

Unrepairable Love / I married a man

Chapter 711

Alexander said, "The meanings of the two sets of jewelry are different, and I am giving them to different people, so there's no conflict. It was true that the green jade was more dignified and elegant, suitable for elders, and Kennedy's jewelry was more suitable for young people, as a trendy luxury item."

Magnolia suddenly asked Elizabeth, "Elizabeth, do you know Kennedy?"

Elizabeth asked, somewhat confused, "Is Kennedy a man or a woman?"

"Kennedy is a young woman," Magnolia said. "I have a friend who met her before and couldn't stop praising her."

"Do you also think Kennedy is excellent?" Elizabeth immediately asked.

Magnolia nodded right away. "Of course, isn't she excellent?"

Elizabeth smiled. Alright, if Magnolia also thought Kennedy was excellent, that's enough for her.

But after thinking for a moment, Elizabeth asked again, "So, Magnolia, do you really like Kennedy's work?"

Magnolia replied, "Of course, I don't think anyone would dislike her work."

"Then if she makes a comeback, what will happen to Opulent Crest Jewelry?" Elizabeth tilted her head.

Alexander saw a hint of assertiveness in her eyes, which the old Elizabeth rarely had. Elizabeth was really different after their divorce.

"Opulent Crest Jewelry won't make way for anyone. Kennedy is excellent, but Opulent Crest Jewelry is not bad either," Magnolia answered gracefully.

But Elizabeth stirred things up. "Mr. Tudor, I have a question for you." She smiled, looking very obedient and gentle, but actually hiding a scheme.

Alexander raised an eyebrow, with a calm expression of “Go ahead.”

“If both Kennedy and Opulent Crest Jewelry wanted your investment, who would you choose?” Elizabeth curled her lips, the assertiveness in her eyes becoming even more arrogant.

Alexander stared at her, his eyes slightly narrowed. Magnolia was even more surprised, not expecting Elizabeth to ask such a question. But she was also quite curious about who Alexander would choose. Although Kennedy was excellent, Magnolia had known Alexander for many years.

Alexander pursed his lips, turned his head to look at Magnolia, and said, “Still Opulent Crest Jewelry. A celebrity like Kennedy probably doesn’t need my investment.”

Chapter 711

Elizabeth was silent. A look of surprise appeared on Magnolia’s face. It seemed that Alexander’s answer really surprised her. Elizabeth sighed and could only nod in acceptance.

Before leaving, Elizabeth didn’t forget to say, “Mr. Tudor, you and Magnolia are quite suitable for each other. Maybe you should try dating her. After all, she has been pursuing you for a long time.”

After saying that, she walked away without looking back. Alexander stared at her back, his previously puzzled face slowly revealing a smile.

Elizabeth’s seemingly calm three sentences... that means she’s jealous?

Chapter 712

Elizabeth went to the restroom to touch up her makeup. She looked at herself in the mirror and sighed deeply. Thinking about Alexander mentioning investing in Magnolia, she found it amusing. The reason he didn’t invest in Kennedy was that Kennedy already had many investors, so he didn’t need another one—a typical self-congratulatory way of avoiding investment. Just because she had everything, he wouldn’t give her anything? How did he know what she wanted most wasn’t from him?

Elizabeth lowered her eyes, and just as she was lost in thought, someone appeared at the door. She saw the person in the mirror and clicked her tongue. “Mr. Tudor, this is the ladies’ room.”

“So what?” He crossed his arms and leaned casually against the wall. He knew there was only Elizabeth in the ladies’ room. Otherwise, he wouldn’t have shown up here.

Elizabeth didn’t say anything and instead applied some lipstick. Alexander watched her small movements, looking at her slightly parted red lips, and licked his own.

“Elizabeth,” he called her.

Elizabeth looked up and saw him in the mirror. “You jealous?” His tone was low, with a hint of seriousness.

