

A WARRIOR UNDEFEATABLE/

Read A Man Like None Other Chapter 2756

A Man Like None Other Chapter 2756-Once the two of them arrived in a secluded area, the three figures cornered them.

Once the two of them arrived in a secluded area, the three figures cornered them.

Jolted by their presence, Viola whipped out her weapon in reflex.

At the same time, the three masked men blocked Jared and her way.

"I own this street. If you want to leave in one piece, leave behind everything you have," one of the masked men shouted.

"A robbery?" Jared remarked with a relaxed expression.

After a moment of staring at the three men, Viola knitted her brows as she asked, "The Three Bandits?"

No sooner had the words escaped her lips than the three masked men were briefly stunned. Nonetheless, they soon burst into hearty laughter. "I didn't expect anyone to recognize us. We must be famous now!"

"That's right. We're the Three Bandits. If you don't want any trouble, give us all your money!"

"Weren't the three of you supposed to have been arrested?" Viola wondered out loud.

"Hmph, no one in this world is capable of capturing us! There's no prison or lock that can ever keep us restrained," Crixus, eldest of the Three Bandits, refuted her.

Nevertheless, he wasn't bragging, for the three of them were pretty competent. Neither enchanted chains nor cages with arcane arrays were too difficult for them to escape from.

Once the two of them arrived in a secluded area, the three figures cornered them.

"We're busy. Get out of our way if you still value your lives," Jared warned the eloquent trio.

"Wow, this kid is a feisty one!" Salazar, youngest of the Three Bandits, scrutinized Jared quickly. "Kid, what you said is going to cost you at least one hundred and fifty spirit coins. If you give us a single coin less, the three of us will beat you to a pulp, do you understand? After that, we'll have some fun with your girlfriend. We have never seen such a pretty lady in our lives before!"

"Insolence! Do you know who I am?" Viola lashed out at the Three Bandits' disrespect.

"I don't care who you are. Just leave your money behind if you want to live,"

Crixus asserted.

"The three of you do have a death wish. We're on Stellaris Sect's territory. Aren't you worried that you'll be arrested by them?" Viola questioned.

"Hahaha, Stellaris Sect did manage to arrest us a few times, but we have always escaped easily. No dungeon of theirs is capable of holding the three of us. Now, quit stalling and hand over your money!"

Crixus had begun to grow impatient.

"Hmph, come and get it if you can!"

Viola let out a scoff before charging at the three with her sword in hand.

"Hmph, you deluded fool!"

"We're busy. Get out of our way if you still value your lives," Jared warned the eloquent trio.

Crixus, too, snorted in response as the three of them vanished into thin air.

Just as Viola was shocked by their disappearance, the trio reappeared behind her and grabbed her.

"How dare the three of you ignore me!"

Reacting to the trio's attack, Jared shot out rays of blistering light that enveloped them with a wave of his hand.

Within the light, countless runes began to swirl and glow, forming a cage that imprisoned the three men inside.

By then, Viola had turned around. The sight of the Three Benders behind her ceased cold sweat to break out on her.

It never crossed her mind that the trio could move at such speeds.

"Kid, I can't believe you actually think this arcane array can hold us. This is nothing but a joke! Have you forgotten what the Three Benders are famous for? In this world, there are no arcane arrays that can restrain us, no spiritual energy chains that we can't break!"

Just as Crixus spoke, the trio waved their palms, which began to glow with a purple hue. They then directed the light upon the cage Jared had set up with his arcane array.

As the cage trembled in response, the trio's bodies gradually grew transparent until they vanished completely.

Crixus, too, snorted in response as the three of them vanished into thin air.

Just as Viola was shocked by their disappearance, the trio reappeared behind her and grabbed her.

"How dare the three of you ignore me!"

Reacting to the trio's attack, Jared shot out rays of blistering light that enveloped them with a wave of his hand.

Within the light, countless runes began to swirl and glow, forming a cage that imprisoned the three men inside.

By then, Violo had turned around. The sight of the Three Bondits behind her caused cold sweat to break out on her.

It never crossed her mind that the trio could move at such speeds.

“Kid, I can’t believe you actually think this arcane orroy can hold us. This is nothing but a joke! Have you forgotten what the Three Bondits are famous for? In this world, there are no arcane orroys that can restrain us, no spiritual energy chains that we can’t break!”

Just as Crixus spoke, the trio waved their palms, which began to glow with a purple hue. They then directed the light upon the cage Jared had set up with his arcane orroy.

