Chapter 1021 Meeting Ellen

The three children's eyes filled with excitement, but none of them spoke. They turned their gazes to North instead.

North was a little troubled by Eugene's suggestion as well. "But we're already used to this place."

Eugene tempted him, persuading, "But you said so yourself, this place is too small for all of you to be together. If we move into a villa, we can all be together."

North refuted, "Mommy definitely won't agree."

Eugene then replied, "That's why I'm counting on you."

After exchanging glances, the children eventually nodded. "Okay, we'll talk about it with Mommy."

Eugene had just agreed when the phone in his hands rang. Upon seeing that it was a call from Ellen, he slid a finger across the screen and answered the call. "Hello, Mom?"

"Are you at home? I saw your car earlier."

"Yeah, I'm at Olivia's place. Where did you see it?"

"I'm with Jewel. Wait there, I'll go over to look for you."

After saying that, Ellen immediately hung up and turned to look at Jewel. "They really are at home after all. I'm going to look for them."

Jewel hummed in reply. The two then put on their shoes and walked up the stairs instead of taking the elevator.

She had just gone up half a floor when she saw a man smoking by the stairway, constantly looking around as if he were waiting for someone. The floor was covered in ashes, and upon seeing their arrival, he immediately tossed the cigarette in his hand and turned around to head downstairs.

The sight filled Jewel with suspicion as Olivia and her family were the only ones who lived on the 59th floor. She grabbed his hand and demanded, "Whom are you looking for? What are you doing here?"

The man broke free from her grip. "None of your business." Saying that, he hurriedly went down the stairs.

Jewel looked at Ellen, then at the man who had fled. However, she chose not to go after him in regard to Ellen's safety.

"What's wrong, Jewel? Do you know him?"

"I don't. That's why it feels strange."

Ellen turned around to take a look at him as well. "Could they be thieves coming to scout the area?"

Jewel nodded. "It's possible."

Hearing that, Ellen immediately broke into a cold sweat. "You have to let Eugene know later and make sure that he keeps an eye out for them."

"All right," Jewel agreed.

Then, the two arrived on the 59th floor and pressed the doorbell.

Eugene walked over and opened the door from them. "You're fast."

"How can I not be fast when I was just at Jewel's house? I saw your car when I came in. Didn't you go to work today?" Ellen questioned as she walked into the house.

Upon seeing the four children standing in the living room, Ellen nearly thought that she was hallucinating. The children looked as if they had been made from the same mold, each of them just as adorable and handsome as the other.

Her expression immediately softened, and her lips subconsciously curled upward into a smile. "My goodness, whose kids are they?"

Jewel knew the answer to this question, but she only glanced at Eugene and smiled without saying a word. Eugene didn't reply either, shutting the door and walking back instead.

At that moment, North began to introduce her to the others. "This is Grandma."

The three children bowed in greeting as if they were well-trained soldiers. "Hello, Grandma."

Ellen's heart nearly burst with joy at their voices, and she hurriedly rushed over to help them up. "Oh, hello, hello. Whose children are you? Why are you just as handsome as my grandson?"

The three children stared at each other, then turned to Eugene without saying a word.

Eugene walked over and helped her onto the couch. "Take a seat first."

Confused by his actions, Ellen looked at him dubiously. "What are you doing?"

Eugene placed her hand on the back of the couch. "Hold on."

Ellen sent him a playfully chiding glare. "You brat, what are you trying to say?"

Then, Eugene turned to Jewel and said, "Jewel, I think you should hold onto her, just in case."

Jewel let out a laugh and took a seat next to Ellen before holding onto her arm.

Ellen felt increasingly confused by his behavior, and her feeling of anxiety deepened when she saw the four children opposite her who seemed to be waiting for a show. "Just spit it out!"

On the contrary, Eugene was elated as he knew that Ellen would be just as overjoyed as him after finding out the news. Hence, he pointed to the children and announced solemnly, "This is Carter, Blake, and Terry. They're my... sons."

Chapter 1022 Explain Yourself

As soon as Eugene finished speaking, Ellen jolted in surprise at his words and burst into a vicious fit of coughs, causing Eugene to hurriedly hand her a glass of water as he said through his laughter, "I told you to prepare yourself."

North patted her back with a smile as well. "Do you feel better now, Grandma?"

