

A WARRIOR UNDEFEATABLE /

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4741 – “Jared, tell me honestly-did you do something to my father? He’s acting really strange today. In Twilight Imperial City, my father’s word is absolute. Yet today, he’s following your every command and treating you so well!”

As they stepped out of the main hall, Fraser looked at Jared in confusion.

“I think it’s strange too. Father dotes on me, but he’s never let me sit on the Dragon Throne. Yet today, you actually sat on it!”

Catalina also gazed at Jared with suspicion.

Jared chuckled. “Maybe my irresistible charm won him over?”

“Stop spouting nonsense.” Catalina rolled her eyes at him.

“How would I know? If you want answers, ask your father yourselves. I’d guess it’s just a case of him extending his love to me because of you.”

Of course, Jared couldn’t tell them that their father was now under his command.

“That’s possible. Father does love Catalina the most.” Fraser nodded thoughtfully.

“I was scared to death just now. Judging from what Fraser said, I thought Father was going to cripple you. I don’t want to be with a cripple!” Catalina shivered at the thought of how things had started.

“Relax, I’m always lucky.” Jared grinned.

“Jared, where are you planning to go next? Why don’t you stay at my place with Orion and the others for now?” Fraser asked.

“I’m going home, of course,” Jared replied.

“Home?” Fraser was puzzled.

“Obviously. I’m Catalina’s man now. Her mansion is my home, isn’t it?”

Jared casually wrapped an arm around Catalina’s shoulders.

“You are absolutely not staying at my mansion! It isn’t appropriate for unmarried couples to live under the same roof!” Catalina retorted shyly.

Jared teased with a smirk, “Okay then, I’ll just find another woman to stay with.”

“You dare?” Catalina shot him a fierce glare.

“Catalina is famous for being fierce. Jared, you’re in for it!” Fraser burst out laughing.

“Fraser, what are you saying? Who’s fierce? You need a beating!” Catalina replied.

She then raised her fist and lunged at Fraser.

Fraser swiftly dodged and ran off, laughing.

Just as Fraser disappeared, Infinides emerged from the main hall.

He asked, “Jared, what’s your next move? Will you stay in Twilight Imperial City to cultivate, or are you planning to continue your journey? If you choose to stay, the Tenth Hall wouldn’t dare cause you trouble.”

Jared shook his head. “I can’t stay in Twilight Imperial City for too long-I have too many things to take care of. As for the Tenth Hall, I intend to destroy them. Once they’re gone, the Demon Seal Alliance will collapse on its own. Without the Demon Seal Alliance, Demonic Cultivators in the Ethereal Realm will finally be able to live normal lives. Not all Demonic Cultivators are evil. Many of them never had a choice.”

At that moment, Jared recalled the kind old woman from Rock Village.

If not for her, he would have died long ago.

Hearing Jared’s words, Catalina expressed her admiration, “You’re right. Many Demonic Cultivators are just victims of circumstance. They don’t get to choose their origins. The real villains are the Demon Seal Alliance. They use using the guise of exterminating demons to uphold justice. Yet, they seized numerous Demonic Cultivators to carry out their unspeakable deeds. My master has a compassionate heart. He has saved many Demonic Cultivators from them.”

“Abbot Infinides has rescued many Demonic Cultivators?” Jared was surprised.

“That’s right. I’ve been hiding them away, but lately, Twilight Imperial City’s resources have been running low. We can’t sustain them anymore. If we destroy the Tenth Hall and dismantle the Demon Seal Alliance, these Demonic Cultivators can return to the Ethereal Realm and start anew.”

After Infinides finished speaking, he gestured for Jared to follow. “Come with me.”

Jared, Catalina, and Infinides left the palace and headed toward a towering mountain.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4742 – Jared had no idea where Infinides was leading him, so he could only follow along.

When they arrived at the foot of a towering mountain, Infinides casually waved his hand, and in an instant, a portal of light appeared before them.

The moment Jared stepped through the portal, he was completely stunned. Right before his eyes, nestled within the mountain, was an actual city!

The city was home to Demonic Cultivators-each one of them saved by Infinides.

As soon as Infinides arrived, countless Demonic Cultivators rushed forward to greet him. To them, he was their savior.

“Abbot Infinides, did... you really save all these demonic cultivators?” Jared asked in astonishment.

“Indeed.” Infinides nodded. “All of them were fugitives, and I gave them sanctuary.”

Jared felt a surge of emotion, his admiration for Infinides growing even deeper.

“Mr. Chance!” a sudden voice called out to Jared.

