

Warning 851

Chapter 851 Misunderstand George

George's POV:

Helen's call surprised me more than anything, because I thought that she would never want to talk to me after what happened. Yesterday, she had screamed hysterically outside the kindergarten when she heard that I was going to fight for the custody of my children, and that had left me feeling heartbroken and helpless.

I had thought it through, and Kendal was right. If I did not take the initiative to do something, then she would certainly take my kids away from me. I could not do anything back then because I did not know of my kids' existence, but now, I wanted to do something about it.

Taking a deep breath, I answered, "What's up?"

I heard her loud roar coming from the other end as soon as I picked up the phone. "George, you monster! How dare you threaten me with my friends and loved ones?"

Confused, I asked her, "What happened? What are you even talking about?"

Chapter 852 I Was Only Attracted To You

Helen's POV:

I did not want to go in at first, but then my body almost dragged me inside. George followed me inside and closed the door.

I felt a little regretful when I saw the closed door. There was a strange and awkward feeling between me and George, and even though he was just standing still, my heart raced uncontrollably.

I used to have such feelings when we were together. We would be serious when we were outside, but the moment we were alone, things would suddenly become very romantic and sensual.

I despised myself for being attracted to him. My heart was racing even though we had been divorced for years, and he was fighting with me for custodial rights of my kids.

Chapter 853 Return The Buttons

Helen's POV:

Only after I heard George say that, I remembered why I came to see him. "I hope you make Zhester Technology withdraw the charge against Warren."

Warren was already involved in the development of the fraudulent website, and if Zhester Technology also sued him, then his life would be ruined, which made Sarah anxious enough to ask me to plead with George.

It had been the first time that I yielded to him ever since we met again. I was really nervous and afraid that he would refuse because of our past grudge.

However, George was being very nice today and he agreed almost immediately. "Okay, I will find out the truth, and if Warren did not do it, then I will help him prove his innocence."

I felt relieved after hearing his promise. He had been scrupulous in his work, and was always able to keep his work and personal life apart. I was worried that he would not agree, but thankfully, I was wrong.

"Anything else?" he asked.

Chapter 854 Supervise George's Work

Helen's POV:

I shot George a sharp glare to warn him not to talk nonsense in front of Ruben and his family. They knew that I was in a relationship with Platt. If they suspected that I was somehow involved with George, they would begin to question my integrity. I wondered if George would only be happy when he made me look like a slut in the eyes of others. I was grief-stricken and angry. God knows how I managed to hold back my tears.

But George ignored my warning and opened the car door. He asked the Blakes to get in. Then he opened the door of the front passenger seat and looked at me.

I knew that getting angry with him at this critical time would only land me in trouble so I suppressed my anger and sat in the car.

As soon as we reached Zhester Technology, George summoned the members of the legal and the R&D departments to attend a meeting to discuss Warren's case.

Chapter 855 The Ultimate Goal Is You

Helen's POV:

As soon as the video connected, I saw two excited children scramble forward to get closer to the camera. They spoke at the same time, "Mom! We miss you! When will you be home?"

Nothing gave me more joy than to see the smiles on the faces of my two precious, innocent little ones! I smiled and replied, "I'll only be here for a few more days, and then I will come back home. Have you two been good children?" Have you listened to Aunty Lettie?"

The two children answered in unison, "Yes!"

"They are used to the fact that their mother has to constantly go off on business trips, so they don't keep looking for you. These two have been exceptionally good, eating and sleeping on time," Lettie said.

Chapter 856 A Lawyer's Notice From George

Helen's POV:

I felt like the woman at the door looked familiar. A moment later, I realized that she was Josie Burke, the one who had been on a blind date with George before. George's mother had felt that she would be the perfect daughter-in-law for their family, and I thought that he would marry her after our divorce. Later, I had gotten so busy with my life that I almost forgot about theirs.

Josie was surprised as she stood still and stared at me and George. "You... Remarried? Or did you two never divorce?"

Realizing how intimate George and I were at that moment, I immediately stood up and pushed him away.

George remained calm as he straightened up his wrinkled suit and frowned a little, revealing a hint of displeasure in his eyes as he asked, "Why are you here?"

Chapter 857 No Hope For Winning

Helen's POV:

I was busy at work at the law firm when I received the lawyer's notice. Clare must have noticed that there was something wrong with me for she came up to me and inquired if all was well. Then she spotted the notice.

She took a deep breath and then asked in sheer disbelief, "Helen, are Luis and Polly really George's children? Were you really in a relationship with George before?"

I nodded absentmindedly and then I regained my composure and tried to think straight. I stuffed the lawyer's notice into the drawer with my trembling fingers, as I tried to control my anger. I was still in nasty shock. I clenched my fingers into tight fists in order to keep calm and closed my eyes tight to restrict any tears.

I told myself in my heart that I needed to exhale poisonous thoughts of hopelessness. I had to harness the strength to deal with everything.

Chapter 858 The Hearing Began

Helen's POV:

The hearing began the next day. I decided to heed Lucy's and Cece's advice. No matter what the final outcome was, I just needed to try my best to fight for my rights.

I was so fortunate to have the love and support of so many people who accompanied me to the court. Lucy, Cece, Ruben and Clare had all come. Platt and his mother also came to cheer me up. I felt so blessed to have such good people in my life. They helped boost my confidence.

I had expected George to come with an army of lawyers. But he only came with Kendal and a lawyer I had never seen before. Compared with my cohort of supporters, he looked lonely.

I did not engage a lawyer to represent me. I chose to defend myself. I didn't expect George to also defend himself. As for the young lawyer who came with him, his role was purely supervisory.

This was George's first time appearing in this capacity. I must admit, he presented his case in an orderly and clear manner. Adorned in a formal suit, he looked very professional and he commanded the attention of everyone present.

The first document George submitted as Exhibit A was a paternity test report, which proved that he was the biological father of Luis and Polly.

Chapter 859 He Had A Vasectomy

Helen's POV:

I was so anxious that I broke into a cold sweat. I kept thinking about that matter, and I also analyzed the current situation. My doubts about George were overturned with the evidence he provided, so if I could not find a way to fight back, then I would have no chance of winning the case.

While I was lost in thought, George's lawyer submitted another document and said, "My litigant has gone through a vasectomy surgery, and here's the medical records to prove it. He has promised that he won't ever have other kids. Luis and Polly will be his only children."

Stunned, I stared at George in disbelief. Had he gone crazy? He was willing to go to such lengths just to fight with me for custody!

My mind went blank and I did not refute him for a long time. I would have had a chance to win the case, but after the medical records were submitted, the situation reversed. I lost to him.

Everyone looked at George in disbelief, seemingly frightened by his approach.

I felt a chill in my bones and trembled. My body felt stiff and cold. I turned to look at Platt and saw him smiling at me with a gentle and supportive look in his eyes.

He mouthed, "Don't worry. I am here with you."

Chapter 860 Erin Came To Burlington

Erin's POV:

After hearing that George had gone to Burlington and filed a lawsuit for the custody of his children, I was so shocked that I almost fainted.

Fighting for custody?

When did he even have children? And they were twins?

However, the thing that shocked me the most was that Helen was their mother!

My mind went blank, and anger was the only thing that my heart knew. I heaved heavily in an attempt to slightly ease my rage.

I was certain that Helen did it for an ulterior motive.

She must have given birth to George's kids to force him into re-marrying her. I was sure that she was so dead set on becoming a member of the Affleck family again.

It was no surprise that she had agreed to my order to divorce George back then. It turned out that she had a backup plan.