It took Ellen a long time to stop coughing, and she lifted her eyes to look at Eugene, asking in disbelief, "What are you babbling about? All of them are your children?"

Eugene nodded. "They're all my sons."

Ellen pressed, "Biological?"

"Biological."

Ellen then turned to the three children before her and felt a chill run down her spine. Where did all these children come from? Olivia wouldn't hate him for this, would she?

Her heart in her throat, she asked carefully, "Then... does Olivia know?"

Eugene nodded. "She does."

"Are they all your illegitimate children? What about their mother?"

"They don't have one."

Ellen was hit with another bout of surprise. "They don't have one? Or are you just unable to find her?"

After giving it some thought, Eugene replied, "I can't find her."

This set Ellen off, and she instantly rose to her feet and sent a slap across his head. "How many women have you slept with? Don't you know yourself?"

Feeling hurt by the accusation, Eugene grabbed his head and defended himself. "Mom, Olivia is the only woman I've ever had."

However, Ellen wasn't convinced. "Then where did these children come from?"

Eugene stared at her and let out an angry laugh. "You're my mother. Why aren't you on my side?"

Ellen glared at him furiously. "Look at what you've done. Do you think I'd still be on your side? Who would believe an excuse like that? Why don't you just tell me the truth? Where's Olivia? Is she angry with you?"

After that, she looked around her surroundings, trying to find Olivia.

At the sight, Jewel couldn't hold back her laughter any longer. She pulled Ellen to her side and said, "Godmother, take a seat first and listen to Eugene's explanation."

"I'll see just how he's gonna explain himself." Ellen glared at Eugene viciously. "If you don't give me a good explanation, I'm definitely going to side with Olivia."

Eugene was speechless. He felt that ever since he got together with Olivia, his status had been dropping rapidly. It was one thing if these bratty children were not on his side, but how could his own mother pick favorites like this? He thought he was nothing more than a useless live-in son-in-law that was not welcomed by his family.

"Do you still remember the master who treated your leg?"

Ellen looked at him dubiously. "What about it?"

"Didn't he tell me to fulfill one of his wishes back then?"

Looking at her, Eugene explained everything. Of course, he did not tell her that the children were birth through advanced technology and said instead, "They were adopted by him right after they were born, and they only found out by coincidence that I was their father from the master and came to look for me because of that."

Hearing that, Ellen said in realization, "So that's what's going on."

At that, she opened her arms and looked at the Rogers siblings. "Come over here and let me have a good look at you."

The three children exchanged looks, and it was Carter who walked over and hugged Ellen first. "Grandma."

Soon after, Blake and Terry followed, both of them calling out to her in their adorable voices.

Ellen was practically grinning from ear to ear. "Oh, I can't believe I have four grandsons all of a sudden. I'm so happy."

After giving it some thought, Carter said, "Although we haven't decided if we want Eugene to be our daddy, we like you, Grandma. We'll accept you as our grandmother."

Ellen looked at Eugene dubiously, then back at the children. "Why don't you want him to be your daddy?"

At her question, the Rogers siblings glanced at Eugene as if saying—'Don't ask us. It's not our fault.'

Chapter 1023 Listen to Doctor Maxwell's Advice

Eugene coughed slightly before he elaborated, "When they came to look for me, it was during the time Olivia and I weren't getting along, so I suspected that someone was trying to start something. When they came to my company saying that they were my children, I was worried it might be a trap again, and when I couldn't get any answers after interrogating them, I chased them out. That's how they held the grudge to this day."

Blake huffed pridefully. "You even said that you were going to throw us into the sea to feed the sharks."

Carter pressed on his pinky finger that had been wounded back then and nodded along, as if he could still feel the pain from that day.

At his words, Ellen finally understood the full situation. She went over and took the children into her arms, explaining on Eugene's behalf, "Please don't blame him. He just mistook you for bad guys. See, isn't he good to you now that he knows you're his children?"

The Rogers siblings exchanged a glance before nodding.

"He's a good daddy. If you don't believe me, you can ask North."

Upon saying that, Ellen pulled North to her side and asked lovingly, "Am I right, North?"

Shooting a glance at Eugene, North nodded unwillingly.

Feeling a sudden burst of guilt, Eugene rubbed his nose before reminding Ellen, "Mom, don't tell anyone about this for now as it would be dangerous. After some time passes, I'm planning to take them back to the villa. That way, I won't have to worry as much either."