Startled, Jared turned his head. When he saw the person who had called him, he was instantly taken aback, his eyes filled with disbelief. “Mr. Soultan? What are you doing here?” Jared asked, bewildered.

The one calling out to him was none other than Hanes, the overlord of Soulless Hall-someone who had betrayed the Demon Seal Alliance.

Hanes had been following Jared for a while. Jared had arranged for them to stay in Blood Spirit Valley, along with Igor, Montane Daemon, and the others.

After all, in Montane Daemon’s domain, the influence of the Demon Seal Alliance was weakest, and the area was full of Demonic Cultivators. It was the perfect place for Soulless Hall to stay hidden from the Demon Seal Alliance’s pursuit.

But if Hanes was here now, did that mean Blood Spirit Valley had also come under attack from the Demon-Seal Alliance?

Everyone in Blood Spirit Valley was one of Jared’s trusted allies. If the Demon Seal Alliance dared to lay a hand on them, Jared wouldn’t hesitate to wipe the entire alliance off the map.

“Mr. Chance,” Hanes said, “I was also hunted down by members of the Demon Seal Alliance. Fortunately, Abbot Infinides saved me, and that’s how I ended up here.”

Jared’s expression turned grave. “What about Blood Spirit Valley, Mr. Lothian, and Mr. Daemon?” he asked urgently.

“Don’t worry, Mr. Chance,” Hanes reassured him. “I was just running an errand when the Demon Seal Alliance found me. They started chasing me, but Abbot Infinides saved me and brought me here. As for Blood Spirit Valley, it should still be safe. The Demon Seal Alliance doesn't have enough power to reach Montane Daemon yet."

Jared let out a sigh of relief. "Good. In a few days, I'll take you back to Blood Spirit Valley myself."

"Mr. Chance, this place is actually quite nice. I don't want to go back. Even though the Demon Seal Alliance can't reach Montane Daemon for now, it's only a matter of time before they do. I feel safer here," Hanes admitted.

Jared gave him a reassuring smile. "Don't worry. In a few days, the Demon Seal Alliance will be gone. You won't have to live in hiding anymore."

Hanes looked at him in shock. "The Demon Seal Alliance... has been destroyed?"

"Not yet," Jared replied, "but it's about to be. I'm going to wipe them out in the next couple of days."

Hanes stared at him, clearly unconvinced. "Mr. Chance," he said cautiously, "your power has grown rapidly, and you've reached Ultimate Realm Level Two... but destroying the entire Demon Seal Alliance won't be easy.

He continued, "Even if we set aside Talcott, the leader of the Demon Seal Alliance, you have to consider the forces backing them. When I was held captive by them, I overheard whispers about the terrifying power supporting them from the shadows."

Hanes had no idea that the real power behind the Demon Seal Alliance was the Tenth Hall. Given his status, it was likely he didn't even know what the Tenth Hall was.

Jared gave him a confident look. "I know exactly who's behind them," he assured him. "And when the time comes, I'll wipe them out too." He patted Hanes on the shoulder with a reassuring smile.

Hanes looked at Jared, then at Infinides, as if realizing something. "If Abbot Infinides were to help, then... maybe there's actually a chance to eliminate the Demon Seal Alliance," he murmured.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4743 – Jared arriving with Infinides meant there was some connection between them. Hanes had already seen Infinides' abilities firsthand. If the latter lent his strength, their chances of victory would skyrocket.

"Haha! If Jared wanted to destroy the Demon Seal Alliance, he wouldn't need my help," Infinides laughed heartily. "Even I tread carefully around him these days!"

Hearing that, Hanes was completely stunned, his mouth hanging open in disbelief.

“Stay here and rest for a few days,” Jared advised. “Once the Demon Seal Alliance is gone, everyone here will be free to return to the Ethereal Realm.”

“All right!” Hanes nodded firmly.

Infinides then suggested Jared and Catalina explore the city while he stepped aside, deciding not to be a third wheel.

Despite being filled with Demonic Cultivators, the city was well-organized. There was no sign of chaos or disorder. As Jared wandered through the streets, a familiar figure suddenly caught his eye.

“That’s...” He was momentarily stunned, then quickly took off after the disappearing silhouette.

“Jared, where are you going?” Catalina called after him, quickly following.

Jared caught up with the figure and blocked their path. The moment he saw their face, his eyes lit up with excitement. “M-Ms. Ira?”

The elderly woman before him was slightly hunched, but there was no mistaking her identity.

“Jared?” Ira’s eyes widened in surprise.

