderly manner. Molly was arranged to be in the business class.

She didn't say anything about such an arrangement.

She came on this trip to save lives and not for a holiday, so she didn't mind where she was sitting.

After putting her cabin luggage in the overhead compartment, Molly sat down, took out her phone and sent Sean and members of her family a text saying that she was about to take off.

Then, she turned her phone off.

Chapter 1063-was a little surprised and asked, "Shouldn't you be in first class, Mr.

Shepard?"

When Selon heard those words, he smiled. "There are a lot of elders going on this trip today. As a junior, I don't need to be sitting in such a good seat. It's the same here."

Molly nodded and didn't say anything.

After the plane had taken off, Selon introduced their route to Molly." Domster is currently in chaos. A lot of cities have fallen. Right now, only the capital is relatively safe, but the plane won't be going there. We will be landing on the border and then enter Domster by car."

"I'll follow your arrangements," said Molly.

The two of them talked to each other for a while. Molly didn't sleep well the night before, so she took out her eye blinder and was about to get some rest.

Sleep would probably become a luxury when they arrive in Domster.

Therefore, Molly would need to get as much sleep as she could.

Seeing this, Selon didn't bother her. He then leaned back on his seat and fell asleep as well.

Neither of them saw Jose, who was standing between the first class and business cabins with his brows furrowed. He was looking at the two of them with eyes full of disagreement.

'It's not a good thing for Master Selon to be too close to this woman!' he thought.

Molly had slept very well this time.

When she woke up, the plane was about to land.

After they got off the plane, the Shepard family arranged for cars to be waiting for them outside the airport.

Everyone got into their cars. When they arrived in Domster, it was already over four hours later.

For a country to be at war, a lot of basic facilities were destroyed. The street lamps on either side of the roads were all tilted. The darkness of the night made the environment seem cold and frightening.

On top of that, the road to the slums was very bumpy.

At first, it wasn't a problem for everyone.

However, a few hours later, most of the people felt like they were going to throw up.

There were a few who couldn't take it anymore and did actually throw up.

Molly frowned and was just hanging in there, but she didn't look too well either.

She suppressed how upset her stomach was feeling all the way.

About eight hours later, they arrived at the slums.

As soon as the crew got off their cars, Selon realized that Molly's face was very pale.

He was concerned and passed a bottle of water to her. "How about some water?" "Thank you." Molly didn't reject the water. She took the bottle and drank a few mouthfuls.

This allowed her to surprise the butterflies in her stomach.

She then raised her head and saw the scene in front of her.

The slums after the war were in a state of devastation. Most of the buildings had collapsed. Some of which were even burnt. Collapsed walls could be seen everywhere.

Black mist filled the air and wasn't going away so easily.

The whole city looked like it was dead. There was no life except the people who had just arrived. The whole place was desolate.

It was obvious that this was the first time the medical crew had seen such a scene. All of them were dumbfounded and couldn't come back to their senses.

Molly's reaction was also the same.

She could almost imagine what kind of disaster this city suffered.

Molly took a deep breath to force herself to calm down. She then asked Selon, "Where are all the injured?"

The person who answered that question was Jose. His voice was cold and he didn't even look at Molly. "They're all kept deep into the slums. All the medical teams from all over the world are there as well. We can head straight there."

Molly was used to Jose's attitude.

He had never been nice to her throughout the journey.

She guessed that Jose didn't like her because her name had been removed in the past.

However, she didn't really care.

To Molly, Jose was just an elder of the Shepard family.

He wasn't anyone important.

Chapter 1064-'Then let's not waste any more time and be on our way. I think there will be a lot of wounded waiting for US to treat them.'

As Molly said that, she dragged her luggage with her and walked forward.

When the others saw what Molly was doing, they quickly came back to their senses and followed.

Jose and Selon were both behind Molly.

The former looked at Molly's figure from behind and frowned. He then said to Selon in a warning tone, "You don't need to be so close to this Dr. Joye. You, showing so much concern for her is already making other people talk about you behind your back. You're the son of the Shepard family and is the leader of this operation. Nothing can happen to you."

Selon was a little stunned at first and then replied, "I'll keep that in mind." He might have said that he would keep that in mind, but somehow, Selon still wanted to take care of Molly.

It was probably because she was special.

