

A WARRIOR UNDEFEATABLE

/ A Man Like None Other

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4411 – Catalina’s words prompted Jared to give her a second glance as he wondered about her true identity. How could she possibly show, no interest in these celestial techniques?

However, Jared wasn’t particularly interested. After all, the various cultivation techniques he had learned were taught by beings from the celestial realm.

Focus Technique was a top-tier cultivation technique in the celestial realm.

Cultivation techniques like Sacred Light Fist, various divine markings, and Nethersky Eye were all incredibly impressive.

Jared didn’t actually need to follow the records on the massive rocks to learn any techniques. If he truly wanted to learn, Vermilion Demon Lord was far more proficient than those immortals.

After all, he was a figure from the eighth level of the celestial realm, far beyond the reach of any ordinary immortal.

“It’s just some ordinary immortal-level cultivation techniques. I’m not really interested. Let’s continue searching for other magical items,” Jared said with a smile.

Jared’s words left Catalina slightly taken aback. She couldn’t help but give Jared a once-over, her gaze filled with curiosity. This only piqued her interest in Jared’s identity even more.

At that moment, Catalina and Jared were greatly intrigued by each other’s identities.

However, neither of them felt inclined to reveal themselves.

The two of them had only just met. They weren’t close enough to share their deepest secrets yet.

Upon hearing Jared and Catalina’s words, Cloud, Judith, and Rightblind were nearly driven to their wits’ end.

Just because these two weren’t interested in these cultivation techniques didn’t mean they weren’t as well.

However, given that Jared had already spoken, it wasn't appropriate for Cloud or Judith to say anything further.

"Since you're not interested, let's not waste any more time here..."

After Catalina finished speaking, she went on ahead.

Jared trailed behind, and the others reluctantly followed.

Jared looked at Catalina intently. Given the presence of an illusion array here, it was highly likely that Catalina wouldn't be able to find her way out.

But to his surprise, Catalina weaved through the massive rocks and managed to emerge from the illusion array.

Is she an array master too?

Did she notice the arcane array within the massive rocks?

Jared quickly caught up with Catalina, but he didn't know where to begin asking.

If he were to speak up, he would reveal his discovery of the illusion array within the massive rocks. If Catalina were to question why he hadn't informed her earlier, it would put him in an awkward situation.

Still, Jared secretly desired to know whether Catalina was truly an array master or not.

Just as Jared was caught in a dilemma, unsure of how to broach the subject, Catalina suddenly halted. With a playful expression, she looked at Jared and asked, "Did you notice the illusion array within the massive rocks?"

"Huh..." Jared was taken aback, but then he nodded in affirmation.

"I realized some time ago that you had already found the illusion array and chose to keep it from me. Were you planning to wait until I got trapped in it, just to swoop in and show off in front of me?" Catalina asked straightforwardly.

Jared was left utterly flustered, his face turning bright red. He didn't know what to do.

He had indeed harbored such thoughts. He believed that when the time came, Catalina and the others would start to take him seriously, and he could finally show off.

But now, his attempt to show off had backfired, leaving him humiliated.

"Ms. Lantz, are you an array master too?" Jared asked awkwardly.

"Of course not, I don't understand anything about arcane arrays..."

Catalina shook her head.

“Huh?” Jared was stunned. “Then how...”

Jared wondered how Catalina had managed to escape the illusion array without any knowledge of arcane arrays.

Without any knowledge of arcane arrays, how was she able to unlock the entrance to the Celestial Battlefield?

Catalina flashed a smile and spread open her right hand, allowing Jared to glance at the runes on her palm. After that, she continued on her way, still wearing a smile.

Jared instantly understood that it was all because of the runes on Catalina’s palm.

He couldn’t help but wonder who had inscribed the runes on her palm. They seemed omnipotent, almost magical.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4412 – After they walked for a while longer, the surrounding scenery began to change. The once barren land was now covered in greenery.

Mountains also began to appear on both sides, as if they had suddenly appeared out of nowhere.

A wave of fresh air rushed over, instantly making one feel much more refreshed both body and mind.

In the middle of the mountain range, there was a deep canyon.

Many people were already standing at the canyon entrance, seemingly peering into the valley, but no one dared to approach.

When Jared and the others approached, the crowd immediately parted to make way.

Now, in the Celestial Battlefield, everyone had become ordinary, so they had become more restrained. If a conflict were to break out, a single stone could easily crush them to death.

These cultivators have been practicing for many years, and without spiritual energy, their physical strength was probably not even as good as that of ordinary people,

After everyone made their way, Jared and the others finally saw that in the center of the valley, there were three statues. The statues were not large, only the size of an ordinary person. However, around the statues, a few people were lying there, motionless. It was hard to discern whether they were alive or dead.

