

A WARRIOR UNDEFEATABLE/ A Man Like None Other

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3781-Handling these white wolves alone wouldn't have been an issue for them.

However, in such a place, the slightest carelessness could result in them being drawn into the chaos dimension, and that was the true danger.

These white wolves seemed to be intrigued by the polar stones before them.

Each one was baring its teeth and snarling, standing guard around the polar stones.

Jared knew that without dealing with these white wolves, there was no way they could get their hands on the polar stones.

"Prepare for battle..." Jared drew out his Dragonslayer Sword.

Bianca stood right behind Jared with a dozen holy maidens.

Everyone's gaze held an unwavering determination.

Upon witnessing Jared and his group preparing to attack, a white wolf let out a furious roar. In response, dozens of white wolves bellowed fiercely and charged toward them.

Much like a massive tidal wave, endless frost energy carried a terrifying aura as it surged toward Jared.

Jared swung his Dragonslayer Sword, which was wrapped in demonic fire.

The demonic fire blazed fiercely, startling several dozens of white wolves.

This kind of demon beast was most afraid of demonic fire.

The emergence of the demonic fire caused dozens of white wolves to halt their attack. Bianca seized the opportunity and struck them with the other holy maidens.

A dozen or so frost swords emitted waves of light.

Stream after stream of aura flowed, subsequently coalescing into a cloud in mid air.

The cloud began to expand incessantly. A faint smile played at the corners of Jared's mouth. He then unleashed a demonic fire into the midst of the cloud.

The clouds, which were initially chillingly cold, suddenly had a touch of warmth.

Clouds tumbled overhead as countless ice arrows plummeted from mid-air.

These ice arrows were all tinged with a touch of demonic fire.

The white wolves' fur bristled when they saw that. They gathered, their collective aura converging to form a visible ice shield.

Breaking through this ice shield was incredibly challenging.

However, once the ice arrow was imbued with demonic fire, it could easily penetrate anything.

Upon contact with the demonic fire, the ice shield instantly melted.

A large number of white wolves were struck, and they collapsed to the ground in mournful howls.

After just one fight, half of the white wolves had been decimated.

The alpha white wolf was seething with rage, its jaws agape, exposing a terrifying array of teeth. It lunged at Jared, recognizing him as the leader of these humans.

It unleashed its aura, and a wave of frost energy rushed forth.

Upon seeing the situation, Jared let out a cold huff, smoothly swinging the Dragonslayer Sword in his hand.

The white wolf only felt a wave of heat washing over it, and then it collided with the rolling frost energy.

The white wolf was sent flying, tumbling several times before it slowly managed to stand back up.

Fear was evident in its eyes as it looked at Jared.

With a howl, the white wolf began slowly retreating with its pack.

However, the route these white wolves took for their retreat led them toward the chaos dimension.

Jared furrowed his brows.

These white wolves live here. Are they oblivious to the terror of this chaos dimension?

How dare they approach it?

The holy maidens, too, looked on in confusion.

They didn't dare to approach.

At that moment, everyone was dumbfounded.

Are the white wolves trying to take their own lives by venturing into the chaos dimension?

"Did any of you notice where those white wolves came from just now?"
Suddenly, Jared remembered that those white wolves seemed to have appeared out of nowhere.

He had thoroughly investigated beforehand but didn't notice the white wolves.

Yet, the white wolves had suddenly appeared out of nowhere. There was no way they could have hidden their aura.

All the holy maidens shook their heads. None of them had noticed where the white wolves had come from.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3782-Jared turned his gaze toward the chaos dimension. The white wolves must have appeared from that very chaos dimension.

Only in this way could they evade my scrutiny.

But the chaos dimension is filled with tumultuous time-space currents. Death is inevitable once entered.

Why aren't these white wolves afraid?

Jared found himself lost in deep thought and confusion, unable to comprehend what was going on.

“What's there to be confused about? The so-called border of the chaos dimension is nothing more than a barrier. The supreme being who created the Ethereal Realm could certainly allow demon beasts to cross the barrier while preventing humans from doing so. I can casually create a secret realm and set up an arcane array. It's off-limits to humans, but demon beasts can roam freely.