She had a good personality and good medical skills, which made Selon admire her.

Jose seemed to know Selon's thoughts. He furrowed his brows even more. He wanted to say something but was interrupted by Selon. "Uncle Jose, let's go.

The situation is unclear at the moment. Let's go and meet up with the medical team sent by the military. Don't you also want to find out things about martial art families?"

When Jose heard those words, he had no choice but to do as Selon said.

The two of them continued towards the center of the slums.

Meanwhile, in the capital of Domster, Ferro City.

Within one of the luxurious villas located in the center of the city.

Sean was sitting on a sofa and kept on dialing Molly's number.

A mechanical female voice sounded from the speakers. "Sorry, the number you have dialed is currently unavailable..."

Sean furrowed his brows and hung up. A flash of impatience appeared in his eyes.

When Molly sent him a message the day before, he was busy at that time, so he missed the chance of talking to her on the phone.

By the time Sean was able to call Molly, her phone was switched off.

After that, Sean had not been able to get through to Molly.

Tony walked in from the outside in a rush. "Sir, I have news on the medical team. They've arrived at the slumssafely. However, the city has been severely damaged and can't receive any signals. That's why you weren't able to get in touch with her."

It was obvious that Sean knew of this as well. He put away his phone and ordered, "Tell Merak and Dubhe to come to see me!"

"Yes, sir!" Tony was a little stunned at first but quickly came to his senses.

He quickly went to make a call.

About half an hour later, two figures rushed in from the outside.

The two figures were a young man and a woman.

The man had a cold face. He was emitting a cold aura and his eyes were full of violence and ruthlessness. It was obvious that he wasn't someone to be messed with.

As for the woman, she had a baby face and looked like she was around 18. Her hair was tied in a twin tail and she was wearing a Lolita dress. She was blinking her big eyes and looked very lively and innocent.

When the two of them stood together, they somehow gave people the feeling of strangeness.

One was cold and the other was warm. One was quiet and the other was lively.

However, when the two of them saw Sean, a flash of excitement appeared on their faces.

“Master!”

Dubhe was the first to speak. His voice was still cold, but his attitude was full of respect.

“Master!” Merak also said respectfully.

After greeting Sean, Merak became very excited. “Is that really you. Master? Are you finally back? I’m not dreaming, right? Tony, quick, pinch me! I want to see whether I’m dreaming or not.”

When Tony heard those words, he pinched the Lolita’s arm forcefully and wasn’t holding back at all.

Merak immediately cried out in pain. “Fuck! I can’t believe you really dared to pinch me! It hurts! But... this means that I’m not dreaming! Master’s really back!”

Chapter 1065-“Yeah, it’s me.”

Sean sat on the sofa casually. He was emitting a domineering aura even if he wasn’t doing it deliberately. “Haven’t seen you guys in ages.”

“That’s right! A few years have passed since you’ve gone to heal your injuries, Master...”

Merak was extremely excited. "When did you arrive, Master? I've heard from Mr.

Merrick that you were coming back, but he didn't say when exactly. I thought he was bluffing. If I had known that you were coming back, I would have gone to receive you myself!"

"I only arrived not long ago. I contacted you guys as soon as I finished unpacking."

Sean got straight to the point. "Where are the rest of the members of Stars Group now?"

"They're scattered in other places to collect intelligence, Master. Only Merak and I are left in the capital," said Dubhe.

"What have you collected?" asked Sean.

"Right now, the whole of Domster is in chaos. The intelligence we are able to get our hands on are limited," Dubhe replied honestly.

Sean was expecting such a situation. He paused for a few seconds and said, "Stop what you're doing right now. I have a new mission for you."

When Merak heard those words, her eyes immediately lit up. "As long as you give the order, I will do anything for you, Master."

Tony pouted his lips when he saw Merak's ass-licking behavior. "No wonder she's Mr. Anderson's No.1 fan."

"You just have to give the order, Master."

Dubhe still had an indifferent expression on his face. However, if one looked closely, one could see the emotions flashing in his eyes.

In the past, their missions were given to them by Mr. Merrick.

It was rare for Sean to give them an order directly.

It was an honor for them to receive an order from Sean.

Sean didn't notice the change in Dubhe's eyes. He then said slowly, "Take a team and head towards the slums to protect someone."

Both Dubhe and Merak were dumbfounded.

