Finding Her True Alpha Chapter 71-Ashlyn

It's been a few days now since I woke up in the hospital. I'm in our room, getting ready for our meeting with King Draco and King Gregory. We are leaving early, so I can get some magic training in with Nathan. I was in the closet trying to find something to wear when Sage walked into our room.

"Coffee?" she asked me when I walked out of the closet. And I nodded. She handed me the second mug she was holding.

"What's up?" I asked her after I took a sip.

"Nothing." She shrugged, but I could see something was bothering her.

"Okay, well what should I wear for magic training?" I asked her.

"Comfy clothes, ones you can move in. And then pack something nice for the meeting." She answered.

"How nice?" I asked her.

"Maybe your dress will appear." She shrugged, and I sighed.

"Leggings and a hoodie it is." I announced before I walked back into the closet to get changed. Hopefully, my dress will appear so I won't have to worry about looking nice.

"Ashlyn, can I ask you something?" She called out from where she was sitting on the bed.

"Yeah, what's up?" I called back. She appeared in the doorway before she asked her question.

"What do you think of Brandon?" She asked me nervously.

"What do you think of Brandon?" I asked her with a smirk. And she sighed.

"Would it be selfish to ask you to place a mate for us?" She asked, looking away. I walked over to her after I pulled up my leggings.

“Is that what you both want? Have you talked to Brandon about how you’re feeling?” I asked her.

“Not with so many words, but I really care about him. I didn’t think it would be possible for us to actually be together. It was just for fun in the beginning, but now.”

She told me, taking a deep breath.

“But now?” Encouraging her to continue.

“But now, I can actually see a future with him, where we could have a family and a life. And I think I want that with him.” She continued, and I nodded.

“Whenever the two of you are ready, I’d be honored to join you both with a mate bond. And it will be great to have both Mason and my Beta together.” I told her with a smile. She rushed me with a hug.

“Thank you so much. I was so nervous about asking. I didn’t know how you felt about me with Brandon.” She breathed out.

“I’m so glad to see you both happy. I love you both so much.” I told her, hugging her tight.

“Wait, both beta’s?” she asked, pulling away.

“I want you to be my beta. I have Liam and Matt as our Gammas, and Brandon is Mason’s Beta. And I want you beside me. I trust you the most.” I told her and her face lit up.

“You’re serious?” And I nodded.

“Thank you. Thank you, I’m so honored.” She exclaimed, hugging me tightly again.

“Okay, get ready. We have to meet Nathan.” She told me while she rushed out of the room. I’m assuming she’s going to tell Brandon the news.

I put on a sports bra and a long sleeve shirt, then I pulled on a hoodie. I went over to the bathroom to braid my hair, and when I was satisfied, I grabbed my coffee and made my way out into the living room. Everyone was waiting for me to get ready. I walked into the kitchen to put my now empty mug into the sink before I made my way back into the living room.

“You ready, Baby?” Mason asked me.

“As ready as I’ll ever be,” I answered.

“You’ll do amazing with your magic training, Babygirl,” Derek reassured me, walking over to me. He wrapped his arms around me, making me smile.

“That’s not what I’m worried about,” I told him.

“You’re worried about King Draco?” Derek asked me and I nodded.

“You have nothing to worry about. He is the former King and King Theo has already assured us that there will not be a war.” Mason told me, and I nodded. Too bad I wasn’t worried about war. I know it must hurt that his mate didn’t seek his help, that she didn’t accept their bond. That can’t be easy and then to find out that she had se.x with another one of her mates and got pregnant.

I couldn’t imagine if both my mates didn’t accept me. I’m not sure what my mother was thinking.

Sage opened a portal, and we all stepped through into the council building’s front gardens. Nathan and King Arthur were there to greet us.

“Hey, sis.” Nathan wrapped me in a hug. “You ready for some magic training?” he asked me and I nodded.

“I am. Show me how to open a portal.” I exclaimed excitedly.

“Starting with a hard one, huh?” he raised an eyebrow at me and laughed.

“I would make my life so much easier if I could portal, then I wouldn’t have to rely on Sage.” I told him.

“You two have fun. We are going to check on the King’s,” Sage told me, giving me a side hug.

Both Derek and Mason came over to give me a k!ss before they all walked into the council building. Then it was just me and Nathan.

“So, a portal?” he asked again, and I nodded.

“Okay, but first I want you to try something for me, okay?” he asked me and I nodded again. I’d do anything to learn how to portal.

“First, take my hands and then close your eyes.” And I did what he asked.

“I’m just searching your magic. I want to see how strong it will become.” He told me, right before a force pushed us apart and we both landed on our a*sSES.

“Was that good or bad?” I asked him, standing up and brushing off the snow.

“You are definitely powerful. Okay, now I want you to focus on that pull you feel in your chest. Close your eyes and picture where you want to be.” he explained, and I did what I was told. I know it was silly, but I focused on my former pack house’s kitchen. I missed Ian and I haven’t been able to speak to him with everything going on. I heard a gasp and opened my eyes to find I had opened a portal and Ian was looking at me, surprised.