These three statues looked quite ordinary, but their faces were twisted and their expressions varied, making anyone who saw them feel a chill down their spine.

“What’s going on?”

Catalina glanced at the people beside her and asked.

An elderly man responded, “These three statues are strange. When you get close, your mind becomes unsettled, illusions appear, and you eventually faint. I barely managed to retreat just now.”

After hearing the elderly man’s words, Jared and the others realized that the people around the statue had indeed fainted.

Catalina looked at Jared and asked, “Did you notice anything wrong?”

Since Jared understood array craft, perhaps these three statues, like the giant rock just then, also possessed something like an illusion array.

Yet, Jared shook his head. “I can’t tell, but I’m sure that there are no arcane arrays around these three statues. I don’t know if there are other things. However, now that we are all ordinary people, even if these three statues can cause someone to faint, I doubt they hold much power...”

This was Jared’s analysis. Jared himself didn’t know much about it; he needed to investigate further.

Right now, there was no way for him to use spiritual sense to investigate, and Nethersky Eye could not be used either. His only option was to get closer and see what was going on.

Hearing Jared say this, Catalina walked toward the three stone statues.

“Ms. Lantz, be careful. Why don’t I go...”

Upon seeing Catalina about to approach the three statues, Jared cautioned her.

“Don’t worry. Have you forgotten that I have a defensive secret technique?”

Catalina waved her hand at Jared and then walked over.

Everyone was watching Catalina, and Rightblind stepped forward, blocking Catalina’s path. “Ms. Lantz, you can’t take the risk. If anything bad happens to you, we’ll be in trouble. I’ll go and see what those three statues are really about...”

“Rightblind, even though you currently possess the sword intent, you’re still an ordinary man, utterly defenseless against that sort of spiritual sense attack. I have a defensive secret technique. I won’t be in any danger...”

Catalina spoke to Rightblind as she continued to walk forward without stopping.

Soon; Catalina arrived in front of the three statues, but just as she stepped forward, she suddenly felt a wave of dizziness, and the space in front of her began to twist and distort.

Immediately, countless illusions flashed through Catalina's mind, infiltrating her consciousness.

Suddenly, Catalina felt a shadow blocking her in front, and then it immediately embraced her.

"Ms. Lantz, are you okay?"

Jared's voice rang out.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4413 – Upon seeing Jared, Catalina felt a momentary daze. Feeling the warmth of Jared's chest and seeing his affectionate gaze, Catalina felt herself about to succumb to him.

She didn't understand. They had only just met, so why would Jared care for her so much?

"I'm fine..." Catalina looked at Jared and gave a slight smile.

Jared followed Catalina's gaze, slowly moving closer.

Catalina's heart began to race. She knew what Jared was about to do. He was going to kiss her.

Catalina wanted to dodge, but she found she couldn't move at all. Her body had no strength left.

In the end, Catalina could only close her eyes and wait for Jared's kiss, and at that moment, she surprisingly felt a bit of anticipation deep within her heart.

Buzz...

Suddenly, a golden light burst from Catalina's palm, accompanied by a humming sound in her sea of consciousness, and Catalina regained her awareness.

She realized that Jared hadn't embraced her at all, let alone tried to kiss her.

It was all an illusion, and at this moment, Jared was still watching her from a distance.

Catalina couldn't comprehend how she ended up having such illusions. Thankfully, no one else knew about it. Otherwise, she would have died of embarrassment.

"D*mn it! That was close... I almost made a fool out of myself..."

Fuming, Catalina glared angrily at the three statues, then slapped one of them with her palm.

Smack!

When Catalina struck the statue with her palm, surprisingly, the statue didn't move an inch.

Catalina then remembered that she had no spiritual energy left in her body, and she didn't possess any sword intent to break free from the illusion. She could only rely on the rune in her palm.

However, when everyone saw that Catalina had not fainted and had been knocked down by the illusion, they were all quite surprised, but no one dared to approach.

"Ms. Lantz, let me..."

Rightblind, seeing this, swung his sword, and a surge of sword intent rose with it.

Boom!

The sword's intent fiercely struck the statue, causing it to shatter instantly.

After—the statue shattered, a dagger was surprisingly hidden inside it. The dagger appeared entirely blood-red, and even a bloody smell emanated from it.

"What is this?"

Catalina reached out to grab the dagger, but Jared swiftly stopped her.

"Ms. Lantz, don't touch this object. This dagger is imbued with a very lethal intent. Your current condition cannot withstand it."

The moment the dagger appeared, Jared sensed a lethal intent emanating from it.

If everyone's strength hadn't been suppressed, the sinister aura on the dagger might not have caused any harm.