This is simple. You don't need to be confused anymore. This chaos dimension is specifically designed to target humans,” Vermilion Demon Lord said.

“Mr. Vermilion, what lies beyond this chaos dimension?” Jared was eager to discover what could possibly exist beyond the border of Ethereal Realm.

“It's hard to say. It could be another world, or maybe it's still the Ethereal Realm.

It could even be a void of nothingness. The Ethereal Realm wasn't my creation, so how would I know?” Seeing that his questions weren't leading anywhere, Jared decided to stop prying. He turned his attention to Bianca and the others and advised, “Be careful when you go to gather the polar stones...” Jared had Bianca and the others gather the polar stones and decided not to collect any himself. He was wary of storing them in his Storage Ring, fearing that the Celestial Devourer might consume them again.

While Bianca and her group were busy collecting the polar stones, Leighton and the Muellers unexpectedly arrived on the other side of the crevice.

They must have sensed the aura of battle here and made their way over. Upon seeing Leighton arriving with his entourage, the holy maidens trembled.

After all, Lunarius Palace had already fallen out with the Mueller family.

Moreover, the Mueller family was also aware of the existence of the polar stones and had a need for them.

If they encountered people from other sects or prestigious families, there was no need to fear. After all, many were unaware of the existence of polar stones, let alone their significance.

Most importantly, for people from other sects and prestigious families, obtaining the polar stones didn't offer them any significant aid.

Upon seeing Leighton, Jared merely offered a cold, detached smile, showing no signs of worry whatsoever.

"Uncle Leighton, loo, there are thousands of polar stones, and they are all extremely pure," an excited member of the Mueller family exclaimed.

"I'm not blind. I saw them." Leighton glared at him. Then with a playful smirk, he said, "Well isn't this a pleasant surprise? I've found you without even trying."

None of you are getting away now. These polar stones are ours. You guys better leave your lives behind..." Bianca and several other holy maidens drew their frost swords and prepared for battle.

Jared took two steps forward. He looked at Leighton through the crevice and said, "How dare you, a defeated man, make such grand claims? Did I not beat you hard enough?" Jared wasn't afraid of Leighton because he knew they couldn't possibly cross this crevice.

By the time they managed to navigate around it, Jared and his group would have long since made their escape.

shield him from Leighton's attack.

Leighton grew increasingly excited as he spoke.

"You're all talk. If you're so capable, come over here. We won't move." With a smirk on his face, Jared gestured toward Leighton.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3783-Jared's arrogance made Leighton's face turn red. However, even in his anger, he wasn't foolish.

He knew Jared was up to something.

Upon seeing Leighton hesitate, Jared taunted him even further, "What's the matter? Are you scared? I thought the Mueller family was supposed to be impressive. I see you're all just cowards. I'll have you know that it was I who killed Keiran, the esteemed eldest heir of the Mueller family. Back then, he even knelt before me, begging for his life.” Jared was provoking all the members of the Mueller family.

Listening to Jared’s mockery of the Mueller family, Bianca and the others gradually relaxed.

Leighton clenched his fists tightly, yet he didn’t charge forward. Two members of the Mueller family, however, simply couldn’t hold back anymore.

“How dare you humiliate the Mueller family! You’re courting death...” Two experts from the Mueller family launched themselves at Jared. Just as the two of them leaped over the crevice, a sudden surge of intense aura burst forth from the crevice.

The two experts from the Mueller family were instantaneously obliterated, their disintegrated forms tumbling into the crevice.

However, this time, a series of sounds unexpectedly echoed from within the crevice.

Jared was taken aback. He hadn’t anticipated that there would be creatures still surviving within the crevice.

The roar sounded as if it was from a demon beast or a scream echoing from the depths of hell.

Leighton was dumbfounded. His eyes were filled with fury when he witnessed the death of two members of the Mueller family.

We’ve been fooled!

He must be aware that this crevice can’t be easily crossed, which is why he deliberately provoked us.

“Everyone, don’t be fooled. No one is allowed to cross this crevice. There’s something strange within it,” Leighton cautioned the Muellers.

