

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 761

I'm Sure You Won't Mind

The woman bit down on her lip. Not wanting to dwell on this, she took a deep breath and suppressed the tempest within her, then forced out a smile as she pointed out, "Doctor, with all due respect, I think the most important thing we need to know now is how that man in the emergency room is doing, so we'd be grateful if you could tell us more about that. As for what I used to look like..." She trailed off, and a dark gleam came into her eyes, though it passed just as quickly as she continued, "I won't ever show up again in front of any of you once that man recovers from his injuries, so I don't think it means anything for you to know what I used to look like, does it?"

"She has a point, Dr. Lancaster. I mean, she's only a stranger to you, and it's a little strange to ask about what she used to look like. It'd be great if you could tell me how President Fuller is doing now," Tom urged, nodding in agreement with what the woman said.

The fluorescent lights bounced off Tim's glasses. He rather agreed as well that this woman was a stranger to him, and logically speaking, he ought not to be so interested in the procedure she had done even if she made herself look like a toad. But for some reason, there was something urging him to find out what she used to look like. He had a feeling that unveiling her past face would reveal something most shocking to them all.

As he thought this, he adjusted his glasses and drawled meaningfully, "Fine, then. Let's talk about Toby for now."

He wasn't in a rush to find out what the woman used to look like. After all, he had plenty of time after this to dig through her past if he wanted.

If he set his mind to it, he could uncover anything he wanted, unless of course, he suddenly lost interest in it halfway through.

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 761

“Please,” Tom urged, his fists clenching at his sides as he eyed Tim imploringly.

Tim threw a brief look over his shoulder at the emergency room, then looked back at the anxious assistant as he explained nonchalantly, “He’s fine. He didn’t get hurt from the accident, but he did hit the back of his head. That being said, the concussion is not the main cause of concern, nor did he black out because of it.”

Upon hearing that Toby was alright, Tom let out a huge sigh of relief, and he placed a hand on his chest as he exclaimed joyously, “Oh, thank heavens! President Fuller is okay, which means I can give Old Madam Fuller a peace of mind. Guess I’ll still get to keep my job!”

Next to him, the woman in the wheelchair did not seem overjoyed by the news of Toby’s stable condition. On the contrary, she seemed a little peeved by the outcome, if not completely frustrated. He’s fine? For goodness’ sake, how is that possible? Damn it, why couldn’t the impact have killed him on the spot? She had been so deliriously happy when she found out that he had fainted after the accident. She was convinced that he had been seriously injured. But as it turned out, he pulled through this just fine, and all he had was a concussion. This is... She clenched her fists and gritted her teeth, her heart filled with bitter resentment.

Tom had no idea what was going through her mind right now as he pressed Tim with even more urgency, “So what really made him pass out, Dr. Lancaster? Could it be his—” He broke off then, as if suddenly catching himself. He turned to look at the woman and bit out flatly,

“Could you go somewhere else? You aren’t allowed to be privy to the rest of this conversation.”

There was no courtesy in his tone, and even though he phrased it as a request, it sounded more like a command.

“Very well,” the woman replied mildly, then wheeled herself toward the other end of the corridor, away from the two men who wished to speak in private.

When she was out of sight, she lowered her head, and her gaze darkened. What did he mean by that? If he won’t let me listen in on the conversation, could it mean that there’s something going on with Toby’s health that no one should find out about? In that case... A cold smirk tugged on her lips as an insidious look flashed in her eyes.

On the other end of the hallway, Tom turned back to Tim after dismissing the woman and asked, “Dr. Lancaster, did President Fuller black out because of his heart?”

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

“You could say that.” Tim toyed with the scalpel and added indifferently, “The accident must have caused his adrenaline to spike, and as a result, it put a strain on his heart. That probably sent his system into shock, which explains why he passed out. He’s alright now, and he’ll wake up soon enough, but you have to work on finding the heart as soon as possible; he can’t keep going on like this.”

“We’ve already found a donor,” Tom said, raking his hand through his hair. “But the donor is still alive, which is why we’re still waiting on the heart.”

“Oh?” Tim raised a brow. “How much longer will he have to live?”

“About half a year.”

Tim nodded slightly. “There’s still time.”

“You’ve put my worries to rest,” Tom said with an airy laugh, clearly relieved to hear Tim’s conclusion. He had been worried that Toby’s heart would not be able to sustain the aftermath of this accident without its lifespan shortening, and if that were to come to pass, there was no telling if Toby could hold out another half a year longer. Now that Tim had said they would be in time for the heart transplant that could save Toby’s life, Tom felt as if a weight had finally been lifted off his chest.

“Alright, pull yourself together. He’ll be transferred to a hospital room soon, and he’ll have to stay here for the night. But I want him out by tomorrow, or he’d just become a waste of space here,” Tim said coldly, then let out a yawn as he turned to leave.

Sure enough, Toby was transferred to the normal hospital ward around ten minutes later, and the nurse hooked him up to the IV for the night.

Naturally, Tom and the woman in the wheelchair went over to the room as well. However, given that there was paperwork to go through for Toby’s hospital admission, Tom had to hurry off to the front desk not long after he had stepped foot into the room.

Before leaving, he had made it a point to chase the girl out of Toby’s hospital room and closed the door behind them both. Then, he warned her tersely to stay away from Toby and that she was not to come into close contact with him.

After all, there was no telling what she would do to Toby once Tom left to settle the paperwork.

Granted, Tom didn't think she had it in her to kill Toby, but that didn't mean she wouldn't take advantage of Toby's unconscious state and force herself on him like some depraved creature. After all, with Toby's fine looks, the possibility of this happening was scarily real.

With that in mind, Tom warned the woman once more that she must not sneak into the room while he was away, and only then did he leave the vicinity.

Alas, his warning did nothing, for the woman immediately scoffed and threw Toby's door wide open as soon as Tom walked away. Having done so, she wheeled herself in, paying no heed to Tom's forbidding words at all.

Meanwhile, Sonia finally arrived at the hospital after what felt like ages.

She immediately fished out her phone and gave Tom a call, pressing him for details on Toby's condition.

Upon hearing that Toby would be fine after a night's rest at the hospital and that he had only blacked out from a concussion, she was elated. The weight seemed to roll off her chest in an instant, and air filled her lungs once more.

Relieved, she asked where Toby's room was, then smiled as she kept her phone and made her way over. She had every plan to take care of Toby until he recovered, but as soon as she opened the door to his hospital room, the smile on her face froze.

Inside the room was a woman who sat by Toby's bedside while gently dabbing his sleeping face with a damp towel, looking like a compassionate angel as she did so. In fact, she looked like a good wife who was lovingly taking care of her sick husband, and anyone who didn't know better would find it heart-wrenching that she would devote herself to such sacred duties.

Sonia clenched her jaw. If it weren't for the fact that the man lying there was her boyfriend, she might just get sentimental about this scene and praise the woman for being such a caring wife. But it was precisely because the man on the bed was her boyfriend. It wasn't as if Sonia could be ecstatic that some strange woman was taking care of him.

More importantly, that woman didn't look like a caretaker at all. She's in a wheelchair, for goodness' sake. How is a caretaker supposed to take care of others if she can't even walk on her own?

What displeased Sonia even more was that the girl actually looked pretty.

As if not expecting someone to walk in at that moment, the girl turned to look at Sonia in surprise, then asked softly, "And you are?"

Sonia pursed her lips and made no answer. She let go of the doorknob and instantly marched over to the bed with a grim look on her face.

If this was six years ago, she might be heartbroken to find some other woman taking care of the man she loved, and she would have run out crying without even asking for an explanation. But now, she had outgrown those timid ways of hers, and her mind was clearer than ever.

She didn't know who this woman was, and she had never seen her before. She most definitely is not related to Toby in any way, seeing as I've never seen her hanging around him before this. At the thought of this, Sonia figured that this woman must be the culprit behind the accident, and she secretly thanked Tom for having told her about this on the phone earlier.

With a frigid expression, Sonia came to a stop next to Toby's bed. She glanced at the towel the woman was holding, then at the hand that rested on Toby's chest. A stormy look passed over her face as she said icily, "Miss, could you please take your hand off my boyfriend's chest?"

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 762

The Way of the Skank

"Boyfriend?"

The woman in the wheelchair took her hand off Toby's chest and flashed Sonia a sheepish smile. "I'm sorry, miss, I didn't mean to offend you. I was only trying to clean his face, and I must have put my hand on his chest to keep myself from falling. I'm sure you won't mind."

She might be apologizing, but she didn't look like she meant it at all, and there was even a trace of a smirk tugging on her lips, as if she was challenging Sonia.

What was even more infuriating was the way the woman drawled 'I'm sure you won't mind'. This skank is outright provoking me!

Sonia was so mad she thought she might combust on the spot.