Elizabeth was stunned for two seconds, then laughed. “Mr. Tudor, have you been drinking?” How much had he drunk? How had he not passed out yet and started having delusions? What was he saying? He actually asked if she was jealous? Where did Alexander get the idea that she was jealous? She didn’t know if she was crazy or if he was.

“Mr. Tudor, if you’re drunk, call Nolan to take you home,” Elizabeth kindly reminded him.

“Do I look drunk? I’m very sober, and I can even judge your mood.” His tone was indifferent, but his face was undeniably handsome—although he was very tired, it didn’t hide his sharpness.

Then tell me, what mood am I in? Elizabeth laughed.

If he judged correctly, she hoped his answer would be: It’s the mood to curse someone out.

Alexander raised an eyebrow. “You’re in the jealous mood.”

“Alexander, I think you’re crazy,” Elizabeth said angrily. Alexander wasn’t upset at all when she cursed at him; instead, he was in a great mood.

“Pursuing you requires a bit of craziness, doesn’t it?” He crossed his arms and stared intently at her, asking, “Am I right?”

Elizabeth was speechless; she felt he was utterly shameless. “I think you’re quite unreasonable.” She smiled and walked past him to leave.

Alexander reached out and grabbed her arm. “Elizabeth.”

“What now?” Elizabeth was getting more and more annoyed. Every time Alexander called her, she felt angry. But Alexander didn’t think he was annoying. He called Elizabeth a few more times, wishing he could call her every day.

Alexander felt a bit aggrieved. “I don’t mean anything else. I just want to ask you a question; don’t be so impatient.” Elizabeth felt like punching him. Who was he pretending to be aggrieved with? Was he changing tactics?

Elizabeth irritably pushed his hand away and heard him ask, “Do you like Kennedy’s comeback work?”

“Why?” Elizabeth was impatient.

“I bought it to give to you, is that okay?” Alexander’s eyes softened.

Elizabeth almost choked and got confused. “Mr. Tudor, I’m not very fond of it, don’t waste your money,” she said politely, declining.

Alexander didn’t understand. “Don’t all girls like it? Why don’t you?”

“Because I’m not an ordinary girl.” Elizabeth smiled, wanting to mock him.

Chapter 713

Elizabeth still managed to restrain her impulsive words.

“How about I give you another gift?” Alexander asked.

Elizabeth was puzzled. “Aren’t you busy? Why do you do that?”

It used to be incredibly difficult to get him to give her a gift. It seemed so cheap.

“You’ll definitely like this gift,” he said. “I didn’t bring it with me; let’s meet tonight.”

“I’m not free.” Elizabeth rejected him outright. First, she didn’t like the gifts he gave; second, she didn’t want to see him either.

“I’ll be waiting for you at the top floor of the Emerald Skyscraper, Elizabeth. If you don’t come, I won’t leave,” he said.

Elizabeth frowned. But Alexander looked very serious. Elizabeth should know that he always kept his word. If he said he wouldn't leave, he definitely wouldn't leave.

She pushed him away.

"So, were you jealous just now?" Alexander followed her. He didn't care if she came or not. Anyway, if she didn't come, he wouldn't leave. If Elizabeth felt sorry for him, she would come; if she didn't come, he would understand her.

"Stop being narcissistic and stop following me. Or I'll call the police!" Elizabeth pointed at him, very annoyed.

Alexander was indifferent and continued to follow her. Elizabeth was really speechless that he didn't seem tired at all. It seemed that he had been through the tough times so easily.

"The Tudor Group has gotten through the tough times, hasn't it?" Elizabeth asked him.

"Don't worry, it will be fine. And the shares I promised you, I'll still give them to you later," he said with a smile.

Elizabeth quickly shook him off. Rather than saying she shook him off, he was intercepted by Magnolia as soon as he came out of the restroom. Elizabeth had never been so grateful to Magnolia. But at this moment, she was very thankful to her. Elizabeth gave Alexander a provocative look and then quickly escaped.