"By the way, where are you staying now?"

"Grandma, we're living in Cardinal Tower."

"Who's staying with you?"

At first, Ellen had only planned to visit Jewel, but she was so elated by the appearance of her three new grandchildren that she couldn't be bothered by anything else. One moment, she was asking how their living quarters were, and the next, she wanted to know if they were eating well.

Eugene said helplessly, "Mom, Jewel, you two can stay here and help Olivia and me take care of the kids. I have to go and take a look at the company."

Ellen's attitude made a complete 180, and she couldn't be any more courteous. "Okay, okay, go and do what you have to do."

In the end, the three children didn't return to school, and Ellen stayed for the entire day as well.

When Eugene went to pick Olivia up, he told her all about his meeting with Azalea and how the children had defended Olivia, proud of himself for coming clean.

After listening to him, Olivia couldn't help but laugh, particularly after seeing the look on his face that resembled an abandoned puppy.

Caressing his face, she said with a look of sympathy, "You have to know your place. See? If you dare to think otherwise, my sons will deal with you."

Eugene was speechless. "When did I do that?"

"Then, tell me, did our sons accuse you?"

"That's true. I've only ever thought of you differently." At that, Eugene tilted his head to look at her with a flirtatious glance. "Do you want to know how different they are?"

Olivia sent him a glare and pretended to look outside, her lips pursed tightly. She didn't want to know what kind of dirty thoughts he was having.

Upon seeing that, Eugene smiled sweetly and reached out to take her hand in his palm, asking, "Doctor Maxwell, do you think that this is normal?"

"What?"

Eugene looked at her and said, "I can't stop myself from wanting to get closer and closer to you, to the point where I want to fuse your body with mine."

Olivia's lips were pressed into a thin line. "It's not normal. You have to control yourself."

"How should I control myself?"

"Stop coming to the 59th floor."

Hearing that, Eugene viciously pinched her tender skin under his palm. "You heartless woman."

"What are you doing? I'm giving you a suggestion as Doctor Maxwell," Olivia chided him flirtatiously.

"Then, what does my girlfriend suggest?"

"Your girlfriend suggests that you control yourself. You can have those thoughts, but you can't scare your girlfriend."

Feeling both angry and amused by her words, Eugene asked, "So, you plan to torment me?"

Olivia refuted, "In order to prevent yourself from being tormented, your girlfriend suggests that you listen to Doctor Maxwell's advice."

Chapter 1024 I Want You

Looking at Olivia's foxy smile, Eugene was filled with the urge to give her a proper kiss and hold her in his arms. Naturally, he did as he wanted.

Pulling the car to a stop by the side of the road, he extended his long arms and pulled her into his embrace. Then, his large palm held the back of her head as his warm lips passionately kissed hers with a trace of urgency and an intensity that was practically vicious. His arms constantly tightened around her, as if he truly wished to mold her body into his.

Olivia was extremely speechless. Recently, this man had gone completely wild and was always pulling her in for a kiss without any regard for their surroundings. Did he forget how he got a ticket last time? And yet, he is doing it again and trying to kiss me in public. Couldn't he learn from his mistakes?

She wanted to push him away, but in the end, she helplessly leaned against him, and her hand which was both resisting and inviting him only fueled his desire even further. Somewhat roughly, his large hand trapped her small hands that were separating them, and with a stretch of his long arm, he pulled her even closer to him.

A long time later, as if centuries had gone by, Eugene finally let go of her and wrapped her in his arms.

Olivia's body had gone completely weak, and she was even a little out of breath. Those who were unaware might think that she had just finished some kind of intense exercise. Her ears were filled with Eugene's strong heartbeat, and she felt both amused and worried. He already knew that he would feel even worse after kissing her, but he was still unable to resist the temptation.

He lowered his head and pressed his forehead against hers, his voice soft and pitiful. "Darling... I want you. I really, really want you."

Naturally, Olivia knew what he meant, and she could also see how excited his lower part was. Instantly, her fair face turned red, and she hurriedly struggled out from his embrace. "T-think of something else."

How could he think of doing something like that at a place like this?

Eugene chuckled softly, his fingers gently lifting her chin as he left a peck on her flushed face before deliberately taking a deep inhale. "Okay. I'll control myself."

Upon saying that, he started the car and slowly began to drive. Throughout the ride, Olivia constantly peeked at him, and it was only when they were nearly home that he seemed to calm down a little.