However, they were all ordinary people now, and even a small amount of lethal intent entering their bodies would be unbearable.

Catalina looked at Jared, then withdrew her hand. She had already begun to trust him.

“Daemonia Dagger... This is a divine weapon from the celestial realm...”

A middle-aged man in a black robe suddenly shouted excitedly, then rushed over desperately, trying to grab the dagger.

Upon seeing the situation, Rightblind swiftly extended his longsword, blocking the middle-aged man in the black robe. He coldly stated, “D*mn it. This is something Ms. Lantz discovered. How dare you touch it?”

The middle-aged man in the black robe was taken aback, immediately stepping back twice. They had all witnessed Rightblind shattering the stone statue with a single sword strike.

In this place where spiritual energy was sealed, the fact that Rightblind still possessed such strength naturally instilled fear in him.

The elderly who had just spoken stated, “This statue was indeed broken by you, but we discovered it first. If you say this thing belongs to you, we won’t accept it.”

He had risked his life to retreat just a moment ago. Now, there was a divine weapon inside the stone statue, yet they couldn’t get them. Who wouldn’t be frustrated by this?.

“Exactly. We were the ones who discovered the statue first...”

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4414 – “You opened the entrance’s arcane array, and we paid spiritual stones to come in. You can’t possibly claim all the things inside as yours, can you?”

“Can’t we just buy it with our spiritual stones if it comes to that?”

Everyone was feeling dissatisfied and started arguing..

If all the treasures they encountered along the way ended in Catalina’s hands, their journey would have been in vain.

Everyone’s abilities were constrained except for Rightblind’s sword intent. Given the circumstances, no one could match up to him.

“Silence! If you want to obtain the treasures, you will have to fight me first,” Rightblind proclaimed while waving his sword meaningfully.

Upon seeing that, everyone fell silent.

Although they were quiet due to Rightblind’s oppression, their eyes showed defiance.

“Rightblind, you’re being reckless!” Catalina rebuked while glaring at Rightblind, who had no choice but to step back.

“Everyone, you’re right. I don’t own these treasures, nor should I use my power to exploit those weaker than me. Here’s my proposition. Anyone who wants this dagger must trade it using spiritual stones,” Catalina suggested. “Of course, we’ll split the spiritual stones equally. That way, everyone benefits, and our venture here wouldn’t have been in vain.”

Catalina’s suggestion instantly had everyone raising their hands in agreement. After all, this was the best solution..

Each of them would get a share of the pie, so no one objected.

The black-robed middle-aged man frowned slightly and said, “Miss, I’m afraid none of us have as many spiritual stones as you. The treasures will still end up being yours, and we’ll only be able to obtain some spiritual stones.”

It was evident that he was deeply interested in the Daemonia Dagger. However, Catalina was likely the only one here with enough spiritual stones to outbid him if he wanted the dagger.

After all, Catalina had already collected ample spiritual stones at the entrance.

“You can rest assured that I won’t get involved in the bidding. I have no interest in this Daemonia Dagger,” Catalina replied, shaking her head.

Upon hearing that Catalina was not interested, the middle-aged man’s eyes lit up.

“Jared, do you want the dagger?” Catalina asked, turning her gaze toward Jared.

“No thanks. I’m not interested in the Daemonia Dagger since my weapon is more powerful.” Jared also shook his head.

Regardless of whether it was the Dragonslayer Sword, the Dragon Bell, or even the Divine Bow, the power they unleashed was far greater than the Daemonia Dagger.

Seeing another person give up, the middle-aged man’s eyes shone even brighter.

“Everyone, the Daemonia Dagger is very important to me. It carries a potent lethal intent that will be too overwhelming for you all to handle as we’re practically ordinary individuals now.

However, I'm not afraid of the lethal intent, so I hope everyone would consider letting me have this dagger. I'm willing to offer a hundred thousand spiritual stones," the black-robed middle-aged man courteously addressed the crowd.

He worried that someone might try to compete with him for the Daemonia Dagger. If that were to happen, he would be in real trouble when he ran out of spiritual stones.

"A hundred thousand spiritual stones? Are you trying to trick us? I'll offer a hundred and fifty thousand spiritual stones!"

Someone immediately objected. After all, the higher the price, the more spiritual stones everyone would receive, so they couldn't let the black-robed man take away the dagger so easily.

"You..." The black-robed man furrowed his brows, anger visible in his eyes. However, he had no choice but to speak up. "Then I offer two hundred thousand spiritual stones. I hope you all-

"Three hundred thousand spiritual stones!" An elderly interrupted.

"Three hundred and fifty thousand!"

"Four hundred thousand!"

"Five hundred thousand!"