They had been expecting a difficult mission, but they didn't expect to be sent to protect someone.

Who would be worthy of Sean giving an order himself to protect? Not only that, Sean was sending them to protect that person as well.

"Who are we protecting?" Merak couldn't help but ask.

"Molly May," replied Sean. When he said this name, his voice softened.

Merak blinked her eyes. "Why do I feel it's a woman's name?"

She couldn't help but ask again, "Master, who... who is this Molly?"

Dubhe didn't ask any questions, but his instincts told him that Molly was no ordinary person.

Tony saw that they were puzzled, so he explained, "She's Master's wife. She came with the ancient medical families to save lives. She's currently at the slums. You must remember. No harm can come to Master's wife. She's not even allowed to be scratched."

“Master’s wife?” Merak shouted in surprise. She looked at the man on the sofa with eyes filled with disbelief. “Master, since when are you married?”

Dubhe was shocked as well.

‘What kind of woman would be a match for a man like Master?’ he wondered.

“You don’t need to ask too many questions.”

Sean didn’t want to talk too much about Molly. He was going to introduce Molly to them in the future anyway.

“All you need to know is that I want her safe and sound, understood?”

When Merak heard those words, she stuck her tongue out and didn’t ask any more questions.
“Understood, Master.”

Sean felt satisfied and added, “On top of protecting Molly, I want you to investigate the ancient medical families. They’ve come for the bait that the martial art families had thrown out. Within those people, I suspect that some of them had already secretly teamed up with martial art families.”

Chapter 1066-Not daring to make light of his order, Merak and Dubhe lowered their heads respectfully and said, “Master, don’t worry. We will never allow Madam to be hurt even a bit, and we will look into the matter and get the information.” Sean believed that the two of them could accomplish the mission.

He waved his hand, “Go! Take Sillow there this time! Chester has prepared medical supplies with my instructions. You escort them over to Molly. She will need them.”

“Yes, sir.”

Merak and Dubhe took the order and soon left.

At the same moment, after overcoming all kinds of difficulties, Molly and the medical team led by the Shepard family finally arrived at the medical service station in the depths of the slum.

This medical service station was one of those few places not affected by the war, and some houses here were still basically intact.

Currently, they were requisitioned as places to treat the wounded.

But the houses were far from enough. Outside, people who were wounded were seen here and there.

So many people had not been properly placed, so they had to sleep on the ground.

Since there were not enough medical workers, many people who could not be treated for now could only scream on the ground.

Screaming, crying, and calling sounded from time to time.

Molly and her companions all looked grave when they arrived and saw this.

The condition of the slum was much worse than they had imagined.

Molly was about to put down her luggage when she inadvertently saw a woman nearby crying with a child in her arms, "Reid, what's happening to you? Don't scare Mom! Wake up..."

Molly narrowed her eyes to watch.

She saw that the child's lips were purple and that he was twitching and seemed unable to breathe.

There was also a serious, infected wound on his exposed shin, where pus was coming out.

As a mother, Molly couldn't bear to see it. Having no mind to think about anything else, she rushed over.

'Put down the child.'

Startled by the sudden shout, the woman froze for a few seconds.

When she saw Molly take a medkit out of her suitcase, she immediately realized what was going on and put down her child on the ground as she was told.

Molly immediately began to examine the child's condition...

Realizing it, Selon instructed the others, "Help save the child!"

With this shout, everyone instantly began to move and save the child.

Molly took out a silver needle after a rummage, disinfected it, and gave the child acupuncture.

"Will my child die, doctor?" the woman asked, not knowing what to do.

Seeing no response, the woman suddenly became agitated and reached out to shake Molly. "Doctor, tell me! Is my child going to be all right? He is my only child..." The woman cried and shouted, looking so wretched.

Seeing that, Selon immediately came over and took the woman aside, lest she should disturb Molly on saving the child.

As if she had caught a straw to clutch at, she held Selon's hand tightly and asked repeatedly, "Will my child be all right? Will he?"

Seeing that the woman was almost insane, Selon consoled her softly, "Don't worry. We're here to treat everyone. The child will be all right in our hands."

"Really?" the woman asked with uncertainty.

Selon nodded firmly, "Yes, I'm serious, but you should calm down first. Don't disturb the doctor."

