A Man Like None Other [On-Going]

After all, every Teleportation Array had a unique activation method. Although Jared was knowledgeable in array crafts, it didn't necessarily mean could activate other people's Teleportation Arrays.

"Don't underestimate Jared. He is a man of many talents," Eason said to Madman.

"Quickly step into the arcane array. I'm about to activate the Teleportation Array. To me, this thing is child's play..." Jared wasn't bragging.

The group stepped into the Teleportation Array.

As Jared traced his fingers through the air, the arcane array was truly activated. Accompanied by a flash of white light, everyone's figures vanished instantly.

Soon after, as Jared and the others looked around, they realized they had arrived at a distinctly different courtyard.

Within that courtyard, the walls were entirely constructed from massive red stones, reaching a height of a hundred meters. The surrounding silence was as profound as death, and no soul was in sight.

Before Jared and his companions could even react, the towering red walls around them surprisingly began to shift slowly.

Following that, soldiers surprisingly began to emerge from behind the high walls.

Thorley also approached with an expression of icy arrogance etched across his face.

"How audacious! How dare you use the Teleportation Array to trespass into the hall. Aren't you afraid of death?"

After Thorley finished speaking, suddenly furrowed his brows.

"The human race?" His gaze shifted toward Aisha.

A captain of the soldiers stepped forward, reporting to Thorley, "Prince Thorley, these individuals appear to be fugitives who inadvertently triggered the Teleportation Array, which is how they ended up here."

Thorley looked on with a stern expression before scoffing coldly. "What a bunch of good-for-nothings! What are you guys doing, allowing fugitives to show up here?!"

Thorley added in a subdued tone, "Arrest them and send them straight back..."

Boom!

The soldiers surrounding them sprang into action immediately. The aura they exuded was so overpowering that it completely subdued Jared and his companions.

There were many soldiers, each one an elite. Their strength was noticeably superior to that of the soldiers from other cities. From the aura radiating from these soldiers, it was evident.

"F*ck! It seems like I have no choice but to go all out..." Madman's energy surged within him, and was readying himself to unleash havoc.

Eason and Aisha had also prepared themselves for battle. Bastian, on the other hand, was visibly anxious, hiding behind Jared. After all, was just a kid.

"You guys don't need to worry..."

After Jared finished speaking, raised his hand, and ripples surged throughout the entire dimension.

Swiftly, all the soldiers within that dimension ceased their actions. It was as if time itself had come to a halt at that very moment.

Thorley's eyes widened in disbelief when saw the situation.

Over a hundred soldiers were frozen mid-air in peculiar positions. As turned to flee, found himself trailing the ripple that swept past. His body had unexpectedly become motionless, as if the entire dimension around had come to a standstill.

Even though exhausted all his strength, unleashing the greatest Power of Immortals within him, still couldn't move an inch.

At that moment, Jared's face was ashen, with a faint glow radiating from the palm of his hand.

"A time spell?" Madman's eyes widened in surprise, "Boss, do you actually know how to use a time spell? That's incredibly impressive!"

However, Jared didn't pay any attention. Instead, said, "Get ready! We're going back!"

Jared was using a time spell, which required a significant expenditure of his time nascence. As such, couldn't sustain it for an extended period.

At that moment, Jared wanted to lead them back to where they came from. Breaking out from that place was going to be incredibly difficult. After all, in that small town, there were undoubtedly many people from Celestial Palace's Eighth Hall.

Accompanied by a flash of white light, Jared and his companions vanished in an instant, only to reappear as they were teleported back through the Teleportation Array.

The moment Jared vanished, the entire dimension abruptly shook, causing everyone to tumble to the ground.

Thorley's figure also wavered for a moment, and nearly tumbled to the ground.

"That guy actually knows how to use a time spell. We must catch him! Go after him!"

After finishing his words, Thorley led his people into the Teleportation Array. Given the limited size of the Teleportation Array, it could only teleport a few people at a time. Thus, it was unrealistic to consider teleporting all the soldiers at once.

Thorley, accompanied by only a few soldiers, pursued Jared and his group through the Teleportation Array.