She had more or less figured out that the woman was only provoking her because she had her eyes set on Toby. In all fairness, any woman would prey on him, seeing as he was tall and handsome with a well-built figure, not to mention he carried himself with such natural grace and a sense of nobility that belied his billion-something net worth.

At the thought of this, Sonia glanced over at the man lying unconscious in bed, and while she was frustrated at him, she was also sympathetic toward him. She was frustrated that he had gotten the fancy of yet another hussy within such a short span of time, but her heart twisted at the sight of him lying in bed with a bandage wrapped around the crown of his head. The impact must have really hurt him.

With a sigh, she decided to reason with herself. It wasn't Toby's fault that the wheelchair-bound vixen had decided to set her eyes on him, and Sonia's anger ebbed away following this line of reasoning. She retracted her gaze and turned to eye the woman imperiously, then barked, "Of course, I mind. I mind very much! Move!"

She was not leaving any room for negotiation, and there was even a commanding edge to her tone as she ordered the woman to move away from the bed.

The smile on the woman's face slipped. Obviously, she hadn't expected such a blunt and cutting response from Sonia. A dark look flashed in her eyes, but it quickly disappeared as the woman gave Sonia yet another gentle smile. "I'm sorry, miss. I know my presence here disturbs you, but I can't leave right now. See, I was the one who caused him to get into the accident, and it goes without saying that I have to take responsibility for it. I would like to remain by his side and nurse him back to help, so I hope you'll understand, miss."

Sonia gaped at the woman in disbelief. She didn't think the woman would spew such disgusting nonsense just to stay by Toby's side.

Resisting the urge to retch, Sonia shot the woman a look so frigid that it was a wonder she didn't turn to ice. "Listen here, lady—my boyfriend is only lying here because of you, so of course, you'd have to take responsibility, but there are plenty of ways for you to go about it. I don't think my boyfriend needs you to take care of him, considering I'm already here to do just that, and I'm well within my rights to do it, too. So I suggest you stop crossing the line," Sonia snapped with angry contempt.

Sonia thought she was being subtle with her words, if not diplomatic. After all, she highly doubted that other women would go easy on the shameless hussies who went around seducing their men. Other women in Sonia's position might even abandon reason and shriek at the top of their lungs or resort to violence. And here I am being civilized, if not just a bit terse with her.

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

She hoped the woman would know better than to be thick-skinned. If she insisted on staying instead of moving away, Sonia would have to get rid of her the hard way. She was no longer the compassionate and empathetic person she used to be; she would much rather let someone else bear the brunt than shoulder through it like a naive fool.

Alas, Sonia underestimated the woman and how brazen and shameless she could be. It didn't take long after Sonia had delivered her warning that the woman looked wounded. The next second, the woman's eyes turned red with fresh tears, and she started to cry.

Frowning, Sonia demanded irritably, "What's with the waterworks?"

The woman buried her face in her hands as she whimpered, "Miss, I know you don't like me taking care of your boyfriend, but I really didn't mean to cross any lines at all. I genuinely want to nurse this man back to health, seeing as I was the cause of all this in the first place. I have to do something to make it up to him, and if I don't, I'd only blame myself even more; this will haunt me, and the guilt will eat me alive, and I'd feel as if something is pressing down on my chest. Please, Miss, I'm only hoping that you could give me a chance to make things right and allow me to take care of him. But I promise you that I won't do anything more than that, so don't you worry. I only want to atone for my mistakes and spare myself from the guilt. Otherwise, I'd..."

When the woman trailed off, Sonia's face grew somber as she demanded through gritted teeth, "Otherwise, you'd what?"

The woman chewed on her bottom lip. "Otherwise, I'd only live in guilt for the rest of my life, and I might grow so depressed that I'd take my own life to save myself from the pain."

"Really?" Sonia asked, narrowing her eyes.

Nodding earnestly, the woman affirmed, "Really."

However, Sonia let out a cold bark of laughter and countered, "And what does all that have to do with me?"

"What?" The woman was stunned. She clearly hadn't been expecting such a response.

The corner of Sonia's lips lifted in an impassive smirk as she elaborated, "I don't see how a suicidal attempt on your part has anything to do with me. I can't just leave my boyfriend under the care of a scheming no-good woman in order to protect your feelings, can I? Sorry, but I don't think I'm that altruistic!"

With that, she shot the woman a look of unadulterated disgust, then immediately pulled the wheelchair away so that the woman was removed from Toby's bedside.

Sonia's push made the wheelchair roll forward uncontrollably, bringing the woman meters away from the bed as it went along with momentum.

If the woman had not reacted in time to stop the wheelchair, she might have rolled right out the door of the hospital room altogether.

Having regained control over the wheelchair, the woman spun around to face Sonia, who was sitting next to the bed and gently caressing Toby's forehead. A grimace twisted the woman's features, but she quickly hid it and resumed a miserable front as she whined, "You're being a little unreasonable, miss. I'm only trying to take responsibility for my mistakes, and you won't even give me the chance to do that. It's cruel, don't you think?"

She certainly never thought Sonia could be so heartless. I even put out the suicide card, and she still stood her ground, the woman thought angrily, frowning. It's as if she's no longer the Sonia I used to know.

Presently, Sonia dipped a cotton bud into the water and gently brushed it over Toby's lips to moisturize them, not at all paying any attention to the wheelchair-bound hussy.

She knew that vixens like her would only be spurred on if the conversation dragged on. The more Sonia said to her, the more she would try to rile her up. As if I'm stupid enough to hash things out with you, you skank. Go waste someone else's time.

Upon seeing that Sonia was determined to ignore her, the woman clenched the edge of her armrest so tightly that her hands began to tremble. Her eyes turned red, and her blood was boiling with rage. When did Sonia become such a tough cookie?

Just as the woman bit down on her lip and tried to provoke Sonia further, the sound of approaching footfalls came from outside the door, followed by Tom's voice as he asked aloud in confusion, "Hey, why's the door open?"

Then, he appeared in the doorway with a bunch of invoices in hand, ready to confront the lady in the wheelchair.

He had warned her repeatedly to stay out of Toby's room, and yet he returned to see that the door was left ajar and the woman, who was supposed to be outside in the hallway, was nowhere to be found. It didn't take a genius to know that she had deliberately gone against his warning and wheeled herself merrily into Toby's room.

At the thought of that, Tom grew mutinous, and his face was as dark as a stormy sky as he marched into the room.

However, as soon as he did, he saw that the woman in the wheelchair was not the only one in the room, for Sonia was standing next to Toby's bed as well.

At the sight of Sonia, the dark look on Tom's face was quickly replaced by a wide grin as he greeted, "Miss Reed, you're finally here!"

Sonia discarded the cotton bud into the trash can by the corner, then set the glass of water down before she turned to nod at Tom in mild acknowledgment. "Yeah, if I hadn't hit traffic on the way here, I would have arrived ages ago."

"Well, you got here with plenty of time to spare anyway, Miss Reed. I'm sure President Fuller will be very happy to wake up and find you at his bedside," Tom said with a kind smile.

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 763

All It Took Was One Look

Sonia let out a small laugh as well, but her smile faded when she suddenly thought of something. She glanced over at the woman in the wheelchair, who was fuming in the corner of the room, and pointed out mockingly, "But it looks like I'm not the only one who's waiting for your precious President Fuller to wake up."

“What?” Tom blinked, but he quickly caught on to what Sonia was implying, and when he turned to look at the woman in the corner, there was not a shred of warmth in his eyes.

Sonia had no intention of letting this woman off the hook. She had tried to go easy on the woman when she first came, but her patience and tact had run out after she saw how insistent and stubborn the woman was. Fine, then, Sonia thought wickedly. If it’s humiliation you seek, then so be it.

“This lady has been here taking care of President Fuller before I came in. I asked her to leave, given that President Fuller is my boyfriend and I’m the one who should be taking care of him instead of some stranger, but she refused to budge. She was going on about how she caused the accident and how she simply must stay by his side to nurse him back to health, claiming that doing so was the only way to ease her conscience. She even tried to force me to give the green light, too, saying that she’d take her own life if I wouldn’t!”

Tom was rendered speechless after hearing this, and the corner of his lips twitched with the urge to sputter. Wow, who would have thought that something this dramatic would happen in the short time that I was away?

Presently, he fixed his icy stare on the woman and accused, “So that’s why you asked me about President Fuller’s girlfriend when we were outside the emergency room—you’ve got your eyes on him!”

“No, that’s not true!” The woman panicked as she quickly shook her head and waved her hands vehemently to deny this. However, the flustered look on her blushing face was incontrovertible proof of her lying.

Sonia frowned in disgust. “Mr. Brown, I’ll leave her to you. I want her out of my sight at once.” No woman in the right mind would tolerate seeing her own boyfriend surrounded by scheming skanks. Just seeing one of them makes me sick, she thought.