Comforted by him, the woman finally managed to calm down.

Chapter 1067-Then Selon came to the child and began to examine his condition.

Seeing the festering wound on his leg, he couldn't help but knit his brows.

"He had sudden asthma, and his wound has been infected. He has to be treated right now. Otherwise, his condition will worsen. He already has a high fever because of the infection!" Molly said, taking out the needle.

The child was no longer twitching, but he was still feverish.

"The child needs a clean place to rest."

Molly looked up at Selon and said gravely, "My needle can only suppress his asthma for a while. He also needs medicine."

"The Shepard family sent over several batches of medical supplies earlier. Now I'm going to arrange it."

Selon immediately answered and got up to leave.

"Wait."

Molly stopped him.

Selon looked back and asked, "What's up?"

Molly looked around and said, "The people wounded here haven't been placed in order. Their wounds will worsen a lot if this goes on, and some might die. An orderly medical treatment is very necessary."

After looking around at the wounded screaming on the ground, Selon nodded and said, "Uncle Jose will hold a meeting at noon. We can give our suggestions on how to improve the situation."

"Okay."

Since he said so, Molly didn't say anything anymore. After all, saving lives was now her top agenda.

After a few minutes, Selon brought over an asthma inhaler she needed.

"Thank you."

Molly extended her gratitude. Then she lifted the child's upper body, letting his head rest on the crook of her arm, and helped him to use the inhaler.

Gradually, the child's heart beating became stable, and his lips were not that purple anymore.

Seeing that, the woman knelt on the ground and thanked her repeatedly, ' Thank you, doctor. Thank you, doctor."

"Get up. Hold the child in your arms and come with me," Molly said.

The woman got up hurriedly, held the child in her arms, and walked after Molly and Selon, coming to a makeshift tent.

In the tent, Molly asked the woman to put the child on the wooden board and began to treat the festering wound.

Then she disinfected it, put ointment on it, and wrapped it up.

The whole process was perfect. She didn't need anyone to help her at all.

After that, Molly slipped off her gloves, picked up a packet of antipyretic medicine, handed it to the woman, and instructed, "Let him take the antipyretic medicine first. If he sweats, dry it in time, lest that he catch a cold..."

The woman listened carefully, afraid to miss even a word.

Upon leaving, the woman thanked Molly again, "Thank you for saving my child.

Thank you very much, doctor."

Saving lives was what a doctor should do.

So Molly thought she didn't need to be thanked.

Molly waved her hands and said, "If there's any other condition, you can come to us anytime."

After seeing off the woman and her child, Molly began to save the other wounded people.

Although the medical team came in a rush, Selon dealt with things efficiently.

Besides, the Shepard family had asked their men to come here to make arrangements a few days ago, so they could immediately get the drugs they needed to use on the wounded.

For Molly, once she was busy, she almost wouldn't have time to rest.

Throughout the medical center, medical workers were seen everywhere.

Gradually the screams were not that miserable anymore.

An afternoon soon passed. Since Molly had treated a dozen wounded people, she almost couldn't raise her hands because of their soreness.

"Doctor May, have a rest and eat lunch. We'll discuss how to deploy our medical staff," Selon walked to her and said.

"Okay."

Molly looked down at her clothes, which were stained with dirt and blood.

With dust on her face, she looked unclean.

But Molly didn't care about it.

After she cleaned herself, about to eat lunch-she had just opened the lunch box but had not eaten anything, she saw two children standing beside her from the corner of her eye. They were watching her lunch box with anticipation.

Chapter 1068-Molly froze for a moment.

The two children were probably about the same age as her triplets.

Unable to bear it, she simply handed her lunch box to them and said, "Take it."

Eyes glistening, they immediately took the lunch box excitedly and began wolfing down the food.

Apparently, they had been hungry for a long time!

Molly saw that, feeling sad.

The two children should be going around to play without caring about anything.

But because of the war, they had to stay here and suffer.

Feeling sad, she couldn't help but pat their heads and whisper, "Slow down.

Don't get choked."

The two children nodded casually, having no time to respond.

She watched with a heavy heart.

Now neither medical supplies nor food supplies were enough, so many people had nothing to eat.

If things went on like this, no one knew what would happen!