Chapter 713

Alexander saw her expression and smiled. This side of Elizabeth made him feel she was a bit closer, hinting at something more.

Magnolia followed Alexander's gaze and saw it was the direction they had both left. He hadn't smiled all night, but just seeing Elizabeth's back made him smile.

Who would believe that Alexander didn't love Elizabeth? And when had someone as proud as Alexander ever apologized to anyone? But he apologized to Elizabeth.

Magnolia knew she could never catch up to Alexander in this lifetime. But being able to have some interaction with him, she was already very content.

“If you get in touch with Kennedy, I hope you can introduce me,” Alexander said to Magnolia.

Magnolia asked, “Do you want to buy Kennedy’s comeback piece?”

“Yes,” Alexander replied.

Magnolia was silent for a moment. She knew that the green jade Alexander bought was to be given to an elder. So who was Alexander buying Kennedy’s comeback piece for? That kind of jewelry only young people would like.

Could it be for Elizabeth?

“Is it for Elizabeth?” Magnolia asked.

Alexander looked at her. “Otherwise, Ms. Belle, who do you think I would give it to?”

Magnolia laughed. With that one address, Alexander had completely cut off any personal relationship between them. In the end, they were just business partners.

Chapter 714

“Kennedy’s comeback piece is hard to buy. Even if I introduce you, I’d give up,” Magentia implied, suggesting the son would not sell it to them. But Alexander didn’t buy it. If she’s releasing it as a comeback piece, she’s waiting for someone. That’s hitting the nail on the head. In my opinion, if my price is right, why wouldn’t they sell? His Magnolia then felt annoyed.

Because they were both in the jewelry design business. Yet, at her edition, Alexander was talking to her about Kennedy. How could she feel comfortable with that? Magnolia looked at Elizabeth’s distant figure, then at Alexander, whose eyes were fixed on Elizabeth. Then she smiled bitterly, feeling her life was truly miserable. Loving someone she shouldn’t love—maybe that’s what it was. She was either chasing or always a step too late.

In college, she fell for Alexander. But Elizabeth had known him since high school. When Alexander got married, Magnolia thought he would belong to Elizabeth for life, but then she heard he liked Esme. When he got married again, Magnolia was still a step too late. He had fallen for Elizabeth again. Looking back, Magnolia’s pursuit seemed like she was always struggling alone.

Being a step too late was actually Magnolia never appearing in Alexander's life trajectory. That so-called step...

All these years, her affection and emotions were only self-serving. She had never been in Alexander's world. He might not even know how long Magnolia had liked him. Magnolia was about to get married, but her heart was still set on an unattainable Alexander. She lowered her head, feeling ridiculous.

"I saw it first. Do you have any sense of fairness?" Elizabeth looked up because the voice was Natalia's. A voice nearby caught everyone's attention.

Natalia stood in front of the jewelry display case, looking serious. "Shouldn't there be a first-come, first-served basis? You can't just take what someone else loves because you like it." Elizabeth walked over. In the center of the crowd stood someone who always gave her a headache: Blair. Why was Natalia clashing with Blair again? They were already at odds, and now with a reason, wouldn't they start arguing again?

"Natalia, I want this set of jewelry," Blair said assertively. Natalia smiled. "I want it too, and I won't give in. My people are already putting down a deposit," she said, arms crossed. Blair remained calm. "My uncle is also putting down a deposit for..."

Elizabeth watched them, raising her hand to her temples. How childish they are. Soon, jewelry consultants approached them. Seeing so many people gathered, they were a bit flustered but still whispered to both, "This jewelry is currently in high demand. Someone else wants to bid on it too. Would you like to increase your offer?"