“Of course, Miss Reed.” Tom nodded solemnly, then shot her an apologetic look as he said, “Miss Reed, I’m truly sorry about what happened. I promise I didn’t put her up in here; she wheeled herself in while I was settling President Fuller’s admission paperwork. I even warned her to stay out of the room and remain in the hallway, but I didn’t think she would... Anyway, Miss Reed, you have to know that President Fuller is a decent man, and he would never be entangled with anyone else, especially with the likes of this lady. I hope you won’t jump to any conclusions.”

He was actually terrified that Sonia would suspect Toby was cheating on her and break up with him unilaterally while he was unconscious. Tom would lose his head for sure if Toby woke up to discover that his girlfriend, whom he had just gotten back together with, had fled his side in a fit of rage.

As if sensing Tom’s latent worries, Sonia clapped a hand over her mouth and giggled, then said, “Don’t worry, Mr. Brown, I’m not jumping to any conclusions here. President Fuller was still unconscious when I came in earlier, so it wasn’t as if he and that lady could get up to anything scandalous.”

Now, if Toby had been awake while the lady was cleaning his face and he allowed her to take care of him, then Sonia might feel very differently. She might implode.

Upon hearing her reassurance, Tom let out a sigh of relief. “Okay, that’s good. Excuse me while I take out the eyesore, Miss Reed. You can stay here and keep President Fuller company in the meantime. He's alright, just hit the back of his head during the collision. The doctor said he could be discharged tomorrow."

"I know," Sonia said with a nod. "You told me just now."

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

"Just a friendly reminder," Tom teased as he pushed his glasses up his nose bridge. The next second, his expression turned grim again, and he maneuvered the lady in the wheelchair out of the room.

The lady had kept her head down the entire time after Sonia called her out about her nonsense, and she did not utter a word of objection. It was as if she had turned into a different person altogether, shedding her skank persona and adopting an ashamed and guilty stance instead.

Sonia highly doubted the woman was ashamed of what she had done. Skanks didn't have the capacity to feel shame, and they were already thick-skinned, to begin with.

As such, Sonia didn't believe the woman had become quiet and demure after the humiliation. She probably has something up her sleeve.

Then, Sonia shrugged off the thought. There was no point dwelling on this when the woman could very well be sent away by the time Toby regained consciousness tomorrow. When that happened, Sonia wouldn't ever cross paths with the woman again and pondering on what tricks she might have up her sleeves would be a waste of time.

But for some reason, she kept thinking there was something familiar about the woman in the wheelchair. It's like I've seen her somewhere before, but where?

Lowering her gaze in thought, Sonia still couldn't quite put her finger on where she had seen the woman before this. She gave up, then gently nudged Toby closer to the other side of the hospital bed to make room for herself. Having done so, she folded her arms on the bed and rested her head on them, then drifted off into sleep.

She was exhausted; her body ached everywhere and coupled with her constant worry over Toby's condition, she had been listless for the better part of the day, which in turn took a toll on her nerves.

Now that she had seen Toby and knew he was going to be alright, the uneasiness in her finally waned, but it was quickly replaced by a strong sense of fatigue.

She didn't torture herself by insisting that she would stay awake the whole time until Toby regained consciousness and chose to rest instead. If she expended herself now, she couldn't very well take care of him the next day.

Outside, Tom had successfully sent the woman in the wheelchair off on her way and asked her to only return tomorrow. He sauntered back to the room and raised his hand to knock on the door, asking, "Miss Reed, may I come in?"

When he heard no response from within the room, his brows furrowed. Is Miss Reed not in there? As the thought crossed his mind, he pushed open the door and peered in, only to see Sonia holding Toby's hand while she slept by the bedside. He let out a small breath of relief and muttered quietly, "Oh, she's still here."

Well, of course she is. Where would she go at this hour?

Just then, his gaze fell upon Sonia and Toby's overlapping hands and seeing how sweet they were even while they were sleeping exasperated him all of a sudden. To keep himself from wallowing in self-pity, Tom promptly left the room and closed the door so he wouldn't have to look at them.

He didn't think it was strange to feel sorry for himself. He and Toby were the same age, but where the latter had already been married, divorced, and subsequently reconciled with his ex-wife, Tom was still a bachelor with no prospects whatsoever, and seeing Toby and Sonia stick together like glue only served as a sore reminder of his lonely, partner-less life.

Time passed quickly, and within a blink of an eye, it was past midnight.

Toby was stirred from sleep by thirst. Frowning, he opened his eyes.

He was first greeted by a bright white light, which made him wince and shut his eyes. He waited a while before opening them again, and this time, his eyes had adjusted to the brightness, so he could register his surroundings.

He took in the pristine white ceiling above him and the plain, practical fluorescent lights. His brows drew together as he thought, Where am I?

He turned his neck, looking around the room, and it was only after he saw the IV pole next to him that he understood he was in the hospital.

Simultaneously, he could wager a guess as to why he had ended up here in the room. He distinctly recalled the sharp, stabbing pain that had seized his heart after the car collided with the roadside hedge. Apparently, the impact had put a strain on his heart and sent his system into shock. Tom had probably been the one who sent him to the hospital after he blacked out.

Toby pursed his lips. He wasn't too bothered by his own condition, regardless of whether the accident had damaged his heart even further.

Besides, he was convinced that the absence of pain in his chest meant he had pulled through just fine. In that case, he wasn't overly concerned about his heart.

Presently, what he worried about most was whether Sonia knew about the accident. Did Tom tell her? If she heard about it, did she faint out of shock?

He was just thinking of this when he suddenly sensed something encircling his right wrist. He froze at first, then quickly glanced over to his right and saw that there was a figure asleep by his bed with her head in her folded arms.

And the person had instinctively held his hand earlier. She must have been dreaming when she reached for his wrist, and he was only alerted of her presence when he felt the ticklish sensation.

While he couldn't see the person's face, all it took him was one look to know that it was Sonia.

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 764

Toby's Apology

Toby softened his gaze at the sight of Sonia lying there. He gently pulled his hand out of hers so he wouldn't wake her, then lightly stroked her hair.

If she was here next to him, then Tom had clearly told her about the accident. She must have been startled when she heard the news, Toby thought grimly, and an apologetic look flashed across his features as he reached to tuck her hair behind her ear so that it wasn't all in her face.

Then, he drew his hand back and lifted the covers. He slid out of bed and came over to her side, thereafter bending down to scoop her into his arms.

Meanwhile, Sonia had not fallen into a deep slumber, and she started as soon as she felt someone touching her. Her eyes flew open, and the first thing she saw was a familiar and handsomely chiseled face.

At first, she thought she might be imagining things, so she blinked hard to snap out of it.

However, when she saw that the same face was still there, she knew that she was not delusional. It's really him, she thought as she broke into an elated grin. "Toby, you're—"

She broke off when she suddenly felt that there was something off about the weightless sensation that gripped her. Turning, she was astonished to find that at some point, Toby had swept her into his arms.

"You're awake," Toby pointed out softly as he gazed down at her. "Sorry for waking you."

She shook her head. "It's fine. I wasn't really sleeping that well, anyway. What are you doing, though? Put me down right now." He was still injured, and he ought not to be straining himself by carrying her in his arms.

However, he brushed her off and only put her down on the bed, in the same spot where he had laid. "If you kept sleeping the way you did just now, you're going to wake up tomorrow morning with a crick in your neck and your back. I wanted to let you have the bed so you could sleep better, but it looks like I woke you up instead."

“Oh,” Sonia said with a smile, acknowledging his efforts. There was still residual warmth on the bed where he lay just now, and she felt snug and comfortable as soon as her back touched the mattress. Coupled with what he had said earlier, she couldn’t help the rush of warm sentiments that seized her.

“But you shouldn’t be too concerned about me. You’re still a patient, after all, and this bed is meant for you, not me. Here, you can have it back,” Sonia said, reaching to lift the covers off her so she could get out of bed.

Toby frowned and pinned the covers down, tucking her in firmly as he said authoritatively, “Do as you’re told and just go to sleep already. Do not get down from the bed, understand?”

She gaped at him in mild amusement. “There’s no need to be so controlling.”

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

He caressed her face lovingly. “I’m not being controlling; I just can’t bear to see you uncomfortable, is all.”

This made her heart swell, and the smile on her face grew even warmer.

“Okay, go to sleep. I can still see how groggy you are. You must be tired after I woke you up accidentally earlier.” With that, he began to rearrange the covers.

She hummed in response before suddenly scooting further to the side, then patted the space next to her on the bed.

He raised a brow. “What are you doing?”

“I know the bed isn’t very big, but I’m sure we could squeeze in together. Come over here and take a nap with me,” she said, staring at him.

He wouldn’t let her get down from the bed, and she couldn’t very well make a patient slouch over the side of the bed, so she decided that the only solution was for them to share the bed.

Toby’s eyes lit up at the suggestion. “Is that an invitation?”

She rolled her eyes at him in mock exasperation, then said, “Yes, it is. Now, can you please get into bed with me, my dear Mr. Fuller?”

