

Chapter 594 Novus Stella Apartments

The look on Josiah's face told Donald that the man was unrepentant and that he thought Donald was one of his enemies in the corporate world.

With a sigh, Donald said, “Killing you will only dirty my hands. Lara.”

“Yes, Lord Campbell.”

Lara stepped out of the shadows, scaring the living daylights out of Josiah.

“Take him away and get rid of him, but don't make his death too easy.”

“Of course, Lord Campbell.”

Lara then strode over to Josiah. Although she seemed gentle, the moment she struck Josiah, Josiah slumped to the ground, never once making a sound.

When Donald came out of the room, he bumped into Jennifer, who had just finished her meeting.

“How was it? What was he here for?”

Right as Jennifer was about to enter the conference room, Donald stopped her.

After all, there was a body in the conference room at the moment, and Donald was afraid that Jennifer would be startled by the sight of it.

“It was nothing. He just wanted to find out whether or not our stay the night before was good.”

“The CEO of the company came to ask that himself?”

Jennifer was confused. She had just heard from Yulia about how Josiah was a ruthless businessman. Is he really that nice to all of the hotel patrons?

“It seemed like you had a good sleep last night, so I gave them a five-star rating. They're currently organizing the information inside, so it's best not to disturb them. They'll leave in a while.”

Jennifer had no reason to doubt Donald's words. As she shoved a folder into his hands, she said, “This is the list of the first batch of rookies that Yulia and I were discussing earlier. We're planning to have two from the list participate in the reality variety show tomorrow. Take a trip around with the list and see which two would be suitable.”

“Me?” Donald widened his eyes at Jennifer. “Why me?”

Jennifer rolled her eyes in response. “Isn't it your dream to re-establish Dragon Fide Villa? I'm letting you pick Dragon Fide Corporation's future brand ambassador. Am I supposed to be the one meeting them instead of you? This is a fantastic job, and do make your choice properly. The ones in this list are all beautiful ladies.”

Jennifer winked at Donald and even smacked Donald's bottom before she left.

The latter did not know what to feel about that. What is this? Is this a test for me?

Although Donald was not too willing to work on it, he had no choice but to heed Jennifer's words since she had assigned him the task herself.

He had to admit that Yulia was efficient, and the idea of training rookies was certainly not something impromptu.

When Donald came to the condominium as stated in the document, he found out that the building was one of Yulia's properties and that the candidates had already been living in the condominium for almost a year. They had also been studying various courses throughout the months.

After showing the personnel his work ID, the manager who was in charge of the rookies, Violette Azymore, came to welcome Donald.

Upon hearing that Donald was there to pick two people for the reality show, Violette immediately figured out that Donald had to be someone who had a higher-ranking position than her. The smile on her face widened.

“Mr. Campbell, this must be your first time at Novus Stella Apartments. The girls in our condominium are all pretty, talented, and hardworking.”

Violette could not stop rambling the moment she became enthusiastic, and Donald was about to be overloaded with information.

Hence, he waved his hand to cut her off and said, “I'm just here to pick two for the show. We don't need to complicate things, and you don't need to say so much to me.”

Look at how aggressive his words are! Just here to pick two, he says!

The enthusiasm in Violette grew, but she said in a softer voice, “Mr. Campbell, your choice is their opportunity to make it big. They'll do anything you want them to do.”