In the silence, two voices almost simultaneously said, "Yes!" Elizabeth looked up to see Blair and Natalia glaring at each other, gritting their teeth, and saying together, "Increase to the max!" She then glanced at the jewelry in the display case, which was a beautiful diamond necklace with a matching bracelet. Under the white light, the diamonds sparkled brilliantly. But it didn't change the fact that the set was quite ordinary. But the price tag in the lower right corner exceeded six million dollars, which was not worth it.

Elizabeth approached Natalia and gently said, "Let it go, Natalia. Let her have it if she likes it so much." The implication was that the jewelry wasn't worth the high price; increasing the bid was unnecessary. With six million dollars, Elizabeth could help Natalia pick out a very beautiful and classic set of jewelry, the kind that would be the most eye-catching presence at any event without a sponsor.

Chapter 715

Elizabeth's outfit today was truly elegant and beautiful. Natalia, on the other hand, had a sweet demeanor. The common ground was that both were very beautiful, especially their rich, vibrant presence when they stood together. But the noticeable attractiveness and confident look...

"I buy it for you, but how about we choose another one?" Elizabeth told Natalia.

Natalia blinked at her. Suddenly, they started acting like close friends. It was a bit sudden for both of them, but since they had started, they had to see it through.

"Afraid you can't compete with me," Blair sneered from the side.

Elizabeth laughed. "It's just a set of jewelry. What's there to compete for? Since you like it so much, we'll let you have it."

"Elizabeth, stop joking. I saw this jewelry first. How can you say you're letting me have it?" Blair stepped forward, revealing a hint of immaturity. After all, she had just graduated not long ago. She was also beautiful, but her beauty had a touch of...

"Do you want it or not?" Elizabeth couldn't be bothered to argue with her.

"Elizabeth..." Natalia was still a bit hesitant.

Currently, the hottest jewelry pieces were only two sets. One was Kennedy's comeback piece: Tears of Snow. The other was Opulent Crest Jewelry's exhibition piece, Magnolia's masterpiece: Emerald Love. The emerald set had already been taken by Alexander, and Kennedy's Tears of Snow was unavailable. So, the Opulent Crest Jewelry's set was undoubtedly the most suitable for showing off at the moment.

Natalia was hesitating whether to let Blair have it. Blair was also considering.

"This set isn't good," Elizabeth said bluntly. She wasn't afraid of being laughed at, nor was she afraid of offending Magnolia. "It's not suitable for you, Natalia."

Blair scoffed, “It really isn’t suitable for her. Kennedy’s Tears of Snow would suit her, but you have to be able to buy it first!” She continued to provoke, “I think you’re just jealous! Elizabeth, you’re so hypocritical. And you’ve been like this since the research institute. Why do you like acting so much? What’s the point of acting in the end?”

Elizabeth’s expression gradually turned cold.

Natalia, annoyed, retorted, “I’ll tear your mouth apart.”

Elizabeth quickly pulled back the advancing Natalia. She stopped her not for any other reason, but because Natalia really would dare to fight. Then where did people think her reputation for being arrogant and domineering came from? It was because Natalia really did get physical.

“Is Kennedy’s Tears of Snow very popular?” Elizabeth frowned, looking puzzled.

“You’re so outdated, Elizabeth. You should know what Kennedy’s jewelry represents, right?” Blair mocked, each word like a knife, every glance filled with disdain, as Elizabeth didn’t look like a socialite at all.

“What does it represent?” Elizabeth asked again.

“Since you don’t know it, let me tell you. Kennedy’s Tears of Snow represents a symbol of status! Because Kennedy is very mysterious, and this is her comeback piece. If someone can get it, it means they’re the most impressive!” Blair explained.

People around nodded in agreement. Indeed, if someone could show off a set of “Tears of Snow” now, it would instantly make others jealous.

Under everyone’s admiring gazes and Blair’s mocking eyes, plus Natalia’s furious desire to punch Blair, Elizabeth lazily asked, “What if I have Kennedy’s “Tears of Snow?”