Before the black-robed man could even speak, the others had already started clamoring to raise the price.

The black-robed man was livid and stared at the crowd in disbelief. They were clearly messing around, not genuinely interested in the Daemonia Dagger but only wanting to drive up the price.

"A million!" The black-robed man realized if the crowd continued, the price would keep escalating. Therefore, gritting his teeth, he boldly shouted the exorbitant cost of a million spiritual stones.

As expected, when the one million bid was called out, it immediately stunned everyone present. They all stared at the man. No one dared to raise the price further..

Upon realizing no one was raising the price, the black-robed man finally breathed a sigh of relief.

Catalina glanced at the crowd and said, "If no one raises the bid, then the Daemonia Dagger belongs to this gentleman."

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4415 – “Let him have the dagger. The bid has already reached a million spiritual stones, so no one’s competing with him anymore.”

“It seems this guy is genuinely fond of the dagger. We’ve also managed to obtain a decent amount of spiritual stones for free, so we should be content.”

“This trading method is brilliant. Even if I don’t get a single treasure, I’m still satisfied since I can receive spiritual stones.”

Everyone was quite pleased and stopped raising the price.

“Sir, the Daemonia Dagger is now yours,” Catalina said while turning her gaze toward the black-robed man.

The man rushed forward with a face full of excitement. He swiftly grabbed the Daemonia Dagger, feeling its subtle lethal intent. The energy was so intense that his body quivered in excitement.

“Sir, you’ve received the goods. Isn’t it time to hand over the spiritual stones? Everyone is waiting,” Catalina said.

“I...” the black-robed man stuttered, his expression turning awkward.

Upon seeing that expression, Catalina immediately realized he probably didn’t have that many spiritual stones and had merely been making random bids.

Others had also noticed the situation. Someone stepped forward, demanding, “Buddy, if you can’t give us the spiritual stones, you better return the item. Otherwise, don’t blame us for being rude.”

“Yeah! Why did you bid so enthusiastically when you don’t have enough spiritual stones? Are you making fun of us? Even if our powers are constrained, it would only take one hit from each of us to finish you off.”

“Hand over the spiritual stones, or we’ll kill you on the spot!”

The crowd was indignant, ready to confront the black-robed man.

After all, this matter concerned everyone's interests. Even if Catalina agreed to give him the dagger for free, the others certainly wouldn't compromise.

It was a case of intertwined interests, a clear measure of Catalina's cunning.

"Wait, don't be hasty! I didn't say I wouldn't pay up," the black-robed man pleaded.

The furious crowd scared him. He feared that if they decided to gang up on him, his life would be in serious jeopardy.

"Everyone, I only have five hundred thousand spiritual stones, but I can borrow some."

With that, he turned to Catalina and said, "Miss, I would like to borrow five hundred thousand spiritual stones from you. I'll return them to you immediately when we leave here."

"We are neither kin nor friends. I don't even know you. Why should I lend you spiritual stones? If you run off, who am I supposed to look for?" Catalina replied, staring at the man in amusement.

"No, I would never run away, I assure you. I can entrust a strand of my bodily spirit to you. If I were to abscond without returning the spiritual stones, you have the authority to extinguish my bodily spirit," the black-robed man suggested.

His decision left many utterly stunned. In the eyes of the cultivators, the bodily spirit was synonymous with life itself. Entrusting one's bodily spirit to another was akin to giving one's life to the other party.

The black-robed man planned to use his bodily spirit to borrow spiritual stones, which showed his sincerity in returning them.

Catalina nodded at him, saying, "All right, I'll lend you five hundred thousand spiritual stones."

Once she finished speaking, she tossed out an item pouch from her hand. It contained five hundred thousand spiritual stones.

The black-robed man compiled his spiritual stones and those borrowed from Catalina to place them on the ground.

Following that, Catalina distributed the one million spiritual stones according to the number of people present.

The crowd was laughing and smiling while holding the spiritual stones they had obtained without effort.

The black-robed man extended his palm, slowly moving it toward his consciousness field. He planned to extract a strand of bodily spirit for Catalina.

Catalina stopped his action. "You don't need to give me your bodily spirit. I believe you. I trust you will return my five hundred thousand spiritual stones."

The man paused briefly in surprise before he thanked Catalina, "Thank you, miss. I will surely repay your kindness in the future."

After he finished speaking, he rose and began to walk away. He was leaving the Celestial Battlefield.

Now that he had gotten the divine weapon he wanted, he had no reason to stay in the Celestial Battlefield any longer. He might even risk losing the dagger, which would be a case of the loss outweighing the gain.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4416 – "Miss, do you really trust him that much? You do realize he's a demonic cultivator, right? You've only just met him by chance, and you don't even know his true identity. What if he decided not to return your spiritual stone? Where would you even go to find him?" the elderly man in the crowd asked Catalina, looking utterly confused.