He was amused, but he kept up an oh-very-well expression as he let out a dry cough and muttered, “Fine, then. Since you’ve offered, I see no reason to upset you by rejecting it.”

“Aren’t you reluctant?” she drawled sarcastically and gave him a playful pat on the shoulder as soon as he burrowed beneath the covers.

Toby was lying on his side, and he wasted no time in drawing her into his embrace. His arms wound around her tightly as he nibbled her ear and muttered, “How are you feeling? Does it still hurt?”

Sonia hadn’t thought that he would prey on her even while they lay in the hospital bed together. The corner of her lips twitched in disbelief as she countered, “You’re the one who got into an accident and sustained injuries, so why are you asking me if I’m hurt? I don’t think transitive property works that way.”

He let out a low chuckle. “I see you don’t understand what I’m referring to. What I meant to ask was, does it still hurt down there?” As he murmured this close to her ear, his hand began to trail past the dip in her waist and toward a certain sensitive area.

As realization dawned upon her, her eyes widened, and her hand darted under the covers to seize his wandering one. Blushing furiously, she demanded through gritted teeth, “What are you doing, Toby?”

He eyed her innocently. “I just wanted to help you check if it still hurts.”

“As if!” She batted his hand away and snapped, “Checking? Hah! You know as well as I do that you’d be getting up to no good if I let you.”

“I would not!” he insisted, still feigning innocence.

At that moment, she pried off his arm from her waist and turned to her side so that her back was to him, then decidedly ignored him.

It was then that Toby knew he had crossed the line. After all, women were all prideful creatures, and most of them were easily flustered by such roguish teasing. Great, now she’s mad at me, he thought ruefully.

With his gaze fixed on the back of her head, he let out a contrite dry cough and nudged himself forward. When his chest was pressed against her back, he tried to reach around her and pull her back into his embrace.

But his arm had only just begun to snake around her waist when she shoved her elbow backward, knocking his arm away as she grumbled, “Don’t touch me.”

This did little to dissuade him from his efforts, and it only spurred him on. Summoning his strength, he forcefully drew her close and wrapped his arm around her tight.

She froze at first, then started to struggle.

He lifted his head slightly and whispered huskily close to her ear, “Don’t move unless you want me to break my arm again before it could mend.”

Also, I still have a mild concussion from the accident; if you keep moving like this, I'll take it as you want me to pass out for another day."

Upon hearing this, she stopped struggling and fixed her eyes on the wall across from her. After a while, she bit down on her lip and pointed out sourly, "You always seem to have the upper hand, Toby."

He buried his face into the crook of her neck as he muttered humorously, "It's less about me having the upper hand and more about me knowing that you love me enough to be considerate. Naturally, I'd do the same for you." While saying this, he slowly prompted her to turn over to face him.

She did not object this time and merely allowed her body to flip as though his guiding hand was an axis on which she spun. The next moment, they found themselves facing each other as they lay on their sides.

He reached out and brushed his thumb over her cheek, then toyed with the long strands of her raven-black hair as he said apologetically, "I'm sorry if I made you mad earlier, but I really did have the intention of checking if you still hurt, you know, down there. I'm not a beast, and I certainly wouldn't dream of doing anything to you while you've barely recovered."

Sonia's eyes glistened when she heard this. Does this mean he wasn't feigning innocence at all just now? I misunderstood him, then? At the thought of this, she shot him an embarrassed look and averted her gaze, mumbling, "It's fine. I forgive you."

He chuckled lightheartedly. "Thank you."

A few seconds of silence later, she gazed into his eyes and said quietly, "I'm feeling much better down there. It's not as painful as it was during the day. I guess the ointment you got for me really worked."

“That’s good to know,” Toby replied, then inched closer to give her a quick peck on the lips before he added, “I’m sorry if I hurt you last night. I was only too excited to claim you as my own, and I didn’t bother holding back when I should have. I promise I won’t be so rough with you next time.”

Sonia hummed and teased, “I hope you’ll keep your word.”

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 765

Never Again

“You have my word.” Toby nodded.

Finally, Sonia smiled ever so slightly, her mood lifted. “Good. But how about you?”

“Hm?” Toby asked in a low voice. “What about me?”

“Your back...” Sonia put on an awkward smile. “I mean, the scratches on your back...”

Toby finally realized what she was asking. Before she could finish, he parted his thin lips and answered in a clearly cheerful tone, “They’re recovering.”

“That’s good to hear.” Sonia sighed lightly in relief, then said, “Then don’t you want to know your current condition? Ever since you woke up, you haven’t asked me anything about your condition.”

“I just realized I didn’t.” Toby nodded, admitting.

Sonia pouted and gave his chest a half-hearted slap. “What’s with you? I put it that way so that you can ask me about your condition on your own.

You got into an accident, so why aren't you more concerned about your own body?"

Well, look at you. He didn't ask anything, as if he weren't the one who got into an accident.

Toby pinched her hand, which was still on his chest, and let out a chuckle. "Don't get mad. I didn't ask because I guessed that I was all right. If there really is something serious, you wouldn't recover so quickly from the surprise when you see me awake. This is why I'm very sure I guessed correctly that my condition is not serious. Am I right?"

He pulled her hand out from under the blanket, then guided it to his lips and kissed it.

Sonia humphed. "All right, your guess is correct. It's true that there's nothing too serious about your condition. Tom said that you fainted because you got hit on the back of your head. You will be discharged tomorrow."

"I see." Toby jutted out his chin slightly to signify that he understood what she said, but his eyes told a different story.

This excuse was probably something Tom made up to deceive her. After all, Toby knew very well how painful his heart was before he fainted.

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

Of course, the back of his head was also hurting, but that sort of pain definitely wouldn't be enough to cause fainting. So, his fainting naturally had something to do with his heart.

Also, he had told Tom not to tell Sonia about his heart problem, so naturally, the latter had no choice but to make up a plausible excuse to deceive Sonia.

Coincidentally, the back of his head was actually hit, so this became the best reason to explain his fainting. Also, by the looks of it, Sonia had believed it right away, without any doubt.

Toby sighed in relief at the sight. As he was thinking, he suddenly felt something on his face.

He looked down to see that Sonia had suddenly sat up and was squeezing his face with her hands. She looked at him sternly. “Toby, do you know how scared I was when I heard Tom say that you got into an accident? I was so shocked I thought I was going to die, and I almost fainted. In order to prevent myself from fainting so that I could find out how serious the accident was, I pinched my thighs hard so that the pain could keep me focused. I—”

“What?” Before she could finish, Toby quickly sat up in alarm. “You pinched your own thighs?”

Sonia blinked. “I did, to maintain my consciousness and calm.”

“Who gave you permission to treat yourself like that?” Toby glared at her sternly and said in a harsh tone.

Sonia widened her eyes. “I did that all for you, and you’re here criticizing me for that?”

For a moment, she felt an indescribable injustice.

Toby also realized that he was a little too harsh on her, so he softened his attitude. “Sorry, I wasn’t telling you off; I just ache for you. Isn’t it painful when you pinch yourself?”

Sonia humphed. “What do you think? But in order to keep myself conscious and stop myself from fainting, it’s the only thing I could do. Who would’ve expected you to get into an accident so suddenly on a casual trip outside? It’s all your fault. If you hadn’t gotten into the accident, I wouldn’t have to pinch myself. But look at what you did! You turn back on me and reprimand me.”

Toby pursed his thin lips and fell silent because he really was the one with the most faults here.

Toby rubbed between his eyebrows, then looked at Sonia apologetically. “Sorry for frightening you like that. Does your leg still hurt? Let me check.”

With that, he bent over so that he could take a look.

Sonia shifted her thigh away. “It’s fine. I’m all right now. It only hurt at the moment, so the pain stopped a long time ago. Also, I’m wearing pants, so I can’t just show you my tights. If you really want to look, you can look when you get home tomorrow.”

Toby was originally upset by her refusal. After all, he was concerned about her, but she didn’t accept it, so he naturally didn’t feel too happy about it.

However, when he heard her say afterward that he could check after he got home, his originally bad mood was instantly lifted.

Sonia looked at the upturned corners of his mouth and could immediately guess what he was thinking. She couldn't help but smile as she shook her head.

In the next second, however, her face fell. Toby noticed her change in expression. He raised an eyebrow as he somehow guessed that she was finally turning to the main issue at hand.

Just as expected, Sonia crossed her arms and looked at him coolly. "Toby, I heard from Tom that you got into an accident because a woman was running the red light when she crossed the road. Then Tom couldn't brake in time, so you told Tom to run into the flowerbed instead, right?"

Toby nodded. "Yes, or we might hit the woman."

At the mention of the woman crossing the road, Toby put on an annoyed expression.

Those who jaywalk at their own convenience are the worst! They don't care about their own or others' lives.

Sonia could see the displeasure Toby had toward that woman, and she was glad to see it. She would be happiest if he hated the woman.