Seeing her furrowed brows, Selon could tell what she was worrying about." A team is working to prepare food, and they will probably bring food over in batches these days. Don't worry too much. What we should do now is try our best to save more lives. The symptoms of those on the periphery are mild, and those inside are all seriously wounded!"

Molly nodded, rose, and said, "Let's go then! Go gather at the converging ground first."

Selon nodded and soon took her to the converging ground.

The converging ground was inside an old hospital that had been abandoned for a long time.

The building was very old, with paint and plaster peeling from the walls. There were mosses on the outside walls, and the equipment inside was rusted and broken.

The only advantage was probably that there were many rooms here, in which all kinds of medical supplies and devices were stored.

When Molly and Selon arrived, it was lunchtime. Many medical workers were sitting on the floor of the corridor to quickly eat lunch. They looked tired and embarrassed.

Then Selon remembered Molly giving her lunch to the children. He said, "I'll ask someone to bring one more lunch to you. Only when you're full can you have the energy to treat the patients."

Molly shook her head and said, "No need. I have no appetite! I want to learn the numbers of the wounded and seriously wounded first."

Seeing her firm attitude, Selon didn't insist. He nodded and said honestly, ' According to the current statistics of the military, the number of the wounded has reached up to 50,000 to 60,000, and the seriously wounded are more than 10,000! There are more than 1,000 in the area we're in charge of. The medical supplies are not enough by now, but Uncle Jose will bring more over the next few days. Except that, there're more than 2,000 who are moderately wounded."

Hearing that, Molly frowned. "The current medical order is a mess. The best way is to cooperate with the volunteers the government has sent over! The excellent medical workers shall be sent to the seriously wounded area. There also should be a new policy about staff arrangements!

"And the wards had better be rearranged too! For one thing, it can prevent the infected from getting worse; for another, those who are being treated can avoid being infected again. Only by doing so can we stop the situation from deteriorating." Hearing Molly's logical analysis, Selon appreciated her even more.

“Doctor May, it seems you really have rich experience, and what you said is quite reasonable. This is also my view. In a while, I’ll mention these suggestions again in the meeting!”

“Okay.”

Molly nodded, just hoping everything could get under control as soon as possible.

Then more deaths could be avoided!

Chapter 1069-Selon and Molly chatted for a while. Then, Jose, who had finished his lunch, came over with the other medical workers.

Seeing the two were together, he was unhappy, showing it in his eyes for a brief moment.

‘Why does the young master always get so close to this woman?’ he thought.

“Master Selon, come attend the meeting.”

Ignoring Molly, he walked into the meeting room with his subordinates.

Seeing that, Selon smiled at Molly apologetically and said, “That’s Uncle Jose’s temper. Don’t take it to heart.”

Molly shook her head slightly, showing she didn’t mind it.

“Let’s go in, too,” Selon said.

They went into the meeting room after the crowd of people.

The small meeting room was jam-packed, making the place look even smaller.

Molly stood close to the door.

Jose sat on the forefront seat with two people beside him.

Although their talk was inaudible to the ear, Molly could tell from Jose's expression showed that he was very polite to the two people.

When all the people had come, Jose cleared his throat and began introducing the two people.

"This is Folke Green, the captain from the military who protects all our medical workers."

Folke stood up and saluted everyone.

He looked like a man of iron at 27 or 28.

"Hello, everyone, I am Folke Green. I'll try my best to protect all of you with my brothers, making sure you can return home safely."

The sonorous voice resounded in the meeting room. Then came a round of applause.

After that, Jose introduced another person, "This is Dr. Cornaid Lietz, the head of the National Medical Volunteer Team."

Dr. Lietz said a few words, then these people sat down, and the meeting began.

The theme of the meeting was the one Molly and Selon had mentioned earlier—the reconstruction of infrastructure, the reasonable arrangements of medical personnel, and others.

Molly didn't express any of her views, but listened quietly. After all, these people on site were all seniors with rich experience.

Soon they made a plan.

"The military will help improve the environment. Captain Green, I have to ask you to carry out the mission... As for medicine, we'll pick the experienced doctors of great skills and divide them into different teams. Each team will serve an area."

Jose announced the plan made by all the people here, then began to announce the name of the person to lead each team and the name lists.

After announcing all that, he finally mentioned Selon, "Selon, you can be a team leader this time. You'll serve the area where the seriously wounded are. As for the personnel..."