“Ms. Ira, I can’t believe you’re still alive!” Jared exclaimed. “If Emily knew you were still here, she would be overjoyed!” Overcome with emotion, he pulled her into a tight embrace.

Ira was someone Jared had met in Rock Village during his first visit to the Ethereal Realm. The girl who once saved Jared’s life had been raised by this very woman.

Even though his time in Rock Village had been brief, Jared had never forgotten it. He owed his life to that village. He could still vividly remember the humble villagers-Emily, Ali, and Percy, among others.

“Jared, how did you end up here?” Ira asked excitedly. “How is everything in Rock Village? And how is Emily?”

“I...” Jared fell silent. After leaving Rock Village, he had never gone back. He had no idea what had become of it.

Seeing his hesitation, Ira sighed. "With Mr. Antonio still there, things should be fine," she said. "But I worry about Emily... that poor child. Without me around, I don't know how she's been doing."

Her eyes were filled with longing-she had clearly missed Emily all this time.

"Ms. Ira, if you miss Emily so much, I'll take you to her right now!" Jared declared. "From now on, you can live peacefully in Rock Village with her."

Ira shook her head. "It's not that simple. My identity as a Demonic Cultivator has been exposed. If I go back, I'll bring disaster to the village. The Demon Seal Alliance... they kill without mercy."

"Ms. Ira, don't worry," Jared promised. "As long as I'm here, the Demon Seal Alliance won't dare make a move. Soon, Demonic Cultivator, the human race, and the beast race will all coexist in peace."

Ira sighed. "It's a nice thought, but it's unrealistic. People have hated Demonic Cultivators for thousands of years. That kind of resentment doesn't disappear overnight. And the Demon Seal Alliance won't allow it. How can you, alone, stand against such an enormous force?"

"Ms. Ira, trust me. I'll make it happen!" Jared said firmly, gripping her hand. He then turned to Catalina. "Get me out of here now," he ordered. "Tell Abbot Infinides-I need to return to the Ethereal Realm immediately!"

Catalina nodded, sensing Jared's urgency. Though she was curious, she didn't ask any questions.

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4744 – Catalina escorted Jared and Ira out of Twilight Imperial City. Jared guided the elderly woman, the two of them seemingly floating mid-air as they made their way toward Rock Village.

As he looked out over the endless mountain ranges of the northern region, Jared was filled with nostalgia. He hadn't been back to this part of the world in a long time-a place filled with so many of his memories.

Ira kept her eyes closed, feeling the wind rushing past her face. She could tell Jared was no longer the same young man who had once stayed in Rock Village. He had changed. He had grown.

"Mr. Chance, why'd you leave without a word? Are you abandoning us?"

A voice suddenly called out, and in the next moment, Orion and the others appeared, flying through the open sky.

As soon as they heard that Jared had left Twilight Imperial City, they rushed after him. He was their golden goose—they couldn't afford to let him slip away.

"I was just taking care of a small matter. I didn't need you guys tagging along," Jared said when he saw them catching up, a little exasperated.

He was only visiting Rock Village. Even if there was trouble, he could deal with it with a flick of his wrist. After all, a place like Rock Village wasn't exactly crawling with powerful cultivators.

But now, with Orion and his men—Ultimate Realm Level Nine cultivators—following him, they would seem like gods descending upon the mortal world in the eyes of the villagers.

"Mr. Chance, even if it's just a minor issue, we can't let you handle it alone. Now that we're here, if you need anything, just say the word!" Orion declared, his loyalty unwavering.

Of course, he had to stay on Jared's good side. Someone who could casually toss around ten thousand celestial crystals like it was pocket change was worth holding onto.

"Fine, you can come along," Jared sighed, "but be careful. Keep your aura in check. Don't scare anyone." The last thing he needed was for these Ultimate Realm Level Nine cultivators to unintentionally terrify the villagers just by standing there. Their sheer aura would be overwhelming for ordinary folk.

"Understood, Mr. Chance. We'll do exactly as you say," Orion assured him, thumping his chest in confidence.

With that, the group headed toward Rock Village.

Over at the village, Percy sat in front of a small cauldron, fanning the flames. Inside, a mixture of medicinal herbs simmered as he read over a piece of paper.

"Sageleaf, phoenix feather flower..." he muttered under his breath, carefully going over the list of ingredients.

"Percy, how many days have you been at this?"

Emily walked over, setting down a bundle of firewood. "You haven't made a single pill yet, but you've already burned through dozens of stacks of wood."

"Jared told me before he left that I could become a great alchemist. So I have to keep practicing," Percy said seriously. "When Jared comes back, I want to show him what I can do."