To everyone's surprise, Catalina simply smiled and confidently replied, "If he dares not return the spiritual stone, there will be no place for him anywhere in the Ethereal Realm. Even if he escapes to the ends of the earth or dives to the depths of the sea, I will find him."

Catalina exuded unparalleled confidence; it wasn't something she faked, but something she was born with.

From this, one could infer that the power and influence behind Catalina were absolutely terrifying.

"Everyone, since the first statue contained a divine weapon, it's reasonable to assume the others hold valuable items as well. Let's open them but remember-no fighting over what we find. The rules remain the same," she said to the crowd.

The crowd nodded in agreement, none daring to challenge her authority, as Rightblind stood watch nearby, his sword gleaming in his hand and his sharp eyes sweeping over the group.

Anyone who made a suspicious move would likely meet the swift and merciless strike of his sword.

Once she was sure everyone was on board, Catalina turned to Rightblind and said, "Rightblind, you-

"Let me take care of it this time." Before Catalina could finish, Jared already stepped forward.

He was eager to test whether his sword intent could break the stone statue in front of him.

Catalina gave a small nod, then waved her hand, signaling Rightblind to step back.

Jared held the Dragonslayer Sword in his hand tightly. He wasn't entirely sure how to summon his sword intent. When he had fought the sand scorpions earlier, he had relied purely on instinct.

But if Jared were to deliberately attempt to demonstrate his sword intent now, it was uncertain whether he would be able to execute it successfully.

Focusing intently on the stone statue, Jared suddenly roared, "Slash!"

He swung his sword in a powerful arc and the Dragonslayer Sword struck the statue with tremendous force.

The statue's head was shattered instantly, but its body remained undamaged.

Just now, Jared had relied solely on his brute force, striking directly at the statue.

He hadn't unleashed his sword intent.

Yet, shattering the statue's head with just brute strength was quite an impressive feat.

"Brat, you can't unleash your sword intent, huh?" Rightblind Elder asked, his tone dripping with mockery as he observed the scene.

Jared didn't say anything but instead swung the Dragonslayer Sword at the statue again.

Clang! Clang! Clang!

Jared struck several times, and although the statue was eventually shattered, none of the blows were executed with sword intent. Each strike was a result of Jared using sheer brute force to smash it open.

If it hadn't been for the fact that the Dragonslayer Sword was a divine weapon, using such a method to smash open the stone statue would likely have damaged the sword in his hand.

As the stone statue shattered, it revealed a chilling battle axe hidden inside, its surface gleaming with an icy, menacing light.

Using the same method, Catalina sold the battle axe, and of course, the spiritual stones were evenly divided among everyone..

However, Jared, holding the Dragonslayer Sword, wasn't feeling particularly upbeat. He couldn't understand why he was suddenly unable to manifest his sword intent.

"Mr. Vermilion, what exactly is a sword intent?" Jared had no choice but to ask the Vermilion Demon Lord, hoping he might understand.

"Don't ask me. I have no clue about such things. I don't need them anyway. Who could possibly suppress my abilities?" Vermilion Demon Lord quickly shook his head.

However, he did speak the truth. If his full strength were intact, unsealed, there would be no need for the concept of sword intent.

Concepts like swordsmanship were probably most prevalent in the mundane world, after all, they were ordinary people. Without the aid of spiritual power, they could only rely on honing their swordsmanship to enhance their strength.

It was likely similar to the cultivation level where the person and the sword become one.

As Jared was immersed in his contemplation of sword intent, the third stone statue was broken open by Rightblind. Subsequently, the item inside was sold off.

Jared hadn't done anything. By the time he realized what was happening, he had already inadvertently accumulated over a hundred thousand spiritual stones.

However, it seemed like Jared wasn't too pleased either, as his recent actions had been somewhat embarrassing.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4417 – "Still pondering over the matter of sword intent?" Catalina asked, having seen through Jared's thoughts.

Jared nodded, "What exactly is sword intent?"

"I really have no idea. I haven't mastered the sword intent," Catalina quickly waved her hand dismissively.

Rightblind chuckled, "Brat, sword intent can only be understood, not explained. I'll show you another strike, but whether you grasp its intricacies is up to you."

As Rightblind spoke, he raised the longsword in his hand, ready to strike.

But before he could make a move, the longsword suddenly began to tremble violently. This caused Rightblind's face to pale instantly.

"Rightblind, what's wrong?" Catalina quickly asked.

"Ms. Lantz, it seems that Leftblind has encountered danger outside," Rightblind replied.