He looked around the people present and soon read the names of Selon's team members aloud, but Molly's name was not among them.

Objecting, Selon came up with his suggestion, "Uncle Jose, you can put Doctor May on our team."

Hearing that, everyone looked at Molly, obviously dissatisfied.

Everyone here was older than her, and their working years were longer than hers.

Selon was the young master of the Shepard family with brilliant medical skills. If he chose anyone else to be their team member, they wouldn't object.

Molly was not qualified to join the intensive care team, was she?

Someone questioned with dissatisfaction, "Miss May and Selon are good friends. We all know it. But Selon... this is a matter of life and death. You want to show your favor to her, but this is not the right time, is it? Besides... now is not time to struggle for credit."

The last few words obviously hinted at something.

Molly looked at the speaker.

This was a female doctor named Daisy Black, who was a few years older than her, and she was a little familiar with her. It was said that this woman was from a medical family, which had a close relationship with the Shepard family-the two families had been friends for a few generations.

She was among the best in the younger generation of doctors!

The two of them had not had anything connecting each other on the way here, but the woman suddenly became so hostile. Instantly, Molly knitted her brows.

Chapter 1070-She didn't mind where she was assigned.

Wherever she was, she would save lives!

But Daisy's words sounded a little unpleasant to the ear.

Jose had disliked Molly since the beginning. Now he said to Selon seriously, "This has been decided."

Selon couldn't accept such a decision and strongly objected that they doubted Molly's ability.

So he said directly, "A person's age shouldn't be the standard to measure their medical skills! It is widely known that Doctor May has high medical skills. The honors she has received are no less than yours.

"More importantly, she also knows ancient medicine. This is a huge blessing for the seriously wounded."

Seeing Selon defend Molly like this, Daisy felt very uncomfortable.

She said sharply, "Selon, I know you value the talented, but all the people sitting here are prestigious predecessors in the industry, and their honors are no less than hers! Besides, the team members have been decided. If you bring her in, do you mean you want to kick one of US out?"

After she said that, Selon's team members all frowned and looked at Molly with more dissatisfaction.

Seeing that, Molly felt so sick.

'Things have come to this point, but these people still have the mind to argue about this?

'Have they forgotten what the most important purpose of this trip is, eh?' But Molly couldn't be bothered to argue about anything.

She looked at Selon and said lightly, "Selon, it doesn't matter. It's fine for me to serve the area where the minor injured are..."

Before she could finish that, Selon interrupted her, "No. No matter what, I hope you can join our team."

Molly knitted her thin brows. She knew he trusted her, but she really didn't want the thing to become more complicated because of her.

"Master Selon, that's enough!" Jose reprimanded gently.

'How many ideas the woman Molly has put into Young Master's head so that he ignores others' objections and insists on placing her on his team?' "Uncle Jose, I'm not doing this without reason, nor am I doing this for my personal profit. I'm doing everything for the patients. Doctor May's value will be too much wasted if she is sent to the area where the minor wounded are."

Selon showed no sign of backing down.

When the two of them were in a deadlock, Folke suddenly cut in, "I think we can let Miss May go to the area where the seriously wounded are."

His words surprised everyone.

All of them didn't expect that Folke would intercede for Molly.

Molly was also a little surprised. She looked at the man she had never had anything to do with.

Jose was even surprised.

Although he was young, Folke, who had already had outstanding military achievements, had a very high status in the army.

This time he was the chief of the military, so his words weighed no lightly than Jose's!

A little surprised and confused, Jose asked, "Captain Green, how come you put in a good word for that woman?" he thought.

Folke turned his head and gave a sidelong glance at him. "Is there a problem?"

Jose said, "Doctor May is really excellent, but her age is..."

Folke said, "Age is really not a problem! Mr. Shepard is brilliant in the younger generation, but it doesn't mean no one is better than him, not to mention that Jadon Scott, one of the medical authorities, made a great contribution to our country and our military. As his student, how could Doctor May not be excellent?"

Speaking of this, he glanced at Molly and continued, "Even I've heard of Doctor May's aliases, Joye. Her strength is absolutely powerful! I just don't understand why all of you are sidelining her like this? The current situation is this. The more great doctors are, the better, right? But you guys seem to hope she doesn't exist. Why?"