“Ashlyn, how?” he stuttered out.

“Ian, step through.” I told him and he looked nervous. But he finally stepped through and the portal closed behind him, making him jump.

“Ashlyn, what the hell just happened?” He stuttered out.

“Ian, I’m half witch.” I shrugged, and he looked at me, stunned.

“Oh, and this is Nathan. He’s the King of the magic kingdom and my brother. Nathan, this is a really good friend of mine, from my former pack.” I introduced them, and they shook hands.

“Where are your mates?” he asked, turning his attention back to me.

“They are in the council building. Nathan is training me, and I have just opened my first portal to Blue Moon,” I announced proudly.

“What?” Nathan breathed out.

“How? That pack is over ten hours away. How the hell did you do that?” Nathan asked me and shrugged.

“You’re the master. How am I supposed to know how I did it?” I asked him and he didn’t give an answer.

“Wait, your half witch? a hybrid?” Ian asked, and I nodded.

“It’s a long story and I’m sorry I haven’t texted you.

It’s been crazy around here. How have you been?” I asked him.

“Boring, compared to you,” he said, and I laughed.

“Sometimes, boring is okay,” I told him. I wish my life would be boring. Ian walked over to me and wrapped me in a bear hug.

“I’m glad to see you, and I’m glad it’s under happier circumstances.” He whispered into my neck.

“I missed you too, Ian.” I smiled up at him when he pulled away.

“So, how do I get home now? Not that I don’t want to stay to hang out with you, but I have meetings this morning.” Ian told me.

“I understand. Give me a second. I have to think of the kitchen again.” I explained. Closing my eyes, I thought of the pack house kitchen again. When I opened my eyes, there was the kitchen.

“Wow, that is fantastic.” Ian whispered, awestruck.

He turned back to me before he stepped back through.

“Come visit, anytime.” he smiled.

“I promise.” I called out to him before the portal closed. As soon as the portal closed, my knees buckled, and I fell into the snow. Nathan rushed over to me.

“Ashlyn, are you okay?” he asked me, concerned. He wiped my nose, and I noticed blood on his fingers.

“Okay, training is over for today. You are using too much magic, too quickly. You need to build up a tolerance to the magic being used.” he explained, helping me to stand.

“I’m sorry,” I whispered to him.

“There is no need to be sorry. That was amazing.

You just need to rest and we can try again later, okay?" he asked while he led me into the council building and I nodded. Nathan led me into the dining room where everyone else was. Derek and Mason were immediately at my side.

"Baby, what happened?" Mason asked me while taking Nathan's place.

"I'm fine, just used too much magic at once." I told him while Derek was smelling me.

"Why the hell do you smell like Ian?" Derek growled out, and I sighed.

"She opened a portal to Blue Moon," Nathan explained, and Sage gasped.

"She what?" she exclaimed.

"What's wrong?" Mason asked, now concerned.

Derek was wrapping his arms around me, trying to get the smell of the other alpha off of me.

"Derek stop." I told him, trying to push him away. And he grumbled.

"Nothing's wrong with it. It's just impressive. Her first portal was to a place over ten hours away." Sage explained.

"Both of you, I'm fine. Just a little tired." I told them both sternly.

"Then why was your nose bleeding?" Mason asked me, raising an eyebrow.

"It happens when too much magic is used all at once and the user isn't used to it," Nathan explained.

"So, why did you want to see Ian?" Mason asked me, and Derek let out a growl.

"I just wanted to talk to him. I haven't been able to tell him anything that has happened." They both looked at each other as I told them.

"Both of you need to start trusting me."

Finding Her True Alpha Chapter 72-Derek

"Of course, we trust you. It's just." I hesitated, sighing in frustration.

“Derek, what is it?” Ashlyn asked me, grabbing my hand with hers.

“Magnus gets anxious when you smell like another male, especially an unmated male,” I told her. And she signed.

“Okay, I’ll try not to smell like him, but I won’t stop being friends with him. We’ve been friends for 10 years.

But I understand where you are coming from.” She told me, wrapping her arms around my waist, squeezing me tight to her.

“You have nothing to worry about. You’re officially stuck with me.” She giggled, looking up at me, and I leaned in to kiss her forehead.

“You say that like it’s a threat.” I laughed.

“I know I can be a pain in the a*ss.” She smiled, and Mason let out a laugh. And I pressed my lips in a line to hold in my laugh.

“Maybe, a little bit, Babygirl.” I squeezed her into my chest. Just then, a phone rang, and I noticed it was Ashlyn’s. She had it placed in her leggings pocket. She pulled away from me and pulled it out.

“It’s Brad.” She told us, stunned.

“Hey Brad, what’s up?” She answered. I noticed her face fell and her heart rate picked up.

“What? Where are you?” She asked him. Then she was silent while he answered her.

“Okay, I’ll be right there.” She exclaimed, panicked.