Chapter 716

Alarmed and embarrassed, they asked her, "What happened?" Magnolia was naked in his presence, causing even more astonishment. How could a Thark of her knowledge be currently lost in a daze? Blah suddenly laughed, wired.

The atmosphere became a bit tense, and everyone kept their mouths shut, adopting a watchful silence. Only Blair's laughter grew increasingly arrogant. Natalia even tugged at Elizabeth's arm, warning her not to speak carelessly, especially about Kennedy's new work.

"Who are you trying to fool? If Kennedy's Tears of Snow was sold, the design forum would have announced it!" Blair pointed at Elizabeth. "So, you're lying!"

"Because we're still finalizing the contract, but Kennedy has already confirmed the sale to me." Elizabeth tilted her head, exuding an air of wealth.

"It's impossible!" Blair declared confidently.

The onlookers also chimed in, "Indeed, we haven't heard anything. Elizabeth, if you don't have it, just admit it. No need to elevate your status over this."

"Exactly, if you don't have it, it's no big deal!"

"We're destined not to reach Kennedy's level. I think Opulent Crest Jewelry is pretty good too." Someone laughed, mocking themselves while praising Opulent Crest Jewelry.

Led by Natalia, everyone doubted that Elizabeth had Tears of Snow. The more they spoke, the harsher their words became, even telling Elizabeth, "Your parents aren't pretentious people. How did you become so vain?"

Elizabeth's face turned cold. Natalia suddenly seemed to remember something. She looked up at her and quietly asked, "Could it be a billion dollars, the last time I accidentally saw it? Did you buy it?" She recalled Elizabeth's chat record from that day at the hospital. Alexander heard Natalia's words, and a complex look flashed in his eyes. As Kennedy had also quoted him a billion dollars. But when he agreed, Kennedy stopped responding to his messages. So it turned out that it was sold.

No wonder when he said he would give Elizabeth Kennedy's comeback piece, she was so calm; she had actually bought it. Alexander chuckled bitterly, shaking his head with a complicated expression. He seemed to have forgotten that Elizabeth was no longer the girl who used to follow him around, hoping he would buy her this and that. Back then, even when she asked him for things, she could still support herself. She just wanted to feel what it was like for him to buy her things. Now, she truly didn't need it. She was the socialite of the Percy Family, and Declan had only one daughter, naturally giving her all the money to spend as she pleased. As long as she was happy, it was worth it. A billion dollars to make Elizabeth happy, Declan was more than willing. After all, his love for Elizabeth was well-known.

Blair listened to Elizabeth and Natalia's conversation, her expression trembling. "Who can prove it's a billion dollars just because you say so?" Blair scoffed. Everyone nodded in agreement, starting to point fingers at Elizabeth again.

"It's just a set of jewelry. Even if it's Kennedy's, it's not worth a billion dollars, right?"

"You really know how to sell yourself as a rich person. A billion dollars. How can you even say that?"

"If someone can prove that Kennedy's comeback piece is really a billion dollars, I'll do anything Elizabeth asks!" Then he looked up. It was a young man in his twenties, probably a rich kid from some family. What a shame to make a promise like that.

Alexander pursed his lips and stepped forward to the center of the crowd. Everyone was somewhat apprehensive when they saw Alexander. They all thought he was going to help Elizabeth out of this situation, and it would be brushed off. But they realized he was there to confirm the truth.

"Kennedy's comeback piece is indeed priced at a billion dollars. Elizabeth did not exaggerate." Alexander's gaze swept over the man who had just made a promise. The man's face changed instantly. "It's impossible!"

Chapter 717

"I never lie," Alexander raised an eyebrow, crossing his arms and leaning provocatively toward the man. "You don't believe me?"

The man didn't know how to respond; he couldn't dare say that. But Alexander and Elizabeth had once been married. What if he was just trying to help her out of a tight spot?