As the cage trembled in response, the trio’s bodies gradually grew transparent until they vanished completely.

Read A Man Like None Other Chapter 2757

A Man Like None Other Chapter 2757-The very next second, the three of them reappeared again outside the cage, which was still intact and showed no signs of damage.

The very next second, the three of them reappeared again outside the cage, which was still intact and showed no signs of damage.

The sudden turn of events caught Jared by surprise. He couldn’t figure out how the trio could escape the cage he conjured without breaking it and was inadvertently astonished.

“Hehehe! Did you think we would dare to commit robbery if we weren’t capable enough?” Crixus sneered amidst his hearty laughter.

Staring at the trio, Jared began to be intrigued by them. He was curious as to how they had escaped his arcane orroy without damaging it.

With a flip of his palm, the ground beneath the trio trembled as rays of light broke out from below, quickly forming a cage that enveloped the three of them within.

Thereafter, Jared filled the arcane orroy with spiritual energy.

“Hehehe... The same technique again?”

Crixus guffawed when he saw Jared trying to imprison them with yet another arcane orroy.

Nonetheless, Jared ignored the former’s snigger as a dancing flame ignited on the tip of his finger. He then hurled it into the arcane orroy.

Boom!

The arcane orroy trembled before a fiery inferno exploded on top of it, surrounding the Three Bondits with raging flames.

“Trying to burn us to death? What a naive plan...” Juen, the second eldest of the Three Bondits, scoffed disdainfully.

The very next second, the three of them reappeared again outside the cage, which was still intact and showed no signs of damage.

Right after that, he gathered spiritual energy in his palm and unleashed a hurricane, hoping to extinguish the inferno with it.

However, the result was not what he expected, as the hurricane ended up increasing the fire's intensity.

Seized by panic, the Three Bandits began to scream in fear.

Despite their frantic attempts with magecraft, nothing they did helped them escape from the arcane array.

"What sort of inferno is this? Why is it so intense?" Crixus exclaimed as his face lost all color.

"It turns out that you guys aren't that big of a deal, after all. You don't even recognize demonic fire."

Jared smirked as he watched the trio screaming in agony.

"Demonic fire?"

The three of them exclaimed in unison, "Are you a Demonic Cultivator?"

"Do you actually think that only Demonic Cultivators can use demonic fire? I can't believe how f*cking little exposure you have," Jared retorted.

The three of them didn't dare talk back after being cowed by the raging fire that was roasting them alive.

"Mercy... Have mercy on us, sir. We're willing to do anything you want as long as you spare us!"

"The three of us only take a little money from others and have never killed anyone."

At last, the Three Bandits dropped to their knees and begged.

Right after that, he gathered spiritual energy in his palm and unleashed a hurricane, hoping to extinguish the inferno with it.

Now that the arcane array was surrounded by demonic fire, they could not escape. They had no intention of being burned to death by it.

"Are you sincere in your offer to work for me?" Jared asked.

"Yes, we are... We are..." the trio frenetically promised.

"Fine, I'll take your word for it. If I find out that you have lied to me, I'll definitely make you suffer a fate worse than death!"

Jared proceeded to extinguish the inferno with the gentle wave of his hand.

The moment the fire was snuffed out, the Three Bandits unleashed a purple beam of light on the arcane array. Their bodies subsequently disappeared from within and reappeared outside.

Their heads were covered in sweat while shock remained plastered across their faces.

“Thank you for showing us mercy, sir!”

When Crixus dropped to his knees to express his gratitude, the other two bendits quickly followed.

“I’ve spared you because you might be of use to me one day. However, if you don’t prove your worth when the time comes... I’m sure you know what happens to those who are useless,” Jared asserted coldly.

“Yes, we understand. The three of us will definitely serve you to the best of our abilities,” the Three Bendits swiftly promised.

Now that the orcone orroy was surrounded by demonic fire, they could not escape. They had no intention of being burned to death by it.

“Are you sincere in your offer to work for me?” Jared asked.

“Yes, we are... We are...” the trio frantically promised.

“Fine, I’ll take your word for it. If I find out that you have lied to me, I’ll definitely make you suffer a fate worse than death!”

Jared proceeded to extinguish the inferno with a gentle wave of his hand. The moment the fire was snuffed out, the Three Bendits unleashed a purple beam of light on the orcone orroy. Their bodies subsequently disappeared from within and reappeared outside.