Emily paused for a moment before asking quietly, "Do you think he will ever come back?"

Just then, a loud voice echoed through the village. “Mr. Antonio is back! Mr. Antonio is back!”

At the entrance, a group of people rushed forward as the elderly village chief returned with the young hunters. Each of them carried game slung over their shoulders, a hard-earned bounty from the wilderness.

Ali walked at the front, a massive wolf-easily over a hundred pounds-draped across his back.

“Ali, how come the game is so small this time?” Emily asked, puzzled.

Ali let out a frustrated sigh. “The Demon Seal Alliance has locked down the mountains. They declared that no one else is allowed to hunt up there. We had to stay at the foot of the mountain, where there’s barely anything worth catching.

Emily frowned. “Since when did the Demon Seal Alliance get so bold? They’ve never claimed the forests before.”

“No idea,” Ali muttered. “Why would they even care about a remote place like this? Maybe they’re running out of resources. The town is swarming with them now. If we go there to sell our game, we have to pay a protection fee. It’s ridiculous.”

Emily clenched her fists. “That’s so unfair. Just because they’re short on resources doesn’t mean they can steal from us! Life’s already hard enough, and now they’re making it worse. Those big bullies! I hope someone deals with them soon.”

A Man Like None Other Chapter 4745 – Antonio clapped his hands together. “All right, enough talk. Let’s clean the game and take it to town before dark.”

Then, turning to the gathered villagers, he added, “From now on, don’t go to town unless absolutely necessary, and don’t leave the village without a good reason. I don’t know what’s gotten into the Demon Seal Alliance lately, but they’ve been looting and pillaging without restraint.”

His gaze then shifted to Percy. “Percy, how’s the pill coming along?”

Percy hesitated. “I... I haven’t had any success yet.”

For days now, he had been trying to refine medicine, using herbs that the village chief and the other hunters had gathered. They never let him go into the mountains himself. But after all this time, he still hadn’t managed to produce anything, and he felt embarrassed.

Antonio chuckled and patted Percy’s shoulder.

“No need to rush. Alchemy isn’t easy. But once you succeed, our whole village will benefit.”

Percy’s eyes burned with determination. “I won’t let you down, Mr. Antonio!”

“Suddenly, the sky trembled as a brilliant white light flickered through the void.

Everyone turned their eyes upward in shock. Figures slowly materialized from the dazzling light.”

“That’s Jared! Jared’s back!” Percy was the first to recognize him, his voice ringing out in excitement.

“Grandma?” Emily’s whole body trembled as she saw the elderly woman beside Jared.

The villagers could hardly believe their eyes. Only someone truly powerful could move through the skies like that.

As Jared and the others descended into Rock Village, Ira suddenly pulled her hand free from his grasp and ran toward Emily. “Emily! My Emily!”

“Grandma!” Emily ran toward her, throwing her arms around the elderly woman as tears spilled down her face.

“Jared, we were just talking about you, and now you’re really here!” Percy ran up, hugging Jared tightly.

Jared laughed and ruffled Percy’s hair. “You’ve gotten taller, Percy.”

“Jared, y-you’re back,” Antonio said, stepping forward and gripping Jared’s hands.

Jared smiled warmly. “Yes, Mr. Antonio. I’ve come back to see all of you.”

The villagers crowded around, welcoming him with beaming smiles. Even though Jared hadn’t spent much time in Rock Village, they had long since considered him one of their own.

“Grandma, I thought you were dead. H-How are you here?” After the tears had settled, Emily stared at Ira in disbelief.

“Oh, it’s a long story…” Ira gently explained everything to Emily.

“All right, everyone, let’s not overwhelm them,” Antonio finally said. “Jared and the others have traveled a long way. Let’s give them some time to rest.” He led them to a small courtyard. Though the place was simple and worn, it was kept spotlessly clean.

Percy returned not long after, carrying a handful of spiritual plants. “Jared, these are from Mr. Antonio. You must be tired from traveling, so you should eat something.”

Jared looked at the herbs and smiled. He knew these were the best Rock Village had to offer. “Percy, tell the chief we brought our own supplies. He doesn’t need to worry about us,” Jared said, giving the boy a reassuring pat.

Percy nodded and ran off.

Orion, meanwhile, examined the spiritual plants in disbelief. “D*mn... after all these years, I had no idea there were places this poor in the Ethereal Realm. What is this? Even a dog wouldn’t eat these...”

The powerful Ultimate Realm Level Nine cultivators had never seen such a humble lifestyle before. Their understanding of the world had been completely turned upside down.