Though she knew Toby didn't know the woman or had any chances of dating her, she was still bothered and upset when she saw the woman staying by his side and taking care of him.

So, now that she saw how much he hated that woman, she felt much better.

"Even though you did it because you didn't want to hit anyone, have you ever thought that you yourself would get hurt as a result?" Sonia leaned in toward Toby.

Toby was surprised by her sudden movement, so he reached out to hold her. Sonia looked up at him and felt giddy. Well, he's a quick learner.

"I did a quick calculation then. If we ran into the flowerbed at that distance and speed, it wouldn't be too serious of an accident. This was why I told Tom to swerve in that direction." Toby placed his chin on the top of Sonia's head as he spoke.

Sonia pursed her red lips. "Yes, you calculated minimal damage at that time because there was a flowerbed conveniently placed there at the moment. But if the accident took place somewhere else and there were no flowerbeds in sight, what would you do? Would you also tell Tom to swerve to the side? What if there's opposite traffic on the other side? You'd run into a car then. If both cars were going at high speeds when they ran into each other, the car and the people within wouldn't survive. So, Toby, I would rather you hit the woman than get hurt yourself, understand?"

She looked at him with her eyes reddened. It wasn't that she was cold-blooded and wanted him to run over people.

But compared to a stranger, she would rather he be the one who was safe.

Hearing Sonia's words, Toby constricted his pupils, an obvious shock in his eyes. He knew how kind she was, but now she was willing to throw that kindness away so that he would be safe and sound.

This was enough evidence to show how important he was to her.

At that thought, Toby hugged Sonia tightly, as if he was trying to meld her into his body. He said in a hoarse yet touched voice, "Got it. I won't do it again. I won't cause you such anxiety ever again."

"Really?" Sonia turned her head slightly to look at the man's profile.

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 766

Sonia's Complaint

"Really." Toby nodded.

"Good." Sonia finally let him go.

The man curved his lips into a light smile, but Sonia suddenly thought of something as a glint flitted across her eyes. Then, she looked at him with a half-smile. "Right, don't you want to know about the woman who caused this accident?"

Toby frowned. "Why would I?"

"Because she's also one of the main characters in this incident." Sonia continued staring at him.

Toby's brow raised a little, for he had a bad feeling about this. She seems to have something on her mind.

"No matter who she is, Tom will take care of it," Toby parted his thin lips and said calmly. "He'll sort out the compensation or go to court if necessary."

She was just a careless person who ran the red light. He wouldn't get revenge on her like some kind of sworn enemy, but he also wouldn't be so kind as to let her go without asking for some compensation.

"You say that, but I think Tom isn't capable of handling this incident," Sonia said teasingly.

Toby's frown grew deeper. "What do you mean?"

Sonia stopped teasing him and gave him a resentful look as she answered, “I mean, that woman might have fallen for you.”

“What?” Toby was stunned.

Sonia rolled her eyes, then grabbed his ear and shouted in a louder voice, “I said, that woman fell for you! Aren’t you glad?”

Toby was dumbfounded, and he finally recovered his senses after a while. The corner of his mouth twitched as he said, “What on earth?”

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

“It’s true.” Sonia pouted. “That woman fell for you.”

Seeing Sonia’s upset expression, Toby reached out and pinched her face lightly. “Come on, quit joking. Do you think I told Tom to swerve away simply because the person on the road was a woman? You think I might like her a little, so you’re saying this to test me?”

Sonia couldn’t help but laugh in annoyance at what he said. “Who’s testing you? I don’t have the time for that. I mean it, that woman really fell for you.”

She sounded jealous, but her earnestness was obvious as well. Toby’s expression sank as he realized she really wasn’t joking. In an instant, his thin lips were pressed into a straight line. “That woman—”

Before he could finish, Sonia said, “It’s understandable. You’re talented and rich and handsome, and it’d be weirder if the woman didn’t fall for you. It’s about time you realize your own charm, right, Mr. Fuller?”

Mr. Fuller? He let out a low chuckle as he looked at her with an earnest gaze. “I work my charm on you and you alone.”

As a reply, Sonia snorted. “Yeah, right? If it’s just me, then how do you explain that woman? How do you explain Jessica? And all the rich young ladies in the field? Those netizens calling you their husband? Try explaining that to me.”

Toby went silent, for he had no words to say. A long while later, he finally moved his thin lips and said, “They were probably blind.”

“Pfft!” Toby’s words caught Sonia by surprise, and she let out a laugh.

Seeing her joyful laugh, Toby knew she had stopped sulking, so he let out a tiny sigh of relief.

A minute later, Sonia finally stopped laughing. She wiped away the tears produced from all the laughing as she looked at him. “I never thought you would explain your charm in such a self-deprecating way. But you made me laugh, so I’ll forgive you this time.”

Toby laughed as well. “Thank you so much, Your Majesty.”

“Your Majesty?” Sonia raised an eyebrow, then said smilingly, “Not bad. I like it.”

The two bantered for a while, and Toby went back to the topic at hand.

“Right. How are you so sure that the woman had her eyes on me? You’ve met her?”

“Of course.” Sonia humphed. “It’s exactly because I’ve met her that I knew she fell for you. When I arrived, she was sitting beside you and wiping your face, taking good care of you. She was so serious about it. When I came in, I told her I was your girlfriend. Usually, when someone hears that the man’s girlfriend has arrived, they will move away and make some space in case the girlfriend misunderstands. But she didn't even try to leave and even told me not to mind her."

At that, her expression grew cold. "But wait, there's more. After that, she cried in front of me and she told me she had to take care of you. She said that if I shooed her away, she might jump off a building or something. She's challenging and threatening me! I've never seen such a b*tch like her before!"

Toby held her hand tightly. "Sorry for making you go through all this humiliation."

He never thought that the love of his life would get humiliated just because of his momentary act of kindness in letting the woman leave unscathed. If he had known things would turn out like this, he'd let Tom run over her.

At that thought, Toby allowed a cold gleam to flit across his eyes. Sonia didn't know what he was thinking as she shook her head. "It's not much of a humiliation. Besides, I'm a new person now, and I will never allow myself to be humiliated. I pushed the woman away in the end."

"Oh?" Toby was curious. "How did you do it?"

"I grabbed her wheelchair and pushed her forward. Simple. She moved." Sonia lifted her chin in glee. "You should've seen the flabbergasted look on her face. Ah! It was so amusing!"

When Toby saw the brilliant smile in Sonia's eyes as she talked, he was so full of tenderness it almost spilled out of his eyes. "Even though I didn't see it, I can still imagine that. Good job!"

"Of course!" Sonia lifted her chin higher.

Seeing that, Toby reached out and gently scratched her like he was scratching a cat.

Sonia slapped his hand away, pouting. “What are you doing?”

Toby just smiled. “You looked very cute just now.”

“That goes without saying.” Sonia eyed him, squinting.

Toby caressed her hair, then asked, “Right, where’s Tom when it happened? Where did he go? He let the woman into my ward, but he himself went missing.”

Toby didn’t look too happy when he said that, obviously dissatisfied with Tom’s absence.

Sonia leaned against his chest. “Don’t blame Tom. He went to deal with the formalities in your stead. Before he went, he told the woman not to barge into your ward, but she didn’t listen. She sneaked in while Tom was gone, and then I came in. Tom returned soon after that, and then he took the woman away. I don’t know where he took her or what he did to her; I never asked, and I don’t even want to know.”

Hearing Sonia’s words, Toby finally relaxed his expression a little.

At this moment, Sonia yawned as drowsiness took over her. Toby could see the sleepiness in her eyes, so he pulled her closer to him. “Sleepy already?”

“Always have been.” Sonia covered her mouth and yawned again as she said, “If I weren’t so careful about waking you up, I would’ve been sound asleep by now.”

Toby smiled lightly. “My fault. Continue sleeping, then. I won’t bother you anymore.”

“What about you?” Sonia looked up at him.

Toby’s gaze met hers. “I’ll sleep too.”

“Sure.” Sonia nodded, then closed her eyes.

Toby caressed her cheeks, then shut his eyes as well. However, right before his eyes closed, there was a spine-chilling glare within them.

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 767

Not Easily Forgiven

The lady in the wheelchair had barged into Toby’s ward without permission and even threatened and challenged his lover. I absolutely will not forgive her so easily.

He figured that even though she ran the red light and caused an accident, she was no more than a clumsy pedestrian. He thought he only needed to ask for appropriate compensation and the proper responsibilities to be held, after which he would leave it be.

I never thought that woman would act so boldly. It goes without question that I won’t sit by!

At that thought, Toby suddenly opened his tightly shut eyes, a vicious light flitting across them.

The next day, Sonia was roused by the sound of knocking on the door. She shifted a little in her position between Toby’s arms, her eyes refusing to open. She obviously wasn’t fully awake yet, so she just had her eyes closed as she said in a sleepy voice, “Toby, someone’s here.”