She jammed her phone back into her pocket and stepped away from us. Before any of us could ask her what was going on, she opened a portal and stepped through. The portal didn’t last long, and it closed right behind her.

“What the fr+k just happened?” I yelled to Mason, and he looked just as panicked as I felt. Immediately.

Mason’s phone started ringing, and he answered it and put it on speaker.

“Prince Mason?” Brad yelled into the phone.

“Brad, what the hell is going on?” Mason growled out and I could tell it was hard for him to control his emotions.

“They hurt Grace. A patient attacked her in the hospital. I called to inform Ashlyn. How the hell did she portal here?” He explained.

“Where is Ashlyn now?” I asked him, ignoring his question.

“She rushed into the OR to see Grace. They didn’t think she is going to make it, her or our baby” He’s voice cracked and I knew he was about to break down. I couldn’t imagine the fear he was feeling at that moment.

“If anyone can help her, it’s Ashlyn. Is Alpha Ian with her?” Mason asked, and Magnus let out a growl. Mason looked at me and I rolled his eyes.

“No, I’m not sure where he is.” He sighed.

“Okay, we will be there soon, okay? Keep Ashlyn safe until we get there. And Brad?” Mason called out to him.

“Yes,” he answered.

“Ashlyn will do everything in her power to save Grace and your child.” He told Brad. “Keep her safe for us.”

Mason ended the call and looked over at Sage and Nathan.

“How the hell did she open another portal that far?” He yelled.

“She is the most powerful witch I’ve seen.” Nathan answered.

“Sage, we need a portal to Blue Moon.” I told her and she nodded.

“You guys stay here, explain what happened to the King’s and we’ll be back with Ashlyn.” Mason told everyone. Sage took Mason’s hand, and he thought of the Blue Moon pack house, and Sage opened up a portal.

The three of us stepped through and it closed behind us.

The pack hospital was located beside the pack house, and the three of us rushed over to the hospital.

We found Brad in the waiting room with Donny. Brad was a fvcken mess.

“Any news?” I asked. Donny looked over at us and shook his head.

“No one has come out to see us yet,” Donny answered while he was comforting his friend.

Mason sat down beside Brad and leaned forward so he could speak with him. But before he could say a word, Ashlyn came out of the OR covered in blood. Brad immediately sat up at the sound of the automatic doors.

“Ashlyn!” He rushed over to her, wrapping her in a hug.

“Brad, she is okay,” I heard her whisper to him and he pulled away to look down at her.

“What?” He said.

“Both her and the baby will be okay.” She told him, letting out a breath.

“How?” He whispered.

“I healed her. She is still weak, but the baby is okay.

They are just getting her cleaned up and are going to move her into a room. The doctor will come get us when they are done.” She told him and he squeezed her into his chest.

“Thank you, Ashlyn.” He cried. And she hugged him back just as tight.

“Of course, Brad. I love you three so much. I would let nothing happen to any of you. I’m just glad that you called me when you did.” she mumbled into his chest and he nodded.

“How the hell did you portal?” he asked, pulling away from him.

“I’m half witch.” She told him proudly. And he was so stunned, he said nothing.

“I’m sorry I have a meeting with some kings that I have to attend. But I’ll be back tonight or tomorrow morning. Okay?” She told him and he hugged her again.

When they parted, she went over to hug Donny and Magnus, let his unhappiness known. She gave me a look but said nothing.

“Magnus, what is your problem?” I asked my dragon.

This was extreme, even for him. But he didn’t answer. He just huffed and retreated to the back of my mind.

“She’ll be okay, Brad. They both will. I’ll be back.”

She told him before Sage opened a portal and we were now standing in the council building’s front garden again.

“Babygirl, are you okay?” I asked her, while I wrapped an arm around her waist. She turned away from me and emptied her stomach into the snow. I looked over at Mason and he looked concerned about her as well. Sage leaned over to her while I was holding Ashlyn up by her waist.

“Ashlyn, what’s wrong?” Sage asked her, concerned.

“I don’t know. I just felt dizzy, but I’m okay now.” She answered Sage and stood up with her back to my chest.

“Let’s get you inside. We can find you some clean clothes before we head to the meeting.” I whispered to her, and she nodded. I bent down and lifted her bridal style and she snuggled into my chest, closing her eyes.

I followed Sage into the council building with Mason beside me. He was watching Ashlyn. Her breathing evened out, and I knew she had fallen asleep.

“Sage, so you know what happened?” I asked her in the building’s foyer. We weren’t planning on staying, but Mason was getting a key card for the wolf wing.

“I’m not sure. She definitely used a lot of magic quickly. Maybe she is just exhausted, and that made her feel dizzy.” She answered.

“Let’s get her into bed. We can go meet with the king’s while she has a nap. We can leave Liam, Brandon and Matt with her.” Mason told us while he walked back over to us after collecting a keycard.