Their heads were covered in sweat while shock remained plastered across their faces.

“Thank you for showing us mercy, sir!”

When Crixus dropped to his knees to express his gratitude, the other two bendits quickly followed.

“I’ve spared you because you might be of use to me one day. However, if you don’t prove your worth when the time comes... I’m sure you know what happens to those who are useless,” Jared asserted coldly.

“Yes, we understand. The three of us will definitely serve you to the best of our abilities,” the Three Bendits swiftly promised.

Read A Man Like None Other Chapter 2758

A Man Like None Other Chapter 2758-After chatting with them, Jared learned that they had started their career as robbers after learning how to teleport in an ancient ruin by accident.

After chatting with them, Jared learned that they had started their career as robbers after learning how to teleport in an ancient ruin by accident.

However, that particular teleportation technique had a limited range of tens of meters, which was how they escaped Jared’s arcane array earlier. They started by using their energy to open a small hole in the arcane array. Once the space inside and outside of it were connected, they could then escape via teleportation.

Jared had an epiphany upon hearing their story. He had thought that the Three Bandits were formidable opponents, not expecting them to be using teleportation instead.

Nevertheless, he admitted that it was a good technique, albeit with limited range. The technique was similar to Skyler's Necro Ring, which was a magical item that allowed its user to teleport hundreds of meters away. Unfortunately, it had broken after several uses after it was demaged.

"Since you agreed to obey me, hand over your bodily spirit to prove your loyalty!" Jared ordered the trio.

"Um..."

The mere mention of handing over their bodily spirits triggered a sense of hesitation among the three brothers. After all, doing so was the equivalent of handing their lives over to Jared.

However, their pause triggered a snort from Jared. "If you refuse to do so, I'll take your lives instead. But don't you worry, I'll only kill you and not destroy your soul remnants. Who knows, you might get lucky and be resurrected sometime in the future."

After chatting with them, Jared learned that they had started their career as robbers after learning how to teleport in an ancient ruin by accident.

Just as he was about to take action, the Three Bandits were cowed into submission by his words.

"Sir, spare us... We'll do as you say... We'll hand them over."

With that, the trio forced out their bodily spirits from within their bodies.

After storing their bodily spirits, Jared tore off the trio's masks with another wave of his hand.

"Now that you're serving me, you have to stop committing petty crimes. Just let me know if there's anything you need," Jared said to them.

"All right. You're the boss going forward. We'll listen to everything you say," Crixus answered quickly.

No sooner had he spoken than a rumbling sound echoed from their stomachs. It was obvious that the three of them hadn't eaten yet.

Therefore, Jared took them to a luxurious hotel and treated them to a feast.

Upon further interaction, the Three Bandits learned of Viola's identity. Emerald Cauldron Sect was famous in the area, and they were surprised that she was actually the lord of the sect. The trio immediately felt as if they had struck the lottery in being able to secure such a powerful patron.

After the meal, Jared and his companions walked toward the square where the airship was parked, as it was time for it to leave.

Now that the Three Bandits were serving Jared, they naturally joined him on his journey to Jipsdale. After all, getting a few more tickets for them didn't cost much at all.

Just as he was about to take action, the Three Bandits were cowed into submission by his words.

In fact, it was peanuts to someone as rich as Viole.

Gheylan and Yuven were already waiting on the airship. When they came forward to greet Jered and Viole, they were stunned by the sight of the Three Bandits.

After Jered introduced everyone, Gheylan got three more tickets for the trio before all of them boarded the airship.

The airship was massive and measured over a hundred meters in length. It also had an expensive cabin with a comfortable interior.

Furthermore, the airship was filled with members of Stelleris Sect working as service staff. As the sect depended on airships for their income, they naturally tried to provide the best experience possible.

The Three Bandits were visibly excited as this was their first time flying in an airship. In contrast to them, Jered wore a grim look on his face as he formulated a plan to rescue the three wyverns.

Taking in Jered's expression and cognizant of what was on his mind, Yuven suggested, "Mr. Chance, now that we're within Stelleris Sect, it would be extremely difficult to save the three wyverns. A better option would be to rescue them halfway through the journey. However, there's a risk that the airship's passengers might object to your actions and potentially attack you."

In fact, it was peanuts to someone as rich as Viole.

Gheylan and Yuven were already waiting on the airship. When they came forward to greet Jered and Viole, they were stunned by the sight of the Three Bandits.