Toby opened his eyes and couldn't help but smile as he saw her curled up like a cat. "Yes, I heard it."

"Get the door, then." Sonia scrunched her pretty eyebrows as she spoke in a meek voice.

Obviously, she had forgotten where she was at the moment and thought that she was at home.

Toby embraced her. "It's fine cause he'll come in himself. Go back to sleep."

"Okay." Sonia was truly sleepy then, for she still didn't remember where she was. So, when she heard him say that she could continue sleeping, she didn't make a fuss. She grunted in response, then pulled the blanket up over her head and continued sleeping.

Seeing that, Toby chuckled lightly, then gently removed his arms from their position around her. He sat up on the bed and said toward the door, "Come in."

The person outside stopped knocking, then the handle of the door turned in the next moment.

The door swung open to reveal Tom and Tim standing at the door. When the two saw the man already up and sitting on the bed, they walked in.

Tom spoke as he walked. "President Fuller, you're finally awake. I—"

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

"Shush!" Before Tom could finish, Toby put a finger to his lips, signaling for Tom to lower his voice. Tom gave a puzzling hum, for he didn't understand why he had to be quiet.

But soon, he noticed a mound under the blanket, right next to Toby, with long hair peeking out at the top of the blanket. The confusion inside him immediately disappeared.

No wonder he was told to keep it down. I guess someone's still asleep.

Still, Toby and Sonia were so close that they even insisted on sleeping together on the sickbed after an accident. This sort of intimacy was too much for Tom.

In contrast to Tom's inner thoughts, when Tim saw Sonia sleeping soundly on the bed, he didn't have much of a reaction.

After all, this matter didn't concern him; it was just between the two. If they didn't find it too crowded, then he, as a doctor, naturally had nothing to say about it.

"I'm here for an examination." Tim walked toward the bed and stopped next to it, taking out the medical record folder he kept under his armpit. He opened the folder, then took a pen out of the front pocket of his coat. He unscrewed the cap of the pen and began writing notes as he asked Toby how he felt.

After the questioning, he proceeded to check Toby's head. Then, he smiled and nodded as he said, "Good, you can get discharged now. However, seeing that she hasn't woken up yet, I'll allow you to leave by noon."

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 767 This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 767 This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 767

He clapped the folder shut and smiled as he spoke. Toby knew, of course, that Tim allowed for an extension of his time in the ward for Sonia's sake.

Under normal circumstances, he would have none of it and just take Sonia away. But now that Sonia was obviously still asleep, he could only accept it.

Tim didn't stay for long in the ward; he left right after completing his tasks. After all, he had a surgery scheduled afterward, which would take up over ten hours. He couldn't afford to delay it.

After Tim was gone, save for the sleeping Sonia, there were only Toby and Tom left in the ward.

Tom looked at Toby. "President Fuller, are you feeling better?"

Toby nodded slightly. "Much better."

He knew Tom wasn't asking about his head injury. Instead, the latter was referring to his heart.

"That's good to know." Tom sighed in relief.

Toby looked at the bandages wrapped around his assistant's head and pursed his thin lips. "What about you?"

No matter what, being Tom's superior, he was the one who told Tom to make the collision. So, now that Tom was injured, Toby had to take responsibility as his superior.

Tom touched his forehead and smiled sheepishly. "Nothing too bad, just a surface scratch on the forehead. It'll recover in a few days."

Toby nodded. "I'll double your bonus this month and give you two days off."

Two days off!

Immediately, Tom beamed when he heard those words. Even the bonus didn't matter that much anymore, as he was completely entranced by the holiday.

A holiday! A real holiday!

Heaven knows how long it's been since my last break! I keep working from early morning into the middle of the night, and it's really just too sad.

Tom thought holidays wouldn't come easy for the rest of his life, but now he got lucky and finally had time off. The more he thought, the more excited he got, and he could barely stop himself from smiling.

Toby looked up and gave him a nonchalant look. "You good-for-nothing."

Still smiling, Tom pushed his glasses.

Toby rubbed between his eyebrows and got to business. "Are you done handling the accident last night?"

"Not yet." Tom also resumed his serious look and shook his head as he spoke.

Toby narrowed his gaze. "Not yet?"

Tom replied, "Yes. You passed out, so it isn't something that can be taken lightly. I cannot employ the usual procedures of a traffic accident, so I decided to wait until you're conscious and see what you want to do about it."

Toby's mood seemed to lift a bit. "If that's so, then have you done some investigations? Why did that woman run the light all of a sudden? Logically speaking, she is in a wheelchair, which means she cannot move freely. There should be someone with her."

Of course, he wasn't suspecting that someone was behind the accident last night. After all, his car had made an impromptu turn onto that road, and there were also many other cars on that road.

If it were a plot, the person behind the scenes couldn't have made such an accurate calculation and appeared right in front of his car. So, he believed that he really was too unlucky last night to have encountered an uncultured pedestrian.

"I did look her up." Tom nodded. "The woman's name is Anya Steinfeld. She is an orphan who grew up in an orphanage. Because of her good grades, she received a recommendation to study at a well-known college in Kosovo. She has just returned from Kosovo after plastic surgery."

"Plastic surgery?" Toby raised an eyebrow.

Tom coughed. "Yes, the woman not only did plastic surgery, she even had her limbs lengthened. That's why she's in a wheelchair; her legs haven't recovered, and she can't walk yet. She ran the red light last night because she took a longer time to cross the road compared to a normal person, so she had only crossed about a third of the road before the lights turned red. She couldn't go back to the sidewalk, so she could only keep moving forward. And that's where we came in."

Toby lifted his chin slightly. "Got it. Even though it was an accident last night, a large part of the responsibility is still hers. Tell her to compensate properly, and if she refuses to cooperate, report to the police straight away.”

“Understood!” Tom wasn’t surprised to hear the decision, and he nodded as he answered.

However, things apparently weren’t over yet as Toby darkened his expression. “Also, she challenged and threatened Sonia last night, so I have no intention of letting her off the hook just like that.”

“You knew, President Fuller?” Tom was slightly surprised.

Toby nodded before looking toward the woman still sleeping beside him. Tom followed Toby’s gaze, then realized that Sonia had told him.

“Then what do you intend to do, President Fuller?” Tom averted his gaze and queried.

Tom knew Sonia was the apple of Toby’s eye, so if he kept looking at her, Toby would dig his eyes out.

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 768

Let Her Off

“What do I intend to do?” Toby narrowed his eyes, which were filled with a spine-chilling coldness. “She fell for me, didn’t she? Then I’ll have her apologize to Sonia in public and say why she is apologizing.”

“Man...” Tom inhaled sharply. He’s planning to embarrass her in front of the entire world.

Apologizing to Sonia and stating her reasons meant Anya would be telling the world that she had fallen for Toby, and she had challenged and threatened Sonia, Toby's proper girlfriend. It meant that Anya was trying to be a secret lover.

If word of this got out, Anya would be cyberbullied to the ends of the earth. After all, almost everyone in this world hated secret lovers. Judging by Toby's plans for Anya, Toby was definitely furious about it.

But it was also reasonable. Anya didn't do much, but since she did what she did, she would have to take responsibility for her actions.

"Understood. I'll get to it right—" Before Tom could finish, a knock on the door interrupted him.

Tom frowned and looked toward Toby.

After getting Toby's permission, he turned to the door and asked in a displeased tone, "Who is it?"

It couldn't have been a doctor or nurse.

Tim had just checked up on Toby, so he would've told the nurse that it wasn't necessary to check again. Therefore, the visitor must have been someone else.

"Mr. Brown, it's me, Anya Steinfeld," a gentle female voice said from the other side of the door.

Tom raised an eyebrow. "President Fuller, it's her!"

Speak of the devil. Moreover...

Tom didn't look too good. "President Fuller, when I took her away last night, I warned her not to show up at the hospital. I said I would notify her if anything happens, but she actually still came, regardless."

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

The look in Toby's eyes grew cold as he heard Tom's words. "It's not too surprising, since she came into my ward after you left last night. Naturally, she wouldn't listen to you and obediently wait like you told her to."

"I've never seen such a shameless person," Tom commented with a dark expression.

Toby waved his hand. "Deal with her. Tell her my intentions, and if she refuses, I won't go easy on her," Toby said emotionlessly, parting his thin lips.

Tom responded with a serious look, saying, "Understood. I'll go right away."

With that, he turned and walked toward the door, after which he quickly opened the door and went out. Toby frowned as he rubbed his temples.

Suddenly, the woman beside him turned around. One of her arms reached out of the blanket and landed right on his chest. Toby paused his actions, then looked down at her, only to be met with the woman's pretty eyes. "You're awake?"

Sonia nodded and leaned in closer to him, trying to find a more comfortable position. Unfortunately, no matter how much she moved, she couldn't find a suitable spot. In the end, she simply raised her head and leaned it against his chest.