Then, the two headed to the 59th floor hand in hand. However, when Olivia attempted to key in the passcode to open the door as usual, the door unexpectedly refused to budge.

Eugene laughed to himself inwardly, but his expression remained unchanged as he said, "It looks like they want you to stay at my place."

Olivia frowned. "What do you mean?"

"They talked about it today. They want to live together, and they're probably planning to stay on the 59th floor and let you move in with me."

"Nonsense. My sons won't do that."

Not buying his explanation, Olivia pressed the doorbell, and the door soon opened.

"Mommy!" North pounced into Olivia's arms and said, "I changed our passcode. I'll tell you later."

After saying that, he shot Eugene a meaningful look. Olivia followed the direction of his gaze as well, only to see Eugene wearing an innocent expression.

"What's wrong?"

North huffed proudly and didn't reply. Instead, he dragged Olivia into the house while informing her, "Grandma and Aunt Jewel are here."

Taken aback by his sudden words, Olivia hurriedly changed her shoes and headed inside. "Why are you here, Mrs. Nolan?"

Ellen greeted her with a smile, "You're back, Olivia. Dinner's almost ready, so get some rest. When Jewel called me yesterday, I saw that she didn't look too well, so I came over to visit her and ended up seeing that Eugene's car was here, too. I thought that you were home, so I came up to visit, and that's how I got to know Carter and the others."

Olivia nodded and hummed in reply. As she looked at the children surrounding her, she asked dubiously, "Didn't you kids go to school?"

Eugene explained, "After they were done talking, they came back from school and changed the passcode. It took me a lot of effort to come in."

Olivia glared at him, inwardly berating him for not telling her earlier and even saying that the children wanted her to move in with him.

Chapter 1025 North's Gift

What a cunning man, Olivia thought to herself.

"Come and have a seat, Mrs. Nolan. I'll do it," she said.

Ellen refused, "It's fine, I'm already done. We can eat now."

However, Olivia still went to help out. Upon seeing Jewel silently lay out the dishes on the table, she felt a twinge of discomfort in her heart.

At the very least, Alex knew that their relationship had no future and tried to hold his feelings back. However, Jewel's feelings for him remained in a state of uncertainty, making the situation even more agonizing for her. She was still waiting fervently for his answer, probably afraid that he would look for her, yet hoping that he would at the same time.

Olivia let out a helpless sigh. Regardless of the outcome, Eugene was right, and they needed to proceed with the DNA test. Even if they turned out to be siblings, she had already given up hope. If not, they needed to find a solution instead of tormenting each other and leaving both of them hurt. It had only been a few days since she last saw her, but Jewel had already become noticeably thinner.

Soon, the dining table was filled with people, with the four children on one side and the adults on the other. Seeing them stuffing their cheeks full of food melted Ellen's heart.

She looked at the children lovingly. "Eat slowly. Do you like the food I made?"

They nodded. "It's yummy."

Eugene hurriedly peeled the prawns for them. In their house, they would serve prawns every few days, and while the children loved them, he was happy to cook for them as well. Besides, he enjoyed peeling prawns for them, and the sight of them eating happily made him happy as well.

However, Ellen looked at Olivia and said, "Olivia, I only found out that they're Eugene's children today, but you must be aware that they didn't show up because Eugene was fooling around."

Olivia nodded. "I know, Mrs. Nolan."

"But it must've been difficult for you to take care of so many children all of a sudden."

Olivia laughed and replied, "Not at all. They're very good kids, and they don't need me to take care of them at all. In fact, they're the ones taking care of me, and they're always protecting me, so you don't have to worry, Mrs. Nolan. Eugene and I have already dissolved our misunderstanding, and we won't argue anymore."

Ellen nodded with a smile. "That's good to hear!"

As she spoke, Olivia placed some food on Ellen's plate. "Eat more, Mrs. Nolan."

"You should eat, too."

Then, she took some food for Jewel as well. "You should eat more, too. You've lost weight."

Just those words alone sent a lump in Jewel's throat, but she still smiled as if she were fine. "Isn't that good? That way, I won't have to go on a diet."

Although she seemed the same as usual, Olivia was well aware that she must not be feeling well at the moment.

After their meal ended, Eugene decided to take the three children and Ellen back home.

However, just as they were about to leave, North suddenly yelped, "Wait a moment!"