Elizabeth was also surprised that Alexander got involved, as he could have easily ignored it. Alexander casually took out his phone. His presence was so commanding that even standing there casually, he drew everyone's attention. He opened a chat record and showed the screen to everyone.

It was a chat between Nolan and him. The content was as follows:

Alexander: [Kennedy's comeback piece, price?]

Nolan replied after a long time: [One billion dollars.]

When he heard this price, he also thought it was too high. Elizabeth then turned her head and smiled; it seemed that one billion dollars was still too low. Knowing it was Alexander, they should have asked for two billion dollars to scare him.

Blair was stunned. So, one billion dollars was real. Elizabeth really bought it? The man who made a promise was also stunned. The atmosphere suddenly became tense. Everyone was frozen in place.

Elizabeth sighed and said calmly, "I told you, I really have Kennedy's 'Tears of Snow.' Not only that, I also have firsthand information."

Everyone looked at her, their eyes filled with anticipation. Elizabeth, who had just seemed like a fraud, now appeared so composed that no one could look away.

"At the end of this month, Kennedy will reveal the actual piece," Elizabeth smiled.

"Really?" Natalia's eyes lit up, full of disbelief. Blair didn't know how to respond either. She just looked at Elizabeth, unable to say a word.

Chapter 717

Elizabeth looked at her, her eyes curling up provocatively. "Really. I've already...fleeced her."

Blair was utterly defeated by this statement. And now, she was the real clown. So what if she bought that six-million-dollar jewelry set? Elizabeth could give Natalia a piece from Kennedy's comeback collection! Blair really loved Tears of Snow! From the moment Kennedy announced it, she had her eyes on it. But she never expected that the jewelry would end up in Elizabeth's hands.

"How did you buy it?" Alexander suddenly asked Elizabeth.

Elizabeth smiled. "It's just Kennedy. I'm familiar with her."

Everyone was stunned by Elizabeth's showing off. Kennedy was a complete mystery online, only known to be female. But Elizabeth actually said she was familiar with her! Wasn't that a blow to everyone?

Chapter 718

Blair still found it unbelievable. "You know Kennedy?"

Elizabeth smirked. "I told you, I'm familiar with her." Of course, that meant she knew him.

"We grew up together," Elizabeth said, lowering her head and tugging at her ear. Blair was indeed impressed by her boast, and her tone was no longer as arrogant as before. They actually grew up together.

A look of confusion flashed across the faces of both Alexander and Natalia. Because they didn't know that Elizabeth grew up with Kennedy, especially Alexander, who had been entangled with Elizabeth for years, yet never knew she was acquainted with Kennedy.

Natalia's mouth twitched, feeling as if she had been punched. Someone like Elizabeth was familiar with Kennedy, yet she had been praising Kennedy incessantly in front of Elizabeth. And Elizabeth had remained silent, so low-key that it made people think she didn't even know who Kennedy was.

"Elizabeth, you're really low-key," Natalia remarked.

Elizabeth looked at Blair and said calmly, "In life, it's better to be low-key. If you're too flashy or arrogant, life will always teach you a lesson."

Wasn't Elizabeth a prime example of that? When she first married Alexander, she naively thought she could win his heart, but in the end, she was left heartbroken, which was a lesson from life.

"So Natalia, can we not take this?" Elizabeth pointed to the six-million-dollar jewelry and asked Natalia seriously.

Natalia swallowed and stared at her in a daze. Elizabeth was going to give her the Tears of Snow, so what did she need with six million dollars? Although this set of jewelry was nice, it was nothing compared to the Tears of Snow!

"Got it." She would listen to Elizabeth. Natalia then smiled and looked at her.

Elizabeth then turned to Blair, her expression indifferent. "I'll let you buy it."

Blair couldn't say a word. In just a few minutes, it felt like a lifetime. And she was at a loss.

Chapter 718

At this moment, Sheldon walked over. He had just gone to order jewelry for Hair and took a phone call. What had happened here? He saw Elizabeth and greeted her politely, "Elizabeth."