She seemed to have found her best position. Her eyebrows curved, and her arm moved from his chest to his waist as she hugged him. "This isn't too bad."

Toby watched as she hugged him like she would hug a human-shaped bolster, and he couldn't help but laugh. After that, he held her shoulders as well. He pulled her closer to him so that she could hug him in a more natural position.

“Why didn't you keep sleeping?” Toby asked.

Sonia looked up at him. “Do you really not know, or are you pretending?”

“Hm?” Confusion flitted across the deep pools of Toby's eyes. He honestly didn't know what she meant.

Sonia sighed in exasperation. “You were talking with Tom in whispers, but I could still hear it, you know.”

It hadn't occurred to Toby that he was the one who had woken her up. He felt a little guilty as he coughed a little into his hand, then said, “Sorry, I didn't think you'd hear it.”

“It's okay.” Sonia waved her hand. “It's not anything big, anyway. But do you really intend to let that Anya person apologize to me in public and state her reasons for her apology?”

“Of course,” Toby replied with a distant look. “If she dared to do it, then she would be brave enough to bear the consequences. This is all very fair, isn't it? Moreover, you are my most treasured person, so if I don't do anything after knowing how she treated you, I would not have the right to say that I love you.”

Sonia knew he was trying to bring her justice, and she felt warm inside as her lips curved into a smile. “Anya would definitely cry!”

“Hm?” Toby raised an eyebrow, then snorted. “She did it to herself; she doesn’t deserve to cry about it!”

Sonia chuckled. “No, I don’t mean it like that. I mean, she fell for you, right? She would be hurt to know that you gave her trouble on my behalf, so she’d for sure cry. After all, it’s more heartbreaking when the person she likes takes revenge on her, compared to me doing the same thing.”

Toby pinched her nose. “Next time, don’t put it like that. I don’t want to be the person she likes.”

Sonia laughed even louder, her body shaking. “All right, all right. I won’t.”

After laughing for a while, she recovered herself and looked up at the man. “But won’t this punishment be too severe? It’s okay if she apologized in public, but if she also mentions her reasons for apologizing, she would get criticized on the net. After all, netizens are never nice to someone who’s trying to get in between a relationship. Even if she isn’t a real secret lover, and she only challenged and threatened me to get me out, the netizens won’t go easy on her. I fear that she won’t be able to handle the cyberbullying and proceed to do something to herself.”

After all, cyberbullying was no joke, and the internet’s advancement had had its negative effects.

Sonia despised Anya and even hated her, but all Anya did was challenge and threaten Sonia. Anya didn’t really take any action. Hence, it would be overkill if Anya got cyberbullied. If she really took her own life because of it, her blood would be on their hands.

Toby saw the seriousness in Sonia’s expression, and he knew what she was worried about.

Actually, he had already thought about this possibility when he asked Tom to do the deed. However, he didn't care because he could cover it up. But now that he saw Sonia's expression, he hesitated a little.

"You don't want her to state her reasons for her apology in public?" Toby asked as he looked at Sonia.

Sonia nodded. "It's enough if she apologizes to me in public. If she does, the netizens can more or less guess the reasons. As long as we don't state the reason clearly, the netizens won't get overboard. She will be able to handle it, then. But if she mentions the reasons and really died because of cyberbullying, I won't sleep in peace either. I'll keep thinking that I've killed her indirectly."

"That won't happen!" Toby held her tightly and replied right away.

Sonia smiled half-heartedly. "Who knows? It's always better to be careful, so let's not take the risk. Just have her apologize and call it a day."

"But don't you feel wronged?" Toby frowned.

Sonia smiled. "I don't feel wronged now that you took measures against Anya for my sake. At least I know that you won't just stand by and watch me get bullied. You'll help me, and I'm already happy enough to know that. Also, Anya isn't the only one who likes you. There's also Jessica and all the other women out there. If they all came to challenge me, then I wouldn't be able to deal with so much injustice."

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 769

Do as You Are Told

Noticing that Toby pursed his lips, Sonia reached out to hold his face gently. “Alright. Stop frowning. I honestly don’t feel aggrieved about it. As long as you stay by my side and understand my pain and emotions, nothing else really matters.”

Nevertheless, Toby sighed when he met Sonia’s serious gaze. “But, I feel like you’re wronged.”

“Since you think that I was wronged, you can make up for me in other ways. As for Anya, just do as I say and don’t cause any casualties. She didn’t do anything other than throw empty threats,” Sonia suggested.

As she insisted, he could only go along with her decisions. “Alright. I’ll get Tom to arrange something.”

Then, he turned around to grab his phone by the side of the bed and sent Tom a message. At the same time, Tom was in a confrontation with Anya outside of the hospital ward.

When Anya noticed that Tom was alone and no one else was present, her gaze darkened. She tilted her head a little to look behind Tom as if she wanted to see if anyone was behind him.

Noticing what Anya was doing, Tom had his face darkened before he closed the door and asked in a hostile tone, “What do you think you are trying to do?”

Right then, Anya’s gaze wavered before she looked away and smiled. “Nothing.”

Tom harrumphed. “Don’t think I don’t know what you’re looking for.”

You want to see President Fuller, huh? I won’t let things go your way.

Anya pursed her lips. Then, she acted as if she hadn't heard what Tom said and pushed her stray hair to the back of her ear before asking, "Mr. Brown, is President Fuller getting better now?"

"Well, thanks to you, President Fuller woke up in the hospital bed when he could have done so in Miss Reed's bed," Tom replied snarkily.

Upon hearing Tom's words, Anya felt her face twitch a little before she recomposed her emotion and smiled gently again. This time, there was a hint of joy in her eyes. "Mr. Brown, are you saying that President Fuller regained consciousness?"

Tom harrumphed and didn't answer or deny what Anya said, which indicated that Toby had indeed regained consciousness.

This chapter is provided by www.fictionpress.com. Visit www.fictionpress.com for daily update.

Anya clapped her hands together. "That's great! It's good news that President Fuller finally regained his consciousness! Mr. Brown, can you let me enter and talk to him?"

Immediately, Tom got alerted before he dashed toward the entrance of Toby's ward and blocked it. "You want to meet President Fuller?"

"Yes." Although Anya was furious when she saw Tom's action, she didn't let it show. Instead, she sighed and explained in a guilty manner, "I know that President Fuller and you got into an accident because of me, so I'm hoping that I can meet President Fuller to apologize to him and—"

"And stay by his side to take care of him?" Tom's gaze turned cold while Anya blushed. "I do have the responsibility to take care of President Fuller till he heals. I caused the harm, after all."

“Wow.” Tom chuckled in disbelief. “Miss Steinfeld, I would advise you to drop that idea because what you told Miss Reed had already upset her. Do you think President Fuller would allow you to stay, considering how loyal he is to Miss Reed? Moreover, President Fuller doesn’t need any more helpers and doesn’t like strangers invading his personal space, so you don’t need to offer to take care of him. Besides, all of us know that that’s actually a lie to get closer to President Fuller, anyway.”

Anya’s face turned pale after she heard what Tom said. Instantly, she lowered her head awkwardly. “I’m not. I just—”

“That’s enough!” Tom rolled his eyes. “No one cares if you did or didn’t. To make things easier for you to understand, President Fuller doesn’t need your care now, and it’s better if you keep those desires of yours to yourself because President Fuller has a girlfriend now, and he loves her very much. President Fuller is loyal to his girlfriend, and there won’t be anyone else besides her, not to mention someone like you. Besides, you’re in a completely different world from him, so it’s better if you drop those thoughts of yours, or you’ll be the one who ends up getting hurt in the end.”

Anya bit her lip and went quiet. It seemed like she was hurt by Tom’s straightforwardness.

Nevertheless, Tom didn’t soften up, despite noticing Anya’s reaction. Instead, he glanced at his watch before saying, “Alright. It’s time to get to the point after all that nonsense just now. Miss Reed had already told President Fuller everything that you told her last night. Right now, President Fuller is very upset at your attitude toward Miss Reed, so he—”

“Is he going to come after me on behalf of Miss Reed?” Anya’s hands, which were placed on her thighs, balled up into fists.

At this moment, Tom glanced at Anya and noticed her uneasiness. However, he didn’t pity her at all before he answered calmly, “Since you didn’t cause President Fuller’s accident on purpose, he won’t make a fuss about what happened yesterday. Everything will be settled by the books, and you’ll have to pay for compensation. If you’re unwilling to do so, we will see you in court.”

“I’ll pay for compensation!” Anya nodded without hesitation before she said, “I am the one who caused the accident, so I should bear responsibility for it and pay for compensation.”

Tom nodded slightly. “That’s great. Regarding how you talked to Miss Reed last night, President Fuller wants you to broadcast your apology to Miss Reed, along with the reason you’re sorry. As long as you carry out President Fuller’s requests, he’ll let you off the hook.”

