

An Understated Dominance by Marina Vittori Chapter 732 -

Chapter 732

“His toe moved!”

“Oh, my God! It worked! That’s amazing!”

“No wonder he’s Dr. Darby’s best student!”

Everyone was shocked to see the old man’s toe twitch. After all, doctors must be highly skilled and talented if they wanted to pass the third test.

Yet all the other doctors had failed to treat the old man. On the other hand, Preston managed to make the old man’s toes twitch when his legs had been paralyzed for the last eight years.

It was amazing!

“How do you feel, sir?” Preston removed his silver needle and smiled.

“I-I think I’m starting to feel my legs again!” The old man was overjoyed. Since he lost all sensations in his legs, nothing he did could make them react anymore.

Now, his legs felt numb, and he could even control some of his toes. Although the results were just small changes, it was still a miracle for someone who had been in such a state for the last eight years.

“That’s good to hear. You’ve been paralyzed for too long, so you’ll take a while to recover. But don’t worry, I just have to treat you for another month, and you’ll be fine by then!” Preston promised. confidently.

“Thank you so much! You’re incredible!” The old man was grateful.

“No problem. It was an easy task,” Preston replied proudly.

As Bruce's disciple, treatments like this were not new for him. And to treat his patient, Preston was willing to use something as valuable as Tigarius. So, it was impossible for the old man not to recover.

"You managed to help the patient regain sensation in his legs in such a short time. That's impressive. You have passed the test!" The invigilator nodded in approval.

"Congratulations, Preston" Miranda smiled. The fact that Preston passed all three tests while others failed showed how good Preston's skills were "You're next, Miranda Let's show that person how powerful Asclepia disciples truly are!" Preston shot Dustin an arrogant smirk.

So what if Dustin was good at alchemy? He would merely be a pharmacist.

Preston was skilled in everything, including alchemy, medicine, and even witchcraft The gap between the two of them was as clear as day

"Don't worry, Preston I'll teach him that there's always someone better than him" Miranda glanced at Dustin hatefully before approaching the old man to start the treatment.

If she wanted to pass the test, she had to continue what Preston had begun And although the patient's condition was hard to treat, she felt more confident after seeing Preston's results

"I'll begin now."

Miranda took a deep breath and pulled out her silver needle. She lifted the old man's foot and inserted it into a pressure point under his foot.

The old man instantly hissed in pain and jerked back. Without hesitation, Miranda immediately inserted another four needles into several pressure points in his body. This helped to improve his blood circulation and clear any blood clots.

Since Preston had started the treatment with the aid of Tigarius, all she had to do was clear any blockage in his veins to let the old man recover faster.

After dozens of needles, the old man's legs began to tremble. He could even control the toes on one of his legs now.

"My legs don't hurt as much now. That's incredible!"