Elizabeth nodded and said nothing. Blair naturally felt embarrassed to speak. After all, she was in the wrong. The atmosphere was a bit awkward.

Magnolia looked at Elizabeth and spoke, "Elizabeth, can we talk?" Elizabeth looked at her. She seemed to guess what Magnolia wanted to talk about.

Elizabeth said directly, "Magnolia, if you want to ask me about Kennedy, I'm afraid I can't answer."

"Why?" Magnolia was puzzled. "I just want to communicate with her..."

"Kennedy doesn't need to talk to anyone, you understand." Elizabeth spread her hands, looking helpless. She was a mysterious designer herself; who did she need to talk to? She just wanted to immerse herself in her world and create.

Magnolia wanted to say something more, but Elizabeth had already stopped her. So she found it inconvenient to speak further. Then she sighed; this was the closest she had ever been to Kennedy, yet she couldn't get Kennedy.

Seeing that it was about time, Elizabeth decided to leave. Elizabeth passed on a few words to Magnolia: "Magnolia, pick a suitable set of jewelry for Lila and send it to her studio. Send the bill to her assistant later, thanks." Elizabeth smiled slightly and then went to the side to get her clothes from the staff.

Alexander kept watching her back; he still found it strange. How did she know Kennedy?

Natalia was seeing Elizabeth off when she suddenly heard Elliot ask, "Elizabeth, she's quite capable, isn't she?"

Chapter 719

Natalia looked up and said, "I'm quite surprised too. I always thought she..."

She had always thought that Elizabeth was just a useless pretty woman who only thought about love. But unexpectedly, Elizabeth had hidden depths.

"Do you get along well?" Elliot asked again.

"What makes you think that?" Natalia asked with a helpless smile.

Elliot thought for a moment and said very seriously, "She was very protective of you just now."

Speaking of which, Elizabeth had said she would give Natalia the five-billion-dollar jewelry. Didn't that mean she loves Natalia very much?

Natalia didn't dare to speak, for she didn't know if Elizabeth loved her. She only knew that she didn't have the Percy family's blood in her. But the Percy family treated her very well.

Meanwhile, Blair, after learning that Elizabeth knew Kennedy, was like a deflated balloon, completely enveloped in gloom. She didn't know what to say, and the onlookers around her all lowered their heads.

Someone said, "Weren't you going to do the thing you just promised? Are you still going to do it?"

Everyone exchanged glances and laughed. The atmosphere seemed to improve a bit, but most people had their own thoughts.

When Elizabeth came out, she saw a black Pagani parked at the entrance. She raised an eyebrow at the license plate; she didn't need to look inside to know it was Alexander.

"Mr. Tudor," Elizabeth said, standing by the car as the door automatically opened. "What's up?"

Alexander appearing here must mean he was waiting for her, and she didn't bother to beat around the bush with him.

"Get in the car," Alexander said.

"I have things to do at the research institute," Elizabeth said.

Alexander was silent for a moment, then said, “Just get in first.”

“No,” Elizabeth shook her head and took two steps back.

Alexander looked at her, his eyes complicated. She didn’t even want to get in his car.

Alexander sighed and didn’t force her, instead saying, “Don’t forget our agreement.”

Chapter 719

Elizabeth smiled. “That’s just Mr. Tudor’s one-sided agreement. I haven’t decided whether to go or not.” Until she decided to go, it was all his one-sided agreement.

Alexander then chuckled lightly, tapping the steering wheel casually. “Winter, it’s really cold.”

Elizabeth was silent. She could hear the sarcasm in his words.

“If you’re afraid of the cold, don’t wait for me. You might catch a cold, Mr. Tudor.” Then she walked away.

Alexander watched her departing figure, feeling both amused and helpless. Elizabeth had come in her purple Pagani today, which looked really cool. And she was a very skilled driver.