Seeing that Leighton was no longer falling for his tricks, Jared decided to simply ignore him. He directed Bianca and the others to quickly gather the polar stones.

“Mr. Vermilion, why do there seem to be creatures living within the crevice created by your sword strike?” Jared asked Vermilion Demon Lord.

“How would I know? It’s been thousands of years. It’s not that strange if there are creatures living inside.” Upon reflection, Jared agreed and decided not to question further. However, he was certain that any creature capable of surviving within the crevice must possess extraordinary strength.

After collecting thousands of polar stones, Jared, along with Bianca and the others, continued to move forward along the crevice.

Leighton could do nothing but watch and clench his teeth in anger.

“Uncle Leighton, how did they manage to pass through this crevice? They couldn’t have possibly gone around it, could they?” a member of the Mueller family asked.

“Right, they might have gone around it. Let’s find a way to circle around.” Leighton left with the Muellers.

At this very moment, a team of a hundred people made their way over.

This was the largest team to have ever ventured into the polar region.

However, this group of a hundred people was all dressed in five different colors.

These individuals were from the Five Great Sects.

Lauden had just advanced to Ninth Level Tribulator, further solidifying his position as the head of the Five Great Sects.

After the incident involving Jared, a rift had already formed among the Five Great Sects.

Lauden was also aware that Heinrich and others had developed rebellious intentions.

Hence, during that period, he was constantly immersed in intensive training, and he never left the headquarters of the Five Great Sects.

After all, he was now a level above everyone else. As long as Heinrich and the others weren’t foolish, they wouldn’t go against him.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3784-Heinrik had heard that the immortal's tomb was in the polar region and it was abundant with treasures. This was what lured the Five Great Sects to come.

Swayed by the allure of the treasure and boosted by his own increased strength, Lauden had nothing to fear. Thus, he decided to join in.

"Mr. Delacroix, how could I possibly deceive you? We have mobilized so many people and journeyed such a long distance. If I were to lie, how could I continue to stay within the Five Great Sects in the future? I heard quite some time ago that the local sects from around here have already made their way to the polar region. We must be the last ones to arrive. However, the polar region is vast.

Finding the exact location of the immortal's tomb won't be easy," Heinrik quickly said.

"Let's pick up our pace then and try to avoid any conflicts with people from other sects and prestigious families. Also, try your best to avoid encounters with the Demonic Cultivators. After all, this is the southern region, where Demonic Cultivators are aplenty," Lauden advised the crowd.

Everyone nodded. They were here to hunt for treasures and not to take lives.

As long as there were no conflicts of interest, there was no need for any physical confrontation.

Lauden took the lead, scouting the path ahead, while Heinrik tagged along behind, exchanging glances with the leaders of Celestial Moon Sect and Celestial Sun Sect, Stuart and Edward respectively.

Noticing that, the leader of Celestial Dawn Sect, Keelan, subtly lowered his head, as if he hadn't seen anything at all. He seemed to be intimidated by them.

Heinrik had lured Lauden over, not for the sake of treasures, but because they had already harbored intentions to kill him.

Lauden's advancement to Ninth Level Tribulator had also instilled a heightened sense of urgency in them.

Originally, their disagreement with Lauden was due to the matter concerning Jared.

But now Lauden had already advanced to Ninth Level Tribulator. If he managed to defeat them all and drive them out of the Five Great Sects, they would be utterly helpless.

Thus, Heinrich harbored the intent to seize the upper hand, which resulted in him tricking Lauden into the polar region. This place was far from the headquarters of the Five Great Sects and was extremely secluded.

This was indeed the perfect opportunity to make a move against Lauden.

Keelan of Celestial Dawn Sect, who had been standing with Lauden, chose to remain silent at this moment.

The reason they ventured into the polar region without making a move on Lauden was that they, like Heinrich, were also after the treasures at the immortal's tomb..

Once they found the treasures, they would make a move against Lauden.

This was the classic case of killing two birds with one stone.

Unaware of the danger he was in, Lauden continued to forge ahead, exploring the path before him.

As Jared and the holy maidens journeyed closely along the crevice, they encountered and slaughtered several demon beasts along the way. Their journey was fruitful, as they collected a substantial amount of polar stones.