Then, he rushed back to his bedroom.

The others exchanged confused glances, wondering what he was up to.

Fortunately, North emerged from his room not long later. At first, he was running toward them, but upon reaching the three children, he turned a little shy. Clearing his throat in an attempt to seem more formal, he spoke solemnly as if he were an adult. "Since I'm your elder brother, I should give you some gifts. These are for you."

He extended a hand and lifted it before loosening his grip. Three bee-shaped necklaces drooped down from his hand, while the other end hung off his fingers.

The three children felt surprised and happy, and they sent him questioning looks. "Are these for us, North?"

North nodded, handing each of them a necklace as he explained, "There's a tracker inside. In the future, you should keep it on you. When you're in any danger, press the belly of this bee pendant and your location will be sent to Daddy's phone. That way, Daddy can immediately locate you. Don't press it when nothing is wrong, and only press on it if you're in danger, understand?"

Chapter 1026 A Heartwarming but Distressing Scene

The Rogers siblings nodded in admiration and bowed in unison. "Thank you, North."

Feeling a sense of accomplishment, North smiled while looking at the three slightly shorter children. "It's fine. You need to press hard on the bee's tummy for it to work, so it wouldn't matter if you accidentally touched it. You guys can give it a try."

The three children looked at each other before turning to look at Eugene.

In the meantime, Eugene was looking at North, feeling amazed and shocked. As he would expect from his son, North was not only a smart cutie but also detailed and kind. Indeed, Eugene had been worried about the Rogers siblings, so he had trackers added to those necklaces.

Suddenly, Eugene felt a soreness in his nose. His son started from being unable to accept having siblings splitting his father's attention to gradually looking out for them. Although it was a heartwarming scene, Eugene still felt distressed.

That was because he knew Olivia and North must have felt very aggrieved and shocked when facing the Rogers siblings' sudden appearance, but now, they could work together and beat the common enemy. It was like they really thought of each other as family.

Even though they might have gotten along so quickly because of Olivia, so what?

After withdrawing his thoughts, he gratefully glanced at Olivia and pulled her into his embrace. Then, he told the Rogers siblings, "Try pressing on it. See if it works."

The siblings were very obedient, and each pressed on their bees' tummies in astonishment while waiting for the beep of a text message.

Not long after, a message with their location was sent to Eugene's phone.

The message indicated that they were on the fifty-ninth floor and even showed each of their names.

The Rogers siblings looked at the bee necklaces with surprise, feeling happy and touched. Then, they helped each other to put on the necklace and joyfully touched them.

Meanwhile, Ellen had quietly approached North and rubbed his head. "You're such a smart child, North."

North grinned and then looked toward Olivia.

Olivia was also looking at him with all smiles. Actually, she could accept the Rogers siblings because they weren't children Eugene had with another woman but children born from advanced technology.

In North's eyes, however, the Rogers siblings were here to snatch his father from him, so he must feel very sad.

Now, North had accepted them because of his father and even became a responsible older brother. He was doing so well that no one could fault him.

That made Olivia feel gratified but also distressed. She silently went over and pulled North into her arms.

Even though Eugene saw that, he couldn't say anything before the Rogers siblings, so he said, "Come on. I'll send you home."

The Rogers siblings reluctantly bid the others goodbye before leaving with Eugene.

Inside the car, Ellen preached, "It's unsafe for those three to live so far away. You should let them live alongside you."

Eugene agreed, "I understand. I'll discuss with Olivia about moving back to the villa."

"Why don't you let them live with me? Brian and I can help you take care of them."

Eugene looked at the Rogers siblings and asked, "Are you guys willing to move in with Grandma?"

The siblings looked at each other, and Carter concluded their thoughts, "We want to live with Godmother."

Smiling, Eugene said to Ellen, "Do you see that? Even I can't tell them what to do. Those four are all on Olivia's side. Don't worry. I've sent people to secretly protect them."

Ellen said nothing.

After he sent everyone home, he went straight to find Alex. When he left just now, Olivia secretly gave him a spoon, and he knew she wanted Alex to perform a DNA test.

Recently, Alex sounded lifeless whenever Eugene called him, so Eugene thought he might be having a tough time.

Jewel was also like that, let alone Alex.

Eugene then asked Alex to meet him at the Ruby Palace.