We walked towards the wolf wing, still carrying our sleeping Queen. I had this unnerving feeling about leaving her alone without us. I couldn’t shake it. I knew she was safe with those three, but I didn’t want to leave her. And Magnus isn't talking to me. All he has to do is explain why he is in such a mood.

We made it to the wing, and the others were waiting for us. Mason opened the door, and we all stepped in.

"Mason, what happened?" Liam asked, concerned.

"She's just tired. She used too much magic too quickly," he explained.

"But why is she covered in blood?" Liam questioned, and Mason sighed.

"It's Grace's blood, Ashlyn is fine. And Grace and her baby are also fine." Mason confirmed, and Liam nodded. I moved past everyone and entered our room. Mason followed and closed the door behind him. He helped me get her undressed and to wipe off all the blood that seeped through to her skin. When we were done, I covered her with a blanket and looked over at Mason. He was watching her intently.

"What are you thinking?" I asked him, and he shook his head.

"I'm thinking that she needs to slow down." And I have to agree. She needs to slow down and ease into her magic or it might kill her.

"Whatever happens, we are here for her." I told him, walking over to him, and he nodded.

"Now, let's get this meeting over with. We will just have to tell them they can see her after she wakes up. And next time, we will have the meeting before her training." I told him and he chuckled, shaking his head.

"Now, we just have to figure out how to get her to slow down," he told me while we left our room.

"I'll leave that up to you." I told him and he glared at me.

"What happened to our united front?" he asked me and I laughed.

"Only when what we need to tell her won't piss her off." I told him, and he rolled his eyes.

"Scared?" he teased.

“Absolutely. Have you not met her?” I explained, and he let out a laugh.

“The trick is not to show her your fear.” he laughed, and I shook my head. She could portal us to the north pole and we would never make it back. I’m not in the mood to have her pissed off at me again. We both walked out into the living room, closing the door behind me.

“Sage, ready?” Mason asked her.

“Yeah, I have someone bringing Ashlyn some clean clothes and the others are already waiting in the meeting room.” She told us and we nodded.

“Then let’s get this over with,” I told them, while we made our way out of the wolf wing.

Finding Her True Alpha Chapter 73-Ashlyn

I woke with a start; I was frantically trying to remember the last thing that happened before I fell asleep. I remember walking through the portal and throwing up. And then Derek carried me.

Why was I walking through the portal? I sat up in bed, trying to remember. I threw the blanket off and found I was only in my b*ra and underwear.

Grace.

Grace was hurt, and that’s why I walked through that portal. I started looking for my clothes and my phone. I needed to call Brad to make sure that Grace was okay.

I found myself trapped in the blanket while I was searching for my phone. I fell off the bed with a loud thud, letting out a scream. I heard the door open with a bang, but I couldn’t see because the damn blanket was covering my face.

“Ashlyn, what’s wrong?” Liam asked me.

“I can’t find my phone or clothes and I’m stuck in this damn blanket,” I huffed. And I could hear him trying not to snicker.

After some tugging and pulling, we finally got my head out. My hair was static, and I quickly tried to smooth it out. Brandon, Liam and Matt were all watching me.

“Where’s Mason and Derek?” I asked them.

“Both of them and Sage are with the Kings,” Brandon answered.

“How long was I out for?” I asked them, looking around. I really needed my phone. Matt walked over to the other nightstand and picked something up. He walked around the bed and passed me my phone.

“Thank you. I need to call Brad to make sure Grace is okay.” I told them. I was looking at my phone. I didn’t have any new texts.

“How are you feeling?” Liam asked me. He was kneeling in front of me.

“I’m starving and I could use some clothes. I need to get to that meeting. Someone should have woken me,” I told them.

“We’ll bring you some food and clothes while you talk to Brad,” Liam said while standing. The three of them left the room, closing the door behind them. I stood up and shook myself out of the blanket.

I called Brad, and he told me that Grace was doing a lot better. She was weak, but she had been up to speak to him. The baby is doing good, as well. He told me she was attending to a patient, and the patient was rabid.

They weren’t sure what caused it, but they had to heavily sedate him. They were running tests, as we speak.

I told him I’d be there tomorrow morning. I’m sure Ian was busy investigating this, and I didn’t want to be a bother. After I ended the call, I wanted into the bathroom to get myself cleaned up. I still had some dried blood on me.

I heard a knock at the door and I called for whomever it was to enter. Liam came in with some clean clothes. He walked to the bathroom door and immediately turned around.

“Sorry, I didn’t mean to look.” He said while he passed back the clothes.

“Yes, you did.” I teased him. I pulled the tight, fitted sweatpants on. And then I pulled the long grey sleeved shirt over my head. Both were a little big, but they were comfy.

“Maybe, a little.” He joked, and I laughed. I walked around him and we both looked at each other.

“Just don’t tell your mates,” he said worryingly. And I laughed.

“I would never rat you out,” I told him.

“Good, now come. We have food in the living room for you, and then we will walk you down to the meeting.”