As Alexander watched her car leave, his phone rang. Nolan called. “Mr. Tudor, there’s an issue at the company. Please return quickly.”

Alexander replied, “Alright. Cancel all the meetings tonight; I have plans.”

Nolan continued, “Mr. Tudor, the company resumed normal operations this afternoon. There’s a lot of work to handle. Are your plans tonight very important? We have a video conference with our international partners to reassure them. Should we cancel it?”

Alexander looked up, his tone calm. “I’m going to see Elizabeth.”

Nolan froze. Although it wasn’t the best time for Alexander to see Elizabeth, he believed Alexander’s considerations.

“Got it.” Nolan didn’t say anything more and hung up.

Alexander’s eyes were deep. Work was important, but right now, Elizabeth was more important.

Chapter 720

Elizabeth quickly immersed herself in the extraction of Serenity Leaf upon returning to the research institute. The extraction was very time-consuming and required constant supervision. Elizabeth’s eyes grew increasingly strained as she watched the various data appearing on the instruments. Serenity Leaf was sure to provide some important essence, but she hoped it could also yield some unexpected surprises. If it could help with SH2N, that would be even better.

Elizabeth sighed and rubbed her temples. Just then, her phone suddenly rang. She looked up and grabbed her charging phone. The phone showed messages from the institute’s group chat. There were hundreds of messages, and someone had just mentioned her, which is why she received the notification.

Elizabeth discovered that not only was she mentioned in the group chat, but she had also made it to the trending topics on Instagram. The trending topic was none other than her mentioning Kennedy at the exhibition that day. Elizabeth fell silent. Sure enough, Kennedy’s reputation was so great that simply mentioning knowing her could make it to the trending list. The trending content was quite exaggerated.

Elizabeth smirked. Have you ever seen such an emotional AI designer? Just as she was considering this, someone in the comments asked the same question: “[Have you ever seen an AI that can design like this?]” Other users quickly replied. User B replied to User A: “Don’t forget, if it’s an AI, it’s still being controlled by a human. If a human is controlling it, isn’t it normal for the designs to have emotions?” This reply received a lot of approval, with the number of likes continuously increasing.

Elizabeth thought there was some truth to it, but Kennedy was not an AI. She directly replied with her main account: “[Kennedy is not an AI.]” Soon, people noticed her comment. Immediately, news of Elizabeth personally debunking rumors about Kennedy started to appear.

Felix then promptly sent Elizabeth: “[It’s fine. Let them say whatever they want. Why did you get involved?]” Felix: “[Don’t give them more to discuss. If someone really digs into you, you'll be in trouble.]" Elizabeth: "[I'm not afraid of that.]" Felix: "[You're not afraid? Boss, get real. If you're discovered, it will trigger a chain reaction!]"

If the identities of Dr. Emily, racer M, and designer Kennedy were all exposed, would Elizabeth still be able to extricate herself? Elizabeth thought about it carefully and realized he had a point. But then again... Elizabeth: "[Then what am I paying you all for? What's Base M for? If she could be easily exposed, what were they for?]" Felix: "[I'm just worried, okay?]"

Elizabeth, dissatisfied, decisively closed Felix's chat window. She opened the institute's messages and scrolled to the top. Someone had seen the Instagram news and wanted to ask her but was too shy, so they asked in the group chat: "[Elizabeth knows Kennedy, is that true?]" Elizabeth pouted, and soon someone replied that it was true. And the one who replied was none other than Blair. Blair: "[Yes, Elizabeth is very capable. She even knows Kennedy. She never mentioned it, and look at how excited we all were about Kennedy's comeback work. She must be very happy.]"

Elizabeth pouted; Blair's words were really sarcastic. She then scrolled to the bottom, where a group of people were still demanding confirmation. They were very curious about whether... Elizabeth: "[Yes, I know her.]" The group chat quickly became excited, for Elizabeth really did know Kennedy!
