

406 Chapter 406 - Val, I'm pregnant

Back in Vegas, Alessia took her symptoms seriously the moment she woke up.

It was not nausea this time but frequent urination. After the last time, she researched a lot about pregnancy symptoms, not wanting to make the same mistake again as before.

Having already taken a couple of pregnancy tests, she had some test kits at home.

Godic was still asleep when she went to the bathroom to take the test, and she screamed from excitement, causing him to jump out of bed and run to the bathroom with the sleep cleared from his eyes.

"Alessia, is everything alright?" Godic asked worriedly but soon relaxed when he realized she screamed from excitement and not from pain or anything of that sort.

He always loved to see the beam on her face every morning and was happy to have kept it that way.

"And may I know what..." he was asking when his eyes landed on the test kit in Alessia's hand, and his sentence was cut short by the two red lines.

"You are pregnant?" He could not contain his joy at the realization, lifting her into his arms like a baby. Alessia was facing him because of the way he carried her, so her legs and arms wrapped around his hunky body.

"Yes, Godic, I'm pregnant again, and this time, I would take very good care of our baby, I promise," she said with teary eyes.

It was not easy to get over her miscarriage, so this was a great comfort for her at this moment, but Godic gently countered.

"No, we shall take very good care of him or her together, and then you might have to return to the pack. It would be good to be close to our kind, and though pregnancy might take longer, you would also give birth faster." In the werewolf community, pregnancy took ten months for the baby to be birthed, but their labor was not as long as that of humans, and due to their wolves, the pain was half less, so Alessia had to weigh her options carefully.

"I honestly don't mind going through the nine months here and a painful labor. I can endure it," she assured him. Then she kissed him on the lips and revealed her true intentions. "I just don't want to leave your side." Godic was still worried about it, feeling that they needed a second opinion. wWw.NoVellwOr.com

"Alright, but we should still discuss it with Denzel, if you know what I mean," he insisted. Alessia beamed.

"I have a better idea." She dialed Valerie's number and put the phone on speaker, instantly announcing. "Val, I'm pregnant." Valerie was over the moon, instantly responding. "Oh, goddess, this calls for a celebration, and you need to be close to the pack. I think I would talk to Denzel to work out something, but how are you doing? Do you need anything?" Valerie had already gotten over her desperation to have a child of her own and was very happy for Ashley.

"I have everything I need, but I'm also fine here with my mate. I might return to the pack in my seventh month, but that is not confirmed," Alessia revealed, Valerie stunned.

Every she-wolf would love to have their pup in the pack where it would be easier, but somehow, Alessia was choosing the most difficult way.

"Do you love Vegas that much?" Valerie asked in an amused tone, Alessia responded honestly.

"With my mate here and so many human friends, it's very interesting, and not forgetting the fact that Denzel's biggest businesses are here, making more money for the pack." Alessia cared so much about the finances of the pack, though they were self-sufficient, but the income from Vegas was what gave the pack all the extreme excesses. Ww.NoVellwOr.com

Valerie understood where Alessia was coming from and did not pursue the matter further. "I'm glad to hear all these, but should you change your mind, please don't hesitate to let me know." "I know I won't change my mind, but for your concern, sure." Alessia was about to end the call before remembering something and saying. "You can inform my brother on our behalf." Valerie ended the call, seemingly excited as she asked Denzel, who was waiting to make sure that every omega was comfortably housed with extra rooms remaining.

Valerie was filled with mixed emotions. "Do you want to hear it?" She asked Denzel, his brows creased, but he smiled.

"Sure, what are you hiding?" He pinned his gaze on her, making her heart flutter a little.

No matter how long they knew and lived together, he always made her stomach giddy whenever he stared at her like that.

Knowing that the news was going to excite him so much, Valerie did not hesitate in sharing it. "You are going to have a niece or nephew soon." As expected, the look in Denzel's eyes was priceless, his excitement obvious. Valerie knew that if Denzel had a baby girl, he might just spoil her rotten.

As such, she hoped the moon goddess would give them a boy, since she would only have one chance. wWw.NoVellwOr.com

Denzel would be hard on a baby boy than a girl. His question interrupted her mind. "Is it Alessia?" Valerie glared at him, annoyed by the question. "Who else? We already know about Adira and Ashley's pregnancies, so who else could it be?" Denzel laughed and pinched her nose. He was in a very good mood because of the sweet news and wanted to crown it with a celebration before he begins to think about any adjustment needing to be made.

"That calls for celebration, and it also means they would have to move to the pack," he said. There was no need to think about that part because he wanted an easy birth for Alessia, but after the conversation Valerie had with the latter, her lips pressed together. wWw.NoVellwOr.com

"I think you should ask them about that part." The deliberation continued when Denzel's phone rang. His eyes widened instantly. "Are you sure?"