After I finished eating, I just wanted to go back to sleep. But I was walking through the halls of the council building on my way to the meeting room. When we arrived at the doors, Liam opened it for me and I stepped in. He closed the door behind me. Everyone at the table was looking at me and I now felt insecure about what I was wearing.

“Baby, you’re awake?” Mason came over to me and gave me a hug. He then led me over to where Derek was now standing by his chair. Derek wrapped his arms around me.

“How are you feeling, Babygirl?” He whispered into my neck. He was placing gentle k!sses along my neck.

“It was good until I ate. And now I’m tired again,” I answered him.

“Okay, then we should hurry this meeting along.”

Derek told me, pulling away. Mason pulled out my seat in between them and we all sat down.

“Okay, so where should we start?” I asked the room.

“Ashlyn, I’m sorry about the force I gave out, I’m not sure what happened.” King Gregory said.

“It wasn’t your fault. Selene wanted to speak with me,” I told him.

“What have you three explained?” I asked Derek, Mason and Sage.

“We explained about your visit with the moon goddess,” Mason answered. I turned my attention to King Draco. I knew it hurt him over my mother’s decisions.

“King Draco, I don’t think my mother meant to hurt anyone. I think she thought she was making things simpler by only taking one mate. She was always destined to have a hybrid child. And she was told this,” I explained.

“And what about James?” He asked me.

“James is still my father. He had marked my mother. It just means that Gregory is also my father.” I told him.

“I understand that everyone who was involved in that situation would be upset. It’s the reason I gave all my mates a choice as well” I said.

“Theo, should choose you.” King Draco huffed.

“Theo has already made his choice, and I’m okay with it. And I’m okay with Jordan’s choice as well. And I’m so glad that Nathan turned out to be my brother.” I laughed.

“Me too, sis.” Nathan laughed with me.

“Two mates is more than enough. Now, are there questions?” I asked them.

“I would like to apologize to you, my Queen. If I hadn’t been so stubborn about my mate, Gregory could have claimed you when your parents were killed.” King Draco apologized.

“I would have liked to have grown up with my siblings, but it’s not something that we can change.” I told him and he nodded.

“Can I ask you a question, King Draco?”

“Of course, my Queen,” he answered.

“Does your father have a mate?” I asked him, and he was stunned by my question.

“His mate, my mother, has passed on. Why?” He asked.

“I dreamwalked into him talking with my grandmother. They were cozy with each other. I understand that they would have been mates if my grandmother hadn’t messed up. But I’m wondering why he would help her now?” I asked him.

“Theo was telling me about this, and I’m not sure. I don’t know what my father would gain from all of this.

But maybe he still feels a connection with her.” He shrugged, and I nodded.

Suddenly, my head spun, and I rested it in my hands while my elbows were on the table.

“Baby, what’s wrong?” Mason asked, rubbing my back.

“Yes, sorry. I just feel dizzy.” I breathed out. What the hell was going on with me? I didn’t feel like myself.

“My Queen, I will see to the investigation into my father and I’ll report everything back to you,” King Draco announced. I took a deep breath before I lifted my head to look at him.

“Thank you, King Draco. I appreciate your help in this matter.”

“Alright, I think that’s enough for today. Ashlyn needs to rest.” Derek announced, standing from his chair.

“Ashlyn, I would like you to come stay in the magic kingdom. So we can train you?” King Gregory asked me. And I looked over at Sage.

“Father, we will decide and I will get back to you.” Sage answered for me.

“I can always portal in and Sage can start training you as well.” Nathan spoke, and I nodded.

“Sounds good, everyone.” Mason spoke while standing up from his seat. I was resting my head in my hands and didn’t realize that all the kings had left.

“Babygirl, let’s go home.” Derek said, pulling me from my thoughts. I stood up from my seat and Brandon, Liam and Matt were now with us.

Sage opened a portal, and we all walked through. I rushed off into our room to empty my stomach into the toilet. The rush of stepping through the portals had my stomach in knots.

When I was done, I leaned my back against the cold tile wall and rested my head on my knees.

“Baby, I think we should take you to see a doctor.” Mason said from the doorway.

“Mason, I’m fine.” I mumbled out.

“Baby, you don’t look fine. Derek and I are just concerned.” He told me.

“Mason, I’m okay. I just need a nice hot shower and some sleep. And then I’ll be back to normal in the morning.” I told him. He walked over to the shower and turned it on, then he came over to me and helped me up.

“Okay, then let’s get you in bed so you can feel better.” He said, while helping me undress. When I was na*ked and Mason was str!pping, I brushed my teeth. I don’t remember ever throwing up this much.

Finally, I stepped into the shower, and the hot water felt amazing on my achy body. Mason came up behind me, wrapping his arms around me. I could feel how hard he was, and then he n!pped and svcked my neck and shoulder.

“Mason.” I m0aned out, tilting my head to give him better access to my neck.

“Baby, do you need me to stop?” He whispered into my neck.

“Mason, don’t stop.” I m0aned, grinding my a.ss into his c0ck, and he moved his hands to my br*easts.