Chapter 1027 Confronting Alex

When Eugene arrived at the Royal Palace, Alex was alone in the room as he shrank into the corner. The room was dimly lit, so it took Eugene some time to find Alex.

He was still as lifeless as before.

Frustrated, Eugene kicked Alex and asked, "Have you just gotten drunk, or were you never sober?"

Alex stayed quiet and turned to his side, wrapping his clothes tighter around him, and continued sleeping as if nothing concerned him.

After kicking him disdainfully again, Eugene asked, "Can't you pull yourself together?"

Without opening his eyes, Alex listlessly retorted, "If you suddenly found out that you and Olivia are siblings, would you be able to pull yourself together?"

Eugene was so furious that he angrily laughed. "Are you depressed because you and Jewel are siblings, or are you depressed because Jewel's mom was the person who ruined your parents' marriage?"

Alex shot Eugene a death stare. "Is there a difference?"

Then, Eugene nudged him further into the corner to make space for himself. "Of course, there is!"

Alex replied, "Both are depressing."

"How are those things in comparison to losing Jewel?" Eugene asked.

Scrunching his brows together, Alex demanded, "Can you be more straightforward and say whatever you want to say? Do you think I can understand your indirect words?"

Eugene was at a loss for words as he wondered how Alex could justifiably throw a tantrum at this moment. He gave Alex the spoon Olivia packed for him. "This is for you. I can only help you this far."

Frowning, Alex asked, "What's this?"

"A spoon Jewel used. She's in no better condition than you are. You already know it's impossible between you and Jewel, so you feel sad, pitiful, and regretful, but you wouldn't anticipate anything. However, Jewel is still anxiously waiting for you at home. Do you know that not knowing what will happen tomorrow is more agonizing than already knowing the truth? You should perform a DNA test with her. If you're indeed siblings, be a man and tell Jewel the truth. Don't keep her hanging while you're here wasting your life away, but if you're not siblings, then choose the lesser of two evils. Why torture yourselves like this?"

It was then that Alex gave Eugene a bewildered look. "What are you talking about? Do you think that Jewel and I aren't siblings?"

Eugene replied, "It's just a suspicion. I wasn't planning on telling you this, but I don't want to see you and Jewel torment each other. Actually, your mother didn't slit her wrist to kill herself. She probably did it to force you and Jewel to separate."

While he spoke, he observed Alex's expression but didn't see any surprise. Instead, he asked in shock, "Do all of you know that?"

Eugene narrowed his eyes. "You know about this?"

Alex replied, "Yes. It's because I caught her slitting her wrists and faking suicide. That's what forced her to tell me Jewel is Winnie's daughter."

After a moment's silence, Eugene drew a deep breath. "Why didn't you f*cking tell her earlier? Why did you have to wait until you developed feelings for each other before telling the truth?"

Alex explained, "This incident doesn't only bring nightmares to my mom but also me. She wouldn't have mentioned this if she had other ways to separate Jewel and me."

Eugene argued, "Are you sure she was telling the truth? Since she could feign slitting her wrist, I think she lied that you and Jewel are siblings to separate you guys even more. That's what I suspect and the most I can help you with. A DNA test stands between you and the answer, so you decide whether you want to do it. No matter what the results or decision, you have to tell Jewel. Don't keep her hanging because she has done nothing wrong, and perhaps she wouldn't have left home and ended up in this situation if you hadn't shown up in her life."

Alex stared silently at the spoon for a long while.

Chapter 1028 I Want Them to Disappear

It had been three days, and Azalea hadn't received a call from Eugene about letting her work at Nolan Group. That caused her to hate the few children even more.

She had a clear plan. Once she entered Nolan Group, she and Eugene would be together for long periods, and she was confident that she would have a chance to win his heart.

Even if Eugene was head over heels for Olivia, there would come a time when he would get bored of her. So as long as she was patient enough, she could wait until that time arrived.

No man in the world could be in love with someone for a very long time.

However, her carefully thought-out plan was ruined by those children.

The oldest one was Eugene's biological child, so she couldn't do anything to him.

But the other three were nothing. They weren't Eugene's children, yet they dared to protect Olivia. Wasn't that equivalent to seeking death?

Azalea looked at Shannon in the room and ordered, "Shannon, I'm craving the dumplings you bought me last time. Why don't you go and buy me some more?"

Shannon agreed, "Sure. But you have to stay in your room."