After Jered introduced everyone, Gheylan got three more tickets for the trio before all of them boarded the airship.

The airship was massive and measured over a hundred meters in length. It also had an expensive cabin with a comfortable interior.

Furthermore, the airship was filled with members of Stelleris Sect working as service staff. As the sect depended on airships for their income, they naturally tried to provide the best experience possible.

The Three Bandits were visibly excited as this was their first time flying in an airship. In contrast to them, Jered wore a grim look on his face as he formulated a plan to rescue the three wyverns.

Taking in Jered's expression and cognizant of what was on his mind, Yuven suggested, "Mr. Chance, now that we're within Stelleris Sect, it would be extremely difficult to save the three wyverns. A better option would be to rescue them halfway through the journey. However, there's a risk that the airship's passengers might object to your actions and potentially attack you."

Read A Man Like None Other Chapter 2759

A Man Like None Other Chapter 2759-Yuven analyzed. After all, those who could ride the airship to Jipsdale were no ordinary people.

Yuven analyzed. After all, those who could ride the airship to Jipsdale were no ordinary people.

"Jared, you went to save the wyverns that are pulling the airship?"

Although Yuven had spoken in a low voice, Viola still heard him.

Jared nodded. He saw no reason to hide anything from Viola.

"Don't be ridiculous. These wyverns are extremely important to Stelleris Sect. It's impossible for you to save them here. If you save them, we might not be able to get out of Stelleris Sect. Although Stelleris Sect mainly focuses on business, they have numerous elite fighters in their ranks. Otherwise, outsiders would have schemed to obtain Stelleris Sect's assets a long time ago," Viola warned Jared.

"If we can't make a move here, then let's do it on our way. I have to save these wyverns!" Jared insisted.

Viola gazed at his determined expression for a moment. Although she did not know why Jared insisted on saving the wyverns, she decided to show him her support since he was adamant about it.

After all, a wife would go along with what the husband said. Now that Viola saw herself as Jared's woman, she was certainly going to support him in anything he wanted to do.

"In that case, we'll find a way to save them midway. We mustn't let these passengers find out about our plan to release the wyverns, or else they'll target us," Viola said.

Yuven analyzed. After all, those who could ride the airship to Jipsdale were no ordinary people.

"Are these people all heading toward Jipsdale to attend the Alchemist Fair? They're not all alchemists, are they?"

Jared was perplexed. He thought that sects that focused on alchemy were a rare sight here, and yet, there were so many from this region heading toward Jipsdale.

"Not all of them are alchemists. Many are only heading there for entertainment and to find out if they can get their hands on some divine pills and miracle medicine. Some will even discuss collaborations with certain alchemical sects at the Alchemist Fair," Viola explained.

Jared finally realized that not only was the Alchemist Fair a chance for alchemists to compare against each other, but it was also a way for the alchemists to market their products.

"Then do you know how many wyverns Stellaris Sect has?" Jared asked.
"I don't."

Viola shook her head. After all, she had been in a coma for years, and there were many things she was not aware of.

"Sir, Stellaris Sect only has these three wyverns. It's hard to capture this kind of wyvern, so the tickets to ride an airship drawn by wyverns are sold at an exorbitant price. But they'll only let the wyverns pull an airship when it's a short course. After all, the wyverns won't be able to withstand pulling the airship on long-distance trips. Many airships use arcane arrays powered by crystals. The tall mountain at the southwest of Stellaris Sect has crystals, and the people from Stellaris Sect have been mining it," Crixus, the eldest of the Three Bandits, explained.

"Are these people all heading toward Jipsdale to attend the Alchemist Fair? They're not all alchemists, are they?"

When Jared learned that Stellaris Sect only had three wyverns, he felt much more relieved. All he needed to do was save these three wyverns.

If there were more, Jared might not have the capability to save them all.

"Ladies and gentlemen, please be seated. The airship is about to take off," said one of Stellaris Sect's staff.

Soon, the airship started moving. Jared could see one of Stellaris Sect's members whipping the wyverns with much force.

The second the whip struck the three resting wyverns, they let out howls of agony. Then, they slowly rose and flapped their wings.

The three wyverns flapped their wings as vigorously as they could, and the airship of over a hundred meters in length started moving.

It was apparent that the three wyverns were having a hard time lifting the airship, but the members of Stellaris Sect did not care at all. They continued whipping the wyverns.

Jared could not stop the murderous look creeping into his eyes. He desperately wished to dart over to the men and kill him.

