Chapter 881 The Annual Party Of Zhester Technology

Anna's POV:

The annual grand party held by Zhester Technology was nearing, so they had decided to send an invitation to our law firm. Upon hearing about the invitation, I talked to Lawson and informed him that I was close to reaching an agreement with Marvin, the manager of Zhester Technology's general sales agent; and that if things went smoothly, we could sign the contract after Christmas. Lawson was happy to hear this. Because of my good performance, he praised me and asked me to come to the party with him.

I, too, was elated. Although Zhester Technology had its very own excellent legal team, it also had cooperation with many law firms. Of course, not all law firms could receive an invitation to the said event. Only the important ones got the invitations. If I went there, I would not only meet many renowned lawyers but also talk to elites from the business world. If I was lucky, I could also make them my clients.

Chapter 882 I Don't Want To Marry George

Helen's POV:

George only returned home around midnight. I was going to the kitchen to get some water when I heard him come in. The children had gone to bed early and were fast asleep. But my thirst had woken me up from my bed. As I was about to pour myself a glass of water, I heard his footsteps getting closer.

He walked in and hugged me tightly from behind. His breath reeked of alcohol. "Give me a glass of water too."

"You have hands. Pour it yourself." I ignored him and poured myself a glass of water.

I took a big gulp of water, but before I could swallow it, George leaned over and kissed me, virtually sucking all the water out of my mouth. I was disgusted but he still would not let go of me. He bit and licked my lips like a vampire.

I tried to push him away but he was too strong for me. He held me tightly in an overpowering embrace. He kissed me passionately, leaving me no room to resist.

Chapter 883 Live In The Affleck Family's Mansion

Helen's POV:

Christmas was right around the corner, and Erin flew all the way from Washington to see me again.

I was at work at that time, and when I heard that someone was looking for me, I thought that it must be a client. I walked downstairs immediately and was surprised to find Erin, waiting for me, dressed in designer clothes as always. She was looking dignified and serious. She was sitting in the lounge with the Affleck family's maid by her side.

Although I was indeed a bit stunned to see them, I escorted them into an empty conference room.

Erin did not waste a single moment and directly jumped to the point. "I want George to bring the kids to Washington for Christmas. I have invited many guests to and I want to introduce the children to them. I would never treat them badly, because they're the Affleck family's blood, after all. I hope you understand what I am trying to say here. Don't worry. I will send them back after Christmas."

Chapter 884 The Talent Of The Children

Helen's POV:

On the day of Christmas, Erin sent the chef back home because she wanted to cook for the family. I went to the kitchen to help her prepare the fruit pudding for dessert, which was also the only thing I could cook. In the past, George had always taken care of the cooking at home, and had never once asked me to help him. And before we started dating, I had always ordered takeout. After I had kids, I tried to learn how to cook because I wanted them to eat healthy home-made food, but the food I made was barely edible. Even my kids hated the food I made for them and had often ate at the kindergarten than to eat my cooking at home.

After the pudding was ready, Erin tasted it and praised, "It's pretty good."

During the past few days, I had gradually started to understand the kind of person she was, and our relationship was slowly improving. When I heard her praise, I smiled in reply.

Chapter 885 Be Happy

Helen's POV:

After Christmas, George and I took the children to Philly. Erin and I were getting along better now and she did not have much prejudice against me. Although it was not like we had become best friends now, we were able to co-exist. Morton and Erin saw us off at the airport before we boarded the flight to Philly. They hugged and kissed the children with love and reluctance in their eyes.

Once we landed in Philly, we took a cab to the hotel and unpacked our luggage. We then headed to the cemetery where my mother rested. My kids were very happy to hear that they were visiting their maternal grandmother and even asked me what she liked because they wanted to prepare gifts for her.

Chapter 886 Wish You Happiness

Helen's POV:

I glared at George and hissed, "How can you tell Kendal about this? Can't you see that you've only made the situation worse now?"

"Helen, I know that Cece's your friend and that you want her to be happy, but Kendal is my friend, and I don't want him to have any regrets either. He has always loved her, and I believe he has the right to know about her marriage, regardless of whether they get together in the end or not."

I was completely dissatisfied with him and said, "But did you ever stop to consider what might happen if he just went to look for her in Philly without her knowledge? Wouldn't that disturb her peace? And even if he does manage to go to her, what can he do now? Will he try to ruin her relationship and get her back? Cece had given up everything just to confess her feelings for Kendal before, but he had refused her. And now, she has finally moved on and found a man who loves her dearly. Why would you mention it to Kendal, giving him the chance to ruin her life again? If he really cared about her and truly love her, then would he have waited until the very last moment?"

As anger rose in my heart like the sea on a stormy night, my voice got louder and louder unconsciously. I was even starting to hate George. He and Kendal were both born in wealthy families, so naturally they were too arrogant to consider other people's feelings.

Chapter 887 I Don't Need Help

Helen's POV:

I went back to work on Monday. Kendal had suddenly sent me a message inviting me out to lunch, and I accepted happily. He was a potential client, so I treated him with the appropriate politeness. At the restaurant, I handed him the menu and said, "Order whatever you like. My treat."

He seemed stunned for a moment. "What is it?" he asked. "Why are you suddenly being so nice