Azalea replied, "Don't worry. I'll be fine."

However, Shannon insisted, "That won't work. Mr. Nolan asked me to protect you, and I wouldn't be able to explain myself if something happened to you."

Pretending to feel resigned, Azalea argued, "I understand. I'll stay in my room and will let you follow me wherever I go, okay?"

Shannon smiled. "Okay. Wait here. I'll be back soon." Then, she left.

Once the door closed, Azalea took out her phone to make a call.

"Have you found where those three children are living?"

A man's voice sounded. "Yes, Aza. We've found it."

Azalea ordered, "Teach them a lesson so that they know not to meddle in other people's business."

But the man added, "But there are bodyguards with them. It won't be easy for us to deal with them."

Azalea's voice gradually became colder. "Don't tell me you can't even harm three children?"

Unexpectedly, just as she finished speaking, a beep came from the door, followed by being pushed open.

Shannon came in breathing heavily and was slightly baffled when she saw Azalea's expression, wondering, Whom is she calling? Her expression seems quite fierce, completely different from the gentle woman on usual days.

But when Shannon noticed Azalea's unfriendly gaze, she quickly explained, "Azalea, I forgot to ask. Do you want the ones I bought from the east side of the city or the west side?"

Looking at the phone in her hand, Azalea still looked frustrated. When she saw Shannon entering, she frantically hung up and felt displeased but still tried to maintain her kind attitude. So, she forced a smile. "The one you bought last time. I didn't know where you bought it."

Shannon grinned. "I bought them twice, remember? The one from the day before yesterday was bought on the city's east side, while the one before that was from the west side."

At that point, Azalea was about to lash out but forced herself to remain patient. "The one from the day before yesterday."

Shannon replied, "Okay. That's from the east side. Alright, I'll head there now." Once she finished speaking, she ran out of the room again.

Azalea stared at the closed door and angrily threw her phone on the bed.

It took her quite a while to calm down before picking up her phone and calling the same number.

"I don't care what method you use. I want them to disappear from my sight."

She felt like she would explode in anger if she didn't do something about this.

The man asked, "Aza, are you saying you want us to kill them?"

Azalea replied, "I want them to never appear before me again. As for whether you kill them or send them away, that has nothing to do with me. Also, make sure to clean up your tracks, or else it will implicate your leader."

Once Azalea was done, she hung up the call.

Chapter 1029 Kidnapping the Triplets

The Rogers siblings were self-disciplined and did their homework in their room after school.

Suddenly, they heard a knock on the door.

As the oldest brother, Carter reacted quickly and immediately exited their room, but when he saw an unfamiliar man from the intercom screen, he felt wary and asked, "Who is it?"

The man had a box in his arms, answering, "You have a delivery."

Skeptical, Carter questioned, "What delivery? Where is it from?"

The man replied, "It's from Muse Peninsula."

Carter's eyes lit up. "It's from Godmother!"

Just as he was about to open the door, Blake and Terry came out as well.

"Wait," Terry called to Carter.

Blake asked, "Who is it?"

Carter told them what happened just now. "He said it was a delivery from Muse Peninsula. I think it might be from Godmother."

Blake was surprised too. "Could it be a gift from Godmother?"

However, Terry shot them a disdainful glance before announcing, "He's a bad guy."

Carter and Blake looked at each other, unconvinced.

Blake argued, "How can he be a bad guy? You shouldn't think badly about everyone."

Carter concurred, "That's right. How would the bad guys know about Muse Peninsula?"

Terry replied, "How could they not know?"

An unconvinced Carter argued, "Then, you tell us. How do you know they are bad guys?"

Terry answered, "Godmother wouldn't send us anything by delivery."

Since Carter was quite smart, he immediately understood after listening to that explanation. He blamed himself for letting his guard down because he heard it was from the familiar Muse Peninsula.

Terry was right, though, so Carter nodded. "You're right. Godmother knows it's not safe for us to live alone and would have brought us to her home if she wanted to give us anything."

Meanwhile, Blake also felt nervous as he looked at Carter and Terry. "So, what should we do now?"

Terry crossed his arms and said, "We'll teach them a lesson."

On the other hand, the man outside felt anxious after the long wait, wondering if the three kindergarteners had discovered he was lying to them.

He pressed the doorbell and yelled, "Hello? Do you still want your parcel?"

However, there was no movement from inside, so he peeked at his companions, hiding not far from him.