"Danger?" Catalina's brows furrowed slightly. "Has he gotten into trouble again? Go check on him immediately and try to stop him from causing any more problems."

"Ms. Lantz, what about you?" Rightblind asked.

"Don't worry," she reassured him. "He's still here with me, and I have something to ensure our safety. We'll be fine." Catalina pointed at Jared as she spoke.

Rightblind glanced at Jared, then warned, "Brat, you better protect Ms. Lantz well. If anything happens to her, there won't be a place in the entire Ethereal Realm where you can hide."

After finishing his words, Rightblind quickly dashed towards the entrance of the Celestial Battlefield.

Jared, on the other hand, was left speechless, his face a mask of disbelief. Who had he offended? Why was he suddenly being asked to take responsibility?

Upon seeing Jared's reaction, Catalina gave a small smile and reassured him, "Don't worry, he's just trying to intimidate you. Nothing will happen. Even if something did happen to me, it wouldn't be your fault."

"With me here, none of you will be harmed," Jared said, patting his chest and boasting.

Upon hearing his words, everyone eagerly expressed their desire to follow him. After all, they had all witnessed how Jared had shattered the stone statue with his sword.

Even without his spiritual energy, Jared still possessed such formidable physical strength.

If danger arose, he would be able to hold his ground.

The main reason everyone decided to follow along was that, even if they couldn't get any magical items, they'd still walk away with spiritual stones. In other words, there was no downside. These people definitely knew how to make the best of the situation.

Catalina, on the other hand, was open to all comers. She then led the group on their journey.

Outside the Celestial Battlefield, Leftblind was locked in an intense battle with Seth and Ruth, neither side able to gain the upper hand.

Several sword-wielding cultivators were present, with four of them already gravely injured, lying on the ground with their lives uncertain. Yet, despite the odds, none of the sword-wielding cultivators showed any sign of backing down.

Leftblind, growing angrier by the second, struck with his longsword, his attacks relentless like lightning.

However, despite his fury, he was still at a disadvantage due to the combined efforts of Seth and Ruth.

Leftblind's left arm had been injured and was beginning to bleed.

"Damn it!" Leftblind cursed inwardly. "I don't know if Rightblind got my message, but if he doesn't show up soon to help, I'll have to make a run for it. Otherwise, I might actually die at the hands of these two brats." He prayed that Rightblind had received his message.

Despite the fear creeping into his thoughts, Leftblind's face showed no sign of fear. He continued to curse, determined to maintain his defiant attitude.

Even if he felt intimidated inside, he couldn't let it show on the outside.

"Geezer, your mouth sure is tough. Let's see how tough you talk once we've ripped it apart," Ruth snarled, already seething with anger.

They had been fighting for a while, and in the midst of it all, Leftblind had still managed to curse Ruth's ancestors. It was infuriating.

"Brats, you think you can disrespect your elder? You should take a good look at your own behavior first. I cursed your ancestors because your family earned bad karma. Do you really think I curse just anyone?" Leftblind retorted, hovering in mid-air with his sword in hand.

"F*ck you!" Ruth was on the verge of losing control. He charged at Leftblind, his sword raised high, moving with such speed that it seemed to have reached its limit-his rage was undeniable.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4418 – Upon seeing the situation, Seth, too, unsheathed his sword and joined the fray. The two of them headed straight toward Leftblind.

The latter's brow furrowed slightly as he realized that if the fight continued, he was certain to face defeat.

However, turning around and running away now would be embarrassing.

As Leftblind was caught in a dilemma, unsure whether to fight or flee, a figure suddenly appeared out of nowhere.

"Who are you people? How dare you lay a hand on Leftblind?"

Rightblind swung a palm, forcing back both Ruth and Seth before he posed a question.

Upon seeing him coming to assist, the two promptly retreated and cautiously observed him.

The moment Leftblind saw Rightblind approaching, any thoughts of escape he once had vanished instantly. With a haughty lift of his chin, he pointed at Ruth and said, "Hey, kid, weren't you threatening to rip my mouth apart? Well, I'm standing right here! If you've got what it takes, then come on over. Come on, come on..."

The air was thick with provocation as he taunted Ruth.

"Stop trying to stir up trouble," the latter warned. "Ms. Lantz has instructed me specifically to tell you to stay out of trouble."

Upon seeing Leftblind, Rightblind couldn't help but feel exasperated. This fellow was just too good-at stirring up trouble.

"I'm not stirring up anything, Rightblind. These two brats are from the Demon Seal Alliance, and they even hurt Ms. Lantz's guards. Can we really let them off the hook?" explained Leftblind.

"What? They're from the Demon Seal Alliance? Screw them!"

Rightblind suddenly leaped up, seemingly grasping at thin air before a sword appeared in his hand. With this, he launched an attack on Ruth and Seth.

With a sly grin, Leftblind charged straight ahead without hesitation.

Seth and Ruth were utterly baffled. They couldn't comprehend why these two guys harbored such intense hatred toward the Demon Seal Alliance.

Their initial plan was to intimidate the other party using the alliance. But now, they've gone and directly provoked their anger!

Upon seeing the situation, Seth quickly took out the communication device and began to call for reinforcements.

He knew they were definitely no match for him.

The two gradually retreated amidst the battle, no longer desiring to fight.

However, Leftblind and Rightblind continued to hound them.

Their chaotic fight continued.

Back on the Celestial Battlefield, Jared and Catalina lead everyone onward in battle.

After crossing the valley, to everyone's surprise, they found themselves staring at an endless expanse of snow. An immense snowfield had appeared before their eyes.

Upon witnessing this scene, everyone present furrowed their brows.

Despite having just arrived not long ago, they had already experienced several regional landscapes.

"Could these be illusions? Our powers are currently sealed. Even a minor illusion spell could trap us, leaving us unable to break free."

"How could it be possible for so many types of landscapes to emerge from such a tiny relic?"

Within the crowd, the elderly man expressed his confusion.

"This isn't an illusion!" Jared shook his head.

"How do you know that?"

The elder looked at Jared with surprise.

"Because I'm an array master. Even without my spiritual energy, no ordinary arcane array can ever escape my eyes," Jared answered truthfully.

"An array master?"

Everyone was greatly surprised to hear this.

The existence of array masters was extremely rare in the Ethereal Realm, after all.

"Look! There are footprints in the snow. Could it be that someone was here before us?" someone shouted all of a sudden.

The group hurried over, and sure enough, they found a trail of footprints in the snow. However, it was faint and partially covered by accumulated snow, suggesting that it had been there for quite some time.

“The footprints are no longer clear, meaning someone has been here quite some time ago. I’m afraid it’s going to be difficult for us to find the magical items now.”

The old man heaved a sigh, his face awash with disappointment.

If someone had ventured in before, they would have already taken any magical item they had found.

Hearing this, everyone else was also overwhelmed with disappointment.

“That’s not necessarily true. Didn’t we just obtain three divine weapons from the stone statue? Even if someone else came in before us, that doesn’t mean they’d able to find and take all the treasures,” Catalina quickly assured.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4419 – “Ms. Lantz is right,” Jared chimed in with encouragement. “Even if someone did get in, they couldn’t have possibly taken all the magical items. Let’s not lose hope, everyone.”

“Right, we shouldn’t lose heart. We’ve come this far, so we should at least still look around!”

Some people began to echo Jared and Catalina’s sentiments.

Swiftly, everyone’s fighting spirit was reignited. They trudged through the accumulated snow, venturing into the vast, white wilderness.

Deprived of their spiritual energy, everyone struggled to trek through the snowfield, their progress painstakingly slow.

However, Jared wasn’t impacted at all.

The biting cold wind had many people shivering uncontrollably. Even a respected Tribulator was unable to withstand the severe cold. It was unbelievable, but that was the reality in this place.

Having become ordinary people, relying solely on body heat and clothing to fend off the cold wind was indeed a struggle.

Even Judith, a highly accomplished Ultimate Realm cultivator, was now standing with her arms crossed in front of her chest as her body trembled subtly.

“Put this on.”

Jared had taken off his coat and handed it to her.

Even if he were to remove all his clothes, the man's physical strength allowed him to withstand such intense cold.

Judith glanced at him. Not rejecting his offer, she took the coat and put it on.

"What a surprise! I didn't think you'd have a soft spot for women. But I'm a woman too, so why didn't you give me your coat?" Catalina teased as she walked up to Jared.

The latter glanced at her, a small smile playing on his lips. "You're not even cold, but if you are, you can have my pants."

While speaking, he began to take off his trousers.

"Stop it! Why would I wear your pants? And have you no shame, taking them off in front of a lady?"

Catalina shot him a glare before turning around and picking up her pace.

Jared smiled nonchalantly. Of course, he wouldn't actually remove his trousers; he was just teasing her.

Catalina was a formidable woman with a powerful force behind her. However, she herself was like a blank slate, clearly showing that she had little experience in the real world.

After they had traveled a bit further, several grating noises echoed from above.

Jared glanced upward, spotting two large birds circling in the sky. These creatures were cloaked in white feathers, their heads distinctly marked with a crimson hue.

Their sounds were somewhat terrifying, coupled with a shrill tone that made it difficult to endure.

Seeing these two birds, many people started to feel anxious.