He turned me to face him, lifting me up. I wrapped my legs around his wa!st. His tip was rubbing into my cl!t, making me cry out. He pushed me back up against the shower wall and reached in between us.

He positioned his c0ck at my entrance and, with one hard thrust, he was buried deep inside me. I didn’t have time to m0an out. Mason crushed his l!ps to mine and thrust his tongue into my mouth.

He was swallowing all my m0ans, while my hands were in his hair. He was thrusting faster and harder. It was turning me into a m0aning mess and I couldn’t focus on his l!ps on mine.

“You’re so wet, Baby.” Mason gr0aned while k!ssing down my jaw and neck. I was digging my nails into his shoulders. My orgasm was building, and I was so close to release.

“You feel so good.” I m0aned out. He bit down on his mark, making me explode all over his c0ck. My pvssy pulsating around him while I rode out my org*asm.

“Mason,” I moaned out while he was thrusting faster, chasing his own release. I kissed down his jaw, to his neck. He groaned as I kissed and sucked my mark.

“Baby,” he groaned out while he released deep inside me. A few more thrusts and he stilled. We were both panting, trying to catch our breath.

“Now, I’m ready for bed.” I breathed out, and he laughed.

Finding Her True Alpha Chapter 74-Ashlyn

The bed was empty when I woke up. I wonder where my mates are? I didn’t even get to see Derek last night before I fell asleep. His scent was strong on his side and I knew he had slept here. But where did they go?

I got out of bed to get dressed, then I went into the bathroom to throw my hair up into a messy bun. When I was satisfied, I made my way to the kitchen. Everyone was seated around the table. I walked up behind Derek, wrapping my arms around his neck.

“I missed you last night. Where did you go?” I asked him, kissing his cheek.

“I ran out with Matt to get dinner and you were out by the time we got back. How are you feeling?” He asked me, pulling me around the chair so was now sitting in his lap.

“I feel better, hungry, but I’ll eat after we portal to Blue Moon,” I answered him. He was resting his head on my shoulder, breathing in my neck.

“I’ll bring some coffee to go,” Matt said, standing from his seat.

“Thank you,” I called out to him.

“Baby, Derek and I won’t be able to come with you to Blue Moon. Matt and Liam will go with you.” Mason told me, and I looked over to him. He was sitting beside Derek.

“What? Why?” I asked him, confused.

“Babygirl, we are meeting with the Elite teams today.

We have to be prepared for when Susan attacks,” Derek answered.

“Oh,” I said. I forgot they were princes, and they actually had work to do.

“But Liam and Matt are going to go with you, and Sage will open a portal for you so you don’t have to,” Mason quickly said.

“I can open a portal,” I told him.

“Baby, we know you are strong, but you need to take this slowly, okay? It’s not us doubting you, we just don’t want to see you hurt.” Mason said, and I looked over to Derek.

“And you feel the same way?” I asked him. And a quilt was written all over his face. I tried to stand up, but he wrapped his arms around me tighter.

“Babygirl, we trust you. We know you can do this. We are just asking you to slow down a bit. Okay? We aren’t asking you to stop, just to slow down. Using that much magic too quickly is affecting you,” Derek told me, and I sighed.

“Fine, but I’m not happy.” I pouted.

“We can live with that,” Mason leaned over, kissing my cheek.

“We’ll see how long you two can live with it,” I told them before I stood up from Derek’s lap.

“I hate you.” Derek turned to Mason.

“Are you two ready?” Liam and Matt both nodded when I asked them. I thought of the Blue Moon pack house and opened a portal. I stepped through before turning to face my mates.

“See all better now,” I told them before the portal closed behind Matt. Liam was already standing beside me. Before I could even roll my eyes, I turned around and threw up whatever was left in my stomach. Liam started rubbing my back.

When I was done, I stood up and looked at both of them.

“If either of you tells my mates, I’ll make you both explode.” I pointed at each of them.

“Yes, my Queen,” they said together. And I rolled my eyes at the title. Liam handed me a bottle of water and I rinsed my mouth out, thanking him for thinking ahead.

Ian walked over to us, standing in the driveway. He looked at me with concern.

“Ashlyn, are you okay?” He asked.

“Yeah, portals just make me nauseous.” I brushed it off. And he nodded.

“Are you okay now?” Ian asked, and I nodded. He came over and wrapped me in a hug.

“It’s good to see you.” He told me, pulling away.

“You too, I’ve missed you.” I smiled up at him.

“You’re here to see Grace?” Ian asked, and I nodded.

“I would also like to see the person responsible,” I told him.

“Why?” He asked me, confused.

“I want to know why this happened?” I told him. We started walking over to the hospital.

“His test results all came back normal. We don’t know what happened or why he attacked Grace.” Ian explained while we walked into the hospital foyer.

“It could be magic.” I was thinking out loud.

“Is he still sedated?” Liam asked, and Ian nodded.