After a few minutes of struggling, the wyverns finally lifted the airship off the ground and slowly brought it into the sky.

When Jared learned that Stellaris Sect only had three wyverns, he felt much more relieved. All he needed to do was save these three wyverns.

If there were more, Jared might not have the capability to save them all.

"Ladies and gentlemen, please be seated. The airship is about to take off," said one of Stellaris Sect's staff.

Soon, the airship started moving. Jared could see one of Stellaris Sect's members whipping the wyverns with much force. The second the whip struck the three resting wyverns, they let out howls of agony. Then, they slowly rose and flopped their wings. The three wyverns flopped their wings as vigorously as they could, and the airship of over a hundred meters in length started moving. It was apparent that the three wyverns were having a hard time lifting the airship, but the members of Stellaris Sect did not care at all. They continued whipping the wyverns. Jared could not stop the murderous look creeping into his eyes. He desperately wished to dart over to the man and kill him. After a few minutes of struggling, the wyverns finally lifted the airship off the ground and slowly brought it into the sky.

Read A Man Like None Other Chapter 2760

A Man Like None Other Chapter 2760-As the airship flew toward Jipsdale, many people began flocking to the sides to look outside, for it was their first time on board an airship.

Even Jared and the Three Bandits were constantly looking out through the windows.

In no time, the airship was out of Stellaris Sect's territory. By then, Jared could no longer sit still. As he watched the wyverns struggle to pull the airships, the anger in him intensified.

Just as he was about to rise to his feet, Viola stopped him. She gave him a look, signaling him to stay put.

"The three of you will sneak into the front cabin to release the wyverns," she said to the Three Bandits.

The Three Bandits froze. They did not know why Viola had tasked them with this, but Jared had their bodily spirit, so they had no choice but to heed her words.

The trio stood up and ambled toward the front section. Many passengers had their eyes close, either cultivating or resting. None were paying attention to where the Three Bandits were heading to.

At that moment, the airship was moving steadily, and a few of Stellaris Sect's members had gathered to chat.

Quietly, the Three Bandits sneaked to the front of the airship. While no one was paying attention to them, they teleported to the front cabin.

There were three Stellaris Sect members who were watching the three wyverns fly. Any time either of the wyverns slowed down, the Stellaris Sect members would whip it.

The Three Bandits did not alert the Stellaris Sect members to their presence, however. While the Stellaris Sect members were engrossed in their work, the Three Bandits had sneaked up on them.

In one swift motion, the trio killed the three Stellaris Sect members. They were ruthless individuals, showing no hesitation when they took the other three men's lives.

Once those three Stellaris Sect members were dealt with, the Three Bandits stepped forward and saw the arm-thick iron chains restraining the three wyverns.

"We'll have to break these chains to release the wyverns," Juan said to Crixus.

"Then that's our plan."

Crixus took out his sword and start hacking the chains.

Clang!

The moment steel met steel, sparks flew, and Crixus was sent flying back.

The chains remained intact.

Then, ripples began manifesting on the surface of the chains.

"What the heck? They even cast an arcane array on the chains! What are we going to do now?" Salazar cursed after briefly studying the chains.

The trio was stumped, their eyes fixed on their source of trouble.

Crixus stood up, glanced at the glimmering chains, and said, "I think we'll have to ask Mr. Chance about this. Neither of us can break this."

The three of them quickly left the front cabin, but their movement still went unnoticed by the others.

However, there were two elderly individuals, a man and a woman, as still as statues in the corner of the airship. Their eyes were closed, but the looks on their faces were stiff.

"Do we do it now?" the elderly woman asked the elderly man.

The elderly man shook his head. "Not yet. Let's see what they're up to next. They wouldn't dare attempt to hijack the airship with their current abilities."

There were over a hundred people onboard. Given the skills of the Three Bandits, of course, they wouldn't dare to hijack the airship.

The elderly woman fell silent. Her eyes were still closed, but she continued spying on the Three Bandits with her spiritual sense.

Once the Three Bandits approached Jared, Crixus whispered, "Mr. Chance, the wyverns are chained up with an arcane array cast on the chains. We can't break it."

Jared stood up, wanting to head to the front cabin with the Three Bandits.

However, right as he got up, he furrowed his brows and snapped his head in the direction of the two elderly individuals.

"Mr. Chance, what's the matter?" Crixus asked.

"Oh, it's nothing," Jared said, then had the Three Bandits lead the way.