If the birds were to attack them, it would spell danger. They were all ordinary people now; who could possibly stand against these two large creatures?

"Don't be alarmed. These are ivory birds. As long as we don't provoke them, they won't attack us on their own accord," Catalina advised. "On the contrary, they're very approachable. All you have to do is offer them some food."

Jared looked at her in confusion. He couldn't comprehend how she could know so much about the Celestial Battlefield.

Reflecting on the footprints he had just seen, it was evident someone had been here before. Could it have been her?

But if she'd already been here once, why would she come again?

Just as he remained perplexed, Catalina took out a spiritual stone. She threw it forcefully, causing the two ivory birds to squawk and scramble for it. Shortly after, one of the birds swallowed the stone in a single gulp.

“These birds actually eat spiritual stones?”

Jared was taken aback.

Ignoring him, Catalina continued to toss spiritual stones into the air.

The two ivory birds circled excitedly above her head, cawing loudly.

Before long, the woman stopped throwing the spirit stones into the air, instead tossing them onto the snowy ground.

The birds fluttered their wings as they descended. Then, they began to peck at the stones on the ground.

Catalina slowly stepped forward, gently stroking the creatures' feathers. Surprisingly, they didn't shy away, showing a remarkable affinity for humans.

Upon seeing the situation, Jared also wished to stroke the ivory birds.

“Don't touch them,” warned Catalina. “You'll need to feed them spiritual stones first, or they'll see you as an attacker.”

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4420 – Jared paused slightly, yet he did not feed the birds any spiritual stones. Instead, he continued to approach them anyway.

Seeing Jared disregarding her advice, Catalina expressed her annoyance, “You sure are stubborn. I told you not to touch them. Don't come crying to me when they attack you.”

The man merely chuckled, continuing to move closer to the birds.

When he was merely a few meters away from the two ivory birds, they became highly alert. Their eyes were fixated on him intently, ready to attack as he drew closer.

Catalina stood by, watching the whole spectacle. She wanted to see how this man would react when the birds attacked him. After all, he had it coming for not listening!

As Jared drew closer and closer to the creatures, the aura of his dragon bloodline began to gradually emanate from him.

Even though all forms of power within him were subdued, his own bloodline was something that couldn't possibly be suppressed.

Upon detecting his bloodline's aura, the two ivory birds instantaneously shifted from being alert to a state of terror, their bodies quivering slightly.

Jared approached one of the birds and began to stroke it. In response, it remained as docile as a lamb, not daring to move an inch.

No matter which bird the man reached out to, neither dared to budge.

Catalina was utterly baffled. She couldn't comprehend how Jared had managed to pull it off.

Upon seeing that he did not feed the birds any spiritual stones but was still allowed to pet them, others were also eager to give it a try.

Yet, as soon as one of the cultivators stepped forward, a bird let out a cry before launching an attack that sent him fleeing in terror.

"Come back," Jared called out, and surprisingly, the attacking creature actually obeyed, halting its assault and turning back.

At this point, everyone else was also dumbfounded, unable to comprehend how these two ivory birds could possibly heed Jared's commands.

Amidst the bewildered crowd, Jared mounted one of the birds. With a gentle call, it instantly soared into the sky.

Perched atop the creature, he could see further and higher than ever before.

Catalina watched in astonishment. A surge of competitiveness welled up within her, prompting her to approach the other bird.

She, too, yearned to mount it and let it carry her up to the sky.

However, despite several attempts, the woman found herself repeatedly getting shrugged off by the creature.

"I've fed you so many spiritual stones! Why do you only let me pet you, but not ride you?" she yelled, visibly upset.

"Let her on," Jared cried out while in mid-air.

Upon hearing his call, the bird on the ground slowly settled down, allowing Catalina to mount on its back.

With that, the two ivory birds carried Jared and Catalina across the sky.

Everyone below was filled with envy as they watched.

If their abilities hadn't been suppressed, they would have been able to fly on their own.

However, within the Celestial Battlefield, everyone's strength was suppressed. Even walking for a prolonged period was exhausting, let alone being robbed of their ability to fly.

Catalina perched atop the bird, sizing up Jared as she questioned, "What's your deal? Why do these ivory birds obey you?"

"I wouldn't know. Maybe they find me more approachable."

He couldn't possibly reveal his dragon bloodline.

"Nonsense." Catalina rolled her eyes at him.

"Then tell me, why do you seem to know everything about the Celestial Battlefield?" Jared asked in return. "You even know the nature of these ivory birds. Have you been here before? Who exactly are you?"

He was simply too curious about Catalina's identity.

"I won't tell you."

With a grin, Catalina then rode on the ivory bird, charging forward.