“Okay, I’d like to see him first and then I’ll go see Grace,” I told Ian.

“Ashlyn, are you sure? If anything happens to you, Derek and Mason will kill us,” Matt said.

“I’m a big girl and my mates don’t scare me,” I answered him.

“At least that makes one of us,” Liam said under his breath.

“I’ll take you to see him, but we have to be in the room with you,” Ian said, and I nodded.

“Alright, follow me.” Ian told us. Ian led us to the far side of the hospital, where I’d never been. I worked at the hospital with Grace and I’ve never had a reason to go to this side. It looks more like a prison than a hospital. Ian opened up a room, and we followed him inside.

There was a monitor and a warrior watching over the patient. I was looking at the monitor at the sleeping man.

“Nothing to report Alpha.” The warrior spoke to Ian, and Ian nodded to the warrior. They strapped the man to a hospital bed. He had an iv in his hand, which I assume is keeping him asleep.

We left the room and headed to the door next to the one we had just exited. Ian held the door for me, and I entered the room with the patient. The room smelt heavily of bleach and it burnt my nose and lungs. I walked over to the side of his bed.

“What’s his name?” I asked Ian while I was looking at the sleeping man.

“He’s name is Kyle Cooper. He’s a warrior, he just turned 19.” Ian told me.

“Do you know him personally?” I asked Ian. I don’t remember meeting him. And we would have been in school together.

“I don’t, no. Do you recognize him?” Ian asked me and I shook my head. A feeling of dread hit me as I looked down at Kyle. Liam grabbed my forearm when I tried to touch his hand. I looked over at him.

“Be careful, Ashlyn.”

“I have you three. I’ll be fine.” I told him. And he released my arm. I reached out and grabbed Kyle’s hand.

As soon as my skin touched his, the room spun. When I opened my eyes, I was no longer standing in the hospital room. There were bodies around me in the field. I could see Derek and Mason, and my heart filled with despair.

What the hell was going on? Where am I?

I ran over to them and kneeled down beside them. They were both dead, and I could feel the tears running down my cheeks. I looked at the bodies around them and I found everyone I knew. Brandon was holding Sage. Liam, Matt, Ian and Alex were all lying on the ground, covered in blood.

I looked away from my dead mates and friends and looked around the clearing. I recognized nothing here. It was just a clearing in a forest. When did this happen?

Was this the future? Did we lose? I felt like someone had ripped my heart from my chest. I couldn't breathe. They can't all be dead. How did I let this happen?

A shadow moved over me from above, making me look up. It was an older woman in a deep purple flowing dress. She had dark hair and glowing purple eyes. Her hands were glowing red, and I knew she was a witch, but her magic was tainted.

"Oh, don't cry Ashlyn, you'll soon join your mates." she called down to me. I didn't have time to say anything to her before she was throwing a ball of fire in my direction. Throwing my arms up to cover my face, I closed my eyes, bracing myself for the hit, but it never came. When I opened my eyes, I was back in the hospital room with Liam, Matt, and Ian.

Finding Her True Alpha Chapter 75-Mason

I know Ashlyn wasn't happy about us asking her to slow down. And I know I pissed Derek off for bringing it up. I at least got sex last night, and now she was pissed off, meaning he probably wouldn't get any. But she didn't throw up after she walked through the portal she opened, so that was a plus.

When we were heading to the training field, I was thinking about how Ashlyn had been feeling. I know nothing about magic and how using too much of it at once can make you feel. I hope that it's just her using magic and not something more serious. I wondered if she was pregnant, but she had a birth control shot and it hadn't been 6 weeks yet.

We arrived at the training field, and we had three teams already waiting for us. Derek, Matt, and I were going to head to the dragon kingdom to organize the dragon teams in a few days. We were going to have a few teams meet near Emerald Lake and scout out the area to get us some intel.

We had three groups of ten, making thirty total for werewolf warriors. We were going to get thirty dragons and break them into groups so everyone could mindlink.

This way, the dragons could man the air and the wolves could cover the forest. Delta Dylan came over to greet me. We were both in the same training class.

“Prince Mason, it’s good to see you. Where’s your lovely Queen that I keep hearing so much about?” He asked, shaking my hand.

“She had a family thing come up and could not make it today. But I’m sure you’ll meet her soon.” I told him and he nodded. He greeted Brandon and then turned his attention to Sage.

“What’s with the witch?” Dylan asked curiously, and Brandon let out a growl, confusing Dylan.

“I’m Princess Sage of the magic kingdom.” Sage announced, and poor Dylan paled.

“Delta Dylan, this is Dragon Prince Derek. Sage and Derek are here to help.” I introduced them and they shook hands.

“So it’s true, we are officially working with the dragons?” Dylan asked me, and I nodded.

“After we have the dragons organized, you’ll be heading out to an area near the Emerald Lake Pack.” I told him.

“Emerald Lake? Isn’t that the pack that vanished?” He asked me.

“That’s the pack the Queen is originally from. We believe that’s the home base for all the rogues responsible for all the attacks,” I explained.