Nevertheless, for the development of Lunarius Palace, these polar stones were merely a drop in the bucket.

At that moment, they needed to locate the polar stone mine. This time, it took nearly a full day of travel for them to reach the end of the crevice.

When they saw the end in sight, they breathed a sigh of relief.

Being caught between the crevice and the chaos dimension, they had constantly been on edge.

Falling into the crevice was a path leading straight to death, and being sucked into the chaos dimension was just as much a dead end.

Under this constant shadow of death, everyone had been grappling with immense pressure in their hearts.

Jared had had a tough time for the past two days.

“You guys get some rest. I’m worried that if something unexpected happens, you won’t be able to handle it,” Jared stated bluntly.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 3785-The holy maidens rested in a mountain cave. Jared simply sat down at the mouth of the cave, allowing the wind and snow to batter against his body.

Even now, the night in the polar region was as luminous as daylight. The moonlight reflected off the white snow, casting an intensely radiant glow.

Jared activated his spiritual sense, then quietly closed his eyes. He wasn’t cultivating. Instead, he was constantly pondering about what exactly was inside the chaos dimension.

Those white wolves could traverse through that chaos dimension, but humans simply couldn’t.

Just as he was lost in thought, he suddenly furrowed his brows. He sensed a familiar presence, elusive yet undeniable.

Given the circumstances, there was only one plausible explanation: The distance was too great, and Jared’s spiritual sense wasn’t able to discern clearly.

Jared slowly rose to his feet, moving in the direction from which the aura was emanating. Several miles away from the cave where Jared and his group were resting, Pablo was atop a woman.

The woman was none other than Yuliya, who had left Jared and the others.

Pablo had set out to search for treasures and resources in the polar region.

However, despite spending a considerable amount of time searching, he found absolutely nothing.

Everyone who came here belonged to various prestigious sects and families, arriving in groups. He was the only wandering cultivator.

Hence, he was particularly cautious. After entering the polar region, he made sure to avoid any contact with other cultivators.

Over the past couple of days, Pablo had found nothing, feeling utterly dejected deep within. But unexpectedly, he bumped into Yuliya.

Yuliya was alone, and she was exceptionally beautiful. This instantly sparked ill intentions in Pablo.

Yuliya simply wasn't a match for Pablo in terms of strength.

She found herself pinned down directly by Pablo.

"You b*stard, let me go. I am from Lunarius Palace. If you dare to lay a finger on me, our head won't let you off the hook. You're nothing but a Demonic Cultivator," Yuliya cursed at Pablo.

At that moment, Pablo couldn't care less about anything else. He stepped forward and ripped off Yuliya's clothes.

Yuliya was on the verge of tears.

She could handle death, but enduring this kind of humiliation was even more unbearable than death itself.

At this point, Yuliya wished she could just die, but she couldn't.

Pablo tore at Yuliya's clothes, his eyes filled with lustful intent. No matter how desperately Yuliya called out, no one could possibly save her in this vast, desolate wilderness.

In the end, Yuliya gave up her struggle, tears trickling down from the corners of her eyes.

She was filled with regret.

Why did I leave?

If I hadn't left and had stayed with Jared and the others, none of this would have happened.

Just as Yuliya was about to be completely undressed, and Pablo was on the verge of forcing himself on her, suddenly, a teasing voice echoed out of nowhere.

“You’re a grown man. Are you not ashamed of yourself for treating a woman this way?” Pablo’s whole body shuddered, and he hastily got up when he heard that voice.

His face was contorted when he saw Jared.

Taking advantage of the situation, Yuliya quickly rose to her feet and positioned herself behind Jared.

At that point, Jared had already reached Third Level Tribulator, and his aura was notably powerful. Pablo knew he was no match for him.

Yuliya’s face flushed with embarrassment. If she had the ability to beat Pablo, she would have taken action to silence him long ago.

“If I were to pursue a woman, I wouldn’t be as shameless as you. Since we’ve met today, let’s just settle things once and for all...” Suddenly, the Dragonslayer Sword appeared in Jared’s hand, its chilling radiance causing Pablo to tremble all over