Anya’s face turned pale. “E-Explain why I’m sorry?”

“Bingo!” Tom grinned at Anya, causing her face to turn even paler before she clenched her fists tighter. She then gulped before asking in a panicked manner, “Don’t President Fuller know... how cruel it is to account for my mistakes and apologize in front of the public?”

Although what Anya said to Sonia last night wasn’t direct, everyone would be able to tell what she was implying, and she knew what would happen once she explained why she apologized to the public.

“This is none of President Fuller’s concerns. Since you had the guts to do something like that, you should be able to handle the consequences of doing so,” Tom crossed his arms before he nonchalantly remarked while Anya started trembling. “It’s Miss Reed, isn’t it?”

“What?” Tom raised his eyebrows.

What is she talking about?

Anya met his gaze with red eyes. “Miss Reed told President Fuller to do this, didn’t she?”

Right then, Tom finally understood what Anya meant.

Does she actually think that Miss Reed was the one who wanted President Fuller to request a public apology? Wow! What a joke. Although Miss Reed could do something like that, this is definitely President Fuller’s own doing, based on my understanding. After all, how could she have told President Fuller what to do when she was sound asleep next to him?

Tom’s face darkened. “Miss Steinfeld, you might have misunderstood things. Miss Reed had never made such a request, and all of these are President Fuller’s decisions.”

“That’s impossible!” Anya retorted, while Tom rolled his eyes at her. “How is it impossible? You’ve only met President Fuller once, and he wasn’t even conscious. Do you even understand him? How can you tell that this is not President Fuller’s decision when you don’t even know him?”

“I—” Anya paused before she went quiet.

Then, she lowered her head to hide the dark glint in her eyes while feeling resentful.

Who says that I don't understand Toby? Of course, I understand him. However, Toby back then, and Toby right now...

Anya's gaze faltered before she stopped herself from thinking further.

On the other hand, Tom couldn't be bothered to waste his time with Anya any longer as he uncrossed his arms. "All of this is President Fuller's decision. You might not know how much he loves Miss Reed, but I can tell you that President Fuller definitely wouldn't let you off the hook if you upset Miss Reed, so it's better if you do as you are told, or you'll have to pay for what you've done. Do you understand me?"

This Time, I Will Get My Divorce, Mr Chapter 770

Thank Sonia

Anya's body shook as she could tell that Tom was giving her a warning, but she couldn't do anything about it. Currently, she was in a vulnerable position and had no right to refuse anything.

At the thought of that, Anya clenched her fists before she took a deep breath to force herself to calm down and answered with a tense voice, saying, "I... I understand."

Looks like I won't be able to avoid making a public apology to Sonia and explaining the reason I have to apologize. Still, I can cover my face during the broadcast so that no one will be able to find out my real identity and hurt me. Since they didn't mention that I can't cover my face to hide my identity, I'll take advantage of that!

Anya's facial expression got better when she thought of that.

Not knowing what Anya was thinking about, Tom adjusted his glasses before he said in a nonchalant manner, "That's good to know. You can arrange the broadcast according to your timing, but I'm hoping that you can schedule it as soon as possible. Is that alright?"

"Sure," Anya answered quietly with a hint of spasmodic sobs while lowering her head to hide her emotions.

Nevertheless, Tom only frowned and didn't say anything when he noticed that she was crying, as it was normal to cry when one was about to face cyberbullying, after all.

"Alright, then. I'll be leaving now, and you should do so as well. As for President Fuller's compensation, I'll arrange for someone to contact you later on, and you can pass everything to that person. Do not show up in front of any of us ever again after this."

Then, Tom prepared to leave. Suddenly, he felt the phone in his pocket vibrating. At this moment, he paused to check his phone before a shocked look appeared on his face, and the way he looked at Anya changed a little.

At the same time, Anya's eyes glistened when she noticed the change in Tom's look before she asked curiously, "What's wrong, Mr. Brown? Is there anything on my face?"

Immediately, Tom kept his phone and recomposed himself before his facial expression became calm again, and he replied in a collected manner, "There's nothing on your face. However, there's good news for you. President Fuller had decided to let you broadcast your apology to Miss Reed without explaining the reason behind the apology."

Upon hearing that, Anya looked taken aback before a surprised look appeared on her face. "Is that true? Mr. Brown, are you serious? I'm not hearing things wrongly, am I?" She quickly grabbed Tom by his arm.

As Anya was overly excited, her grip on Tom's arm was extremely forceful, causing Tom to wince with pain. "Let go of me!"

Tom's voice quivered as he was really in pain. Even though his arm was covered by his shirt, he could still feel Anya's nails digging into his flesh as if they had pierced through his shirt. From that, it was obvious how forceful she was.

This chapter is provided by .com. Visit .com for daily update.

When Anya noticed Tom's face twisting in pain, a joyful glint flashed past her gaze before it disappeared, and an anxious look quickly appeared on her face. Then, she removed her hand and apologized profusely, "I'm sorry. I'm so sorry, Mr. Brown. I didn't do it on purpose. Are you alright?"

Nevertheless, Tom unfeelingly chuckled when he saw the fingernail marks on his sleeve. Am I alright? Isn't it obvious that I'm in pain, considering she had even left fingernail marks on my shirt?

Tom had his hand on his injured arm before staring at the teary and lost woman in front of him emotionlessly before he asked coldly, "Did you do it on purpose?"

"What?" Anya looked taken aback as if she didn't understand what Tom meant, while Tom narrowed his eyes and stared at her. "What I meant was, did you purposely grab my arm?"

Anya's eyes widened. "How is that possible?!" She quickly shook her head and motioned her hands around. "I definitely didn't do it on purpose. It's true, Mr. Brown. You have to believe me. I just lost my composure because I was really happy. Besides, why would I deliberately do that?"

“Why?” Tom sneered. “Because I was really rude to you, and I’ve offended you just now, so you have the perfect opportunity to take revenge on me.”

“That’s not true!” Anya shook her head furiously. “I’m not like that. You have to believe me, Mr. Brown. I don’t have any thoughts of taking revenge on you at all.”

While she explained herself, she went from tearful to full-on bawling as droplets of tears started falling down her eyes.

At that moment, Tom panicked, as he didn’t expect Anya to start crying just like that. It was as if he had done something wrong to her. Yet, all he did was raise his suspicions. Hence, he was truly taken aback when Anya started bawling.

Right then, Tom started feeling annoyed as he massaged his temple. “Alright. Stop crying. You didn’t do it on purpose, then.”

Although he believed Anya did it purposely, he couldn’t do anything about it as Anya cried and refused to admit it. If Tom legitimately forced her to admit it, she might even pull some dirty tricks to make it look as if he bullied her. Therefore, he had no choice but to let things go.

Still, Anya acted as if she hadn’t heard how unwilling Tom sounded and broke into a smile. “I knew you were a fair person, after all.”

Once again, Tom chuckled coldly. How dare she claim she didn’t do it purposely when she quickly took my cue and tried to please me? If she really didn’t do it purposely, she would have been upset when she heard how unwilling I was and would have tried to argue to change my mind, but she didn’t do that at all. It’s obvious that she did it on purpose based on her reaction.

Still, that didn't matter anymore, as Tom had no choice but to let things go.

“By the way, Mr. Brown, why did President Fuller suddenly change his mind?” Anya stared at Tom intently before she asked.

Meanwhile, Tom flicked on the wrinkle on his sleeve before he answered emotionlessly, “President Fuller is worried that you might get harmed, so he changed his mind and wants you to apologize only.”

Upon hearing that, Anya had her eyes glistened before her face brightened up visibly. “President Fuller is really a good person.”

Tom's lips twitched a little when he heard her.

A good person? Did she misunderstand the definition of a good person? The only reason President Fuller wanted her to broadcast her apology was to allow the public to criticize her. Although she didn't have to explain why she apologized now and she wouldn't be attacked as much anymore, the speculations about her action definitely wouldn't decrease. She would still be chastised publicly but with lesser consequences. Despite that, it would still be damaging to a woman's reputation. Knowing all that, she actually thinks President Fuller is a good person? Is she seriously blinded because of love?

While Tom roasted Anya mentally, he pursed his lips. “You should be thanking Miss Reed instead of President Fuller.”

“What?” The smile on Anya's face froze. “Miss Reed?”

“That's right.” Tom nodded. “President Fuller told me that Miss Reed was the one who wanted him to do so. It wasn't his decision, and he was only going along with Miss Reed's wishes, so you should be thanking Miss Reed instead."

This time, Anya's facial expression froze completely before her hand that was grasping the armrest clenched up as well. It's Sonia's doing! I can't believe that I thought this was Toby's decision when Sonia had been the one behind this all along. Are they trying to humiliate me by making me thank Sonia?

When Tom noticed the look on Anya's face, he narrowed his eyes. "What's wrong, Miss Steinfeld? Are you unwilling to accept Miss Reed's kindness and thank her for it?"