“We also believe they have magic working with them. The Warlock King has agreed to send a few of his warlock warriors with the group,” Sage explained.

“We are just waiting for a report from the Former Vampire King and then we will head out to our planned location. We aren’t planning on attacking until Our Queen is ready,” I explained, and he raised an eyebrow at him.

“Surely the Queen won’t be on the battlefield?” He asked. And I looked over at Derek.

“She is the best weapon we have,” Derek told him. Dylan looked confused but didn’t say anymore, he just nodded.

“This mission is just to collect intel on the enemy. We will not attack unless they attack first. Derek and I will also be out there for the first few days to make sure everything goes smoothly with the wolves and the dragons. I know we haven’t worked with the dragons before, but before we never needed to. We need them to man the air while we watch the forest.” I explained, and he nodded.

“I’ll explain everything, and “I’ll let you know if there are questions about the mission.” Dylan answered, before wandering back to the group of warriors.

“And which one of you is going to explain to Ashlyn that you are both heading into the field and you’re not taking her with you?” Sage asked, and I sighed.

“Sage, we thought you would explain.” Derek told her, and she started laughing.

“Really? are you insane? I’m not getting involved in this.” She said. And I pinched the bridge of my nose. I-knew she would not be happy about our plan.

“We will figure it out when we have a better idea when we are leaving,” I told them. My phone rang, and I pulled it out of my pocket to see that King Draco was calling me. I answered and walked away from the group to speak with him. After I hung up with him, I walked back over to my group.

“What’s wrong?” Derek asked me, concerned.

“King Draco hasn’t been able to locate his father. He also cannot track his phone. He also hasn’t used his accounts, either. So, we don’t know if he’s dead or alive.” I relied on what King Draco told me.

“We should move the planned base a little further out, just to be safe,” Derek commented, and I nodded.

"I'll make sure magic protects the base. No one can enter that has ill intentions." Sage told us, and that made me feel a little better about what we were walking into.

Dylan walked back over to us and informed us that everyone agreed with the plan and that he'd make sure they were all ready to mobilize in two days' time. I thanked Dylan, and we were just about to leave the training field when my phone rang again. Liam's name popped up and my stomach immediately fell.

"Liam, what's wrong?" I answered.

"Mason, we need you and Derek here now." A panicked Liam sounded through the phone.

"Liam, is Ashlyn okay?" I yelled into the phone.

"She is not hurt, but I don't know if she's okay." He answered before the phone cut out.

"What?" Derek asked me, panicked, and I could feel Thor ready to shift and take over.

"Sage, we need a portal," I commanded. And before we knew it, we were standing in front of the Blue Moon pack house. Liam was waiting out front for us and I was on the verge of punching him in the face.

"Mason, she isn't hurt but something happened, but I don't know what." Liam rushed out.

"Where is she?" Derek demanded.

"She's in the pack house," he answered, and Derek rushed inside.

"What happened?" Sage asked him.

"She wanted to see the man that attacked Grace. He was sedated, but when she touched his hand, her eyes turned white. The man woke up from his sedation, which he never should have. He asked her if she liked her future, in this demonic voice, and then said that he'd see her in hell. He cut his own wrists with his claws. Ashlyn has been crying ever since. I do not know what happened," Liam explained all in one breath, and I could see that he was just as worried as the rest of us were.

“How long were her eyes white for?” Sage asked him while we made it into the pack house.

“Only for about a minute. It wasn’t long, but she moved her arms up to protect her face before she came out of it.” Liam explained.

We walked into the living room to find Derek trying to pry Ashlyn off of Ian. She was a sobbing mess and Derek wasn’t happy with our mate smelling like another male.

I sat down beside Ian, and Derek was sitting on the coffee table in front of him. Ashlyn had her arms tightly wrapped around his neck and was sobbing on his shoulder. I leaned into her neck while rubbing her back.

“Baby, it’s okay. You can let go of Ian. Derek and I are here now.” I whispered to her. It still took her a few minutes to register that we were here. Whatever happened really had her worked up. She finally turned her head away from Ian’s neck and looked at me.

She unwrapped her arms from around Ian’s neck and threw them around my neck. I pulled her off of Ian and he moved so that Derek could sit beside us.

“Mason, you’re alive.” Ashlyn sobbed on my shoulder, holding onto me like I was her lifeline. I squeezed her into my chest while Derek was rubbing her back. I was confused by what she said. Of course I was alive.

“Babygirl, what do you think happened to Mason?” Derek whispered to her. She turned her head away from my neck to look at Derek. She wrapped one of her arms around his neck and pulled us both close to her.

“I promise I will never complain about you two trying to keep me safe again. I get it now, just please don’t leave me.” She sobbed. I looked over at Sage to see if she could explain what happened.

“I need to see the body.” She told Ian, and he nodded. Ian led Sage and Brandon out of the living room. Leaving Derek, Matt, Liam and me with a sobbing Queen.