Those two gestured for him to put the box down and pretend to leave. Then, they would seize the chance to enter the house while the children came out to take the parcel.

By then, they would each grab a kid and easily bring them away.

Therefore, the man said, "I'll leave the box at your door. Remember to take it inside."

Unexpectedly, the door suddenly opened with a click.

The man outside was startled and stuck his head inside to look around the room. Seeing no one inside the living room, he bellowed, "Is anyone here? I'm coming in."

While speaking, he tried to creep further inside the room while gesturing for his companions to follow him.

The two also quickly followed the man.

"Our parents aren't home. Put the thing down and leave." Carter was hiding in the room and deliberately said that.

The man was even more pleased to hear that. The parents aren't home? Do you even have parents?

He then waved at the other two men, telling them to come over and close the door. It would be too humiliating if the three of them couldn't catch three children.

The three men put down the empty box and quietly approached the three closed doors.

However, they suddenly felt their feet were being tripped by something.

The three men would have been more cautious if they were in a dangerous place, but where were they? They were inside a house with three kindergarteners.

In fact, the man didn't think the children were a threat and thought it would be easy as pie to capture the three children as long as they didn't alert the bodyguards.

Once they found the children, they would knock them out and secretly bring them away.

While the man was still happily immersed in his thoughts, he suddenly felt something falling from the roof, followed by the smell of lime powder. It was...

Chapter 1030 Defeating the Intruders

The man looked up and saw a huge fishing net hidden within the lime powder on the white ceiling and reacted quickly by immediately yelling to the other two behind him, "Don't come closer!"

Once he said that, he tried to retreat but fell on his face. Then, he realized the glistening floor wasn't from water but an adhesive. He had only been standing in it for a while but was now glued to the floor.

Besides him, the other two weren't faring any better. Although they didn't fall, they could only struggle in their spot. One of the men was smart enough to leave his shoe but did not expect the lime powder from the ceiling to fall, followed by the huge net. In seconds, they were completely encased under the net.

They were already stuck to their spots, so with the addition of the net and choking lime powder, the three men were like caged animals, closing their eyes while desperately tugging on the net.

Just as they were losing hope, many swirling blades were suddenly shot at them from all directions.

The three siblings came up with that after Olivia got trapped the last time. They changed the ball bearings to blades because that would inflict more pain.

The three men used their arms to shield their most vulnerable spots because there was no way to avoid the blades.

The pain was inevitable, but the blades could easily kill them, so who would care about pain at such a moment? Even so, the three men still wailed in pain.

Humiliation! It was the most humiliation they had ever felt!

Three young children had defeated three fully-grown men.

The rain of blades lasted for three minutes and stopped. The three men felt slightly relieved but were still afraid to open their eyes lest the lime powder got in them. However, they never expected they would suddenly be sprayed with a blast of water with such force that it pained everywhere the water hit. Of course, it hurt even more whenever the water touched their wounds.

Not only did they have nowhere to hide, but they also couldn't catch their breath. However, during such times, one would unconsciously try to open one's eyes to observe the situation. Once that happened, the lime-powder and water mix would flow into the eye.

This was the complete trap, and since Olivia unintentionally set it off when she was here last time, the whole trap didn't go off. However, the trap was used to teach those kidnappers a lesson this time.

The men began screaming in pain. "Ouch! My eyes!"

"F*ck this! Stop this instance!"

"Just wait, you brats! See if I won't kill you once I get out."

While the three men were still yelling, Carter calmly made a phone call. "Come over. There are bad guys in our home."

After that, he pressed on the remote and unlocked the door.

The bodyguards arrived within a minute of the phone call. When they saw the three unharmed children, one of them asked worriedly, "Are you alright?"

Blake and Terry turned off the water and put away the high-tension hose. Water being shot out from that hose hurt the most and it required both of them to hold it in place, which suggested how much force it had.

After they put the hose away and came out, they put on emotionless faces and said nothing. They looked at the three men and saw how ruffled they looked. It was like three huge, wet garbage piles in their living room.

The three men were unrecognizable. The lime powder had clumped up on their bodies because of the water and it was trickling white streaks of liquid down their bodies.

Also, the expressions on their faces were even more intriguing. It was a mix of confusion from not knowing where they were, anger from the humiliation, and pain from their burning eyes. All of that combined to become a hilarious scene.
