Chapter 2514

Poseidon slowly rose from the sea, his wounds fully healed.

A glint of madness flashed in his eyes. The devastating blow he had just endured didn't make him retreat; instead, it fueled his fighting spirit even more.

"Logan, you surprised me," he sneered, gripping his halberd tightly. "But you still won't escape death today!"

With a wild flourish, Poseidon swung his halberd, unleashing a surge of chaotic energy.

The already turbulent sea grew even more violent. Water churned wildly, spiraling around him and forming a massive whirlpool. The vortex expanded rapidly, its diameter reaching hundreds of meters, pulling everything toward its core with terrifying force.

Even the distant Cardinal Dragon Marshal, Alec, and others watching the battle felt its pull, struggling to resist.

Logan narrowed his eyes, his face tense.

The sheer force of the vortex was overwhelming—it felt as if it could swallow the entire world.

But fear had no place in him.

With a slight tap of his foot, Logan shot forward like a streak of black lightning.

As he neared the vortex's edge, he swung his Celestial Blade with immense force. A sharp burst of black energy slashed through the spiraling waters, splitting them apart and momentarily weakening the vortex's pull.

Poseidon reacted instantly. He thrust his halberd forward, releasing a beam of blue energy that shot toward Logan like a bolt of lightning.

Logan twisted his body mid-air, narrowly dodging the attack. The energy beam streaked past him, carving a deep trench into the sea behind him.

Poseidon roared and intensified the vortex's speed. Massive water blades formed from the whirling currents, slicing through the air with deadly precision. Each one gleamed with a sharp, cold light, cutting through the air with an eerie hum.

Trapped in the raging whirlpool and surrounded by countless water blades, Logan held his Celestial Blade before him, swinging it rapidly. Each strike shattered multiple water blades, but they kept coming—relentless, endless.

His breath grew heavier. He couldn't keep this up.

“We can't go on like this...”

Taking a deep breath, Logan raised the Celestial Blade high. The mystical energy within him surged, pouring into the blade.

“Whoosh!”

With a thunderous shout, a brilliant black light exploded from the Celestial Blade, engulfing the battlefield in darkness.

From the light emerged a towering black sword shadow, dozens of meters tall, radiating an overwhelming, destructive aura.

With a single swing, Logan sent the colossal sword slashing toward Poseidon.

The moment it cut through the air, the sea beneath it instantly evaporated, creating a vacuum in its wake.

Poseidon's expression changed. He gritted his teeth and raised his halberd, bracing for impact.

“Boom!”

The clash was cataclysmic. The collision unleashed a shockwave so powerful that the ocean itself trembled.

Massive waves, hundreds of meters high, erupted outward like mountains collapsing into the sea.

The vortex shattered instantly under the sheer force of the impact.

Cardinal Dragon Marshal, Alec, and the others were thrown off their feet, struggling to withstand the aftershock.

Both Logan and Poseidon staggered from the explosion, battered and bloodied.

Blood trickled from the corner of Logan's mouth. His clothes were torn, his body covered in wounds.

Poseidon fared no better. The blue scales covering his body were cracked, his arm shattered, blue blood streaming from the wound.

Logan's eyes sharpened. He wouldn't let Poseidon recover.

Without hesitation, he attacked again.

His strikes were faster, stronger—each one carrying the force of destruction itself.

Poseidon gritted his teeth, desperately absorbing the ocean's energy while using his halberd to block. But with only one functional arm, his defenses weakened.

Each time he parried, Logan's Celestial Blade forced him a step back.

Logan pressed forward. Poseidon kept retreating.

The sea churned violently around them.

Just as Poseidon's wounded arm was on the verge of regenerating, Logan saw his chance.

With a roar, he unleashed his ultimate move.

"Destroy the world!"

A wave of black light erupted from the Celestial Blade, carrying the power of total annihilation.

This time, seven colossal black sword shadows materialized, each radiating devastating energy.

They slashed toward Poseidon in a fanned formation, each blade powerful enough to level a city.

Poseidon's face darkened. He couldn't hold back anymore.

“The Fury of the Ocean!”

With a furious bellow, he activated his strongest defense.

The sea surged toward him, forming a massive blue water shield, tens of meters thick, pulsating with energy.

“Boom!!”

The sword shadows and the water shield collided in an earth-shattering explosion.

For a brief moment, time itself seemed to freeze.

The sheer force of the impact turned everything around them into nothingness.

The sea within a hundred-meter radius evaporated instantly, revealing the jagged seabed below.

The evaporated water shot into the sky, forming a colossal steam cloud that rose high enough to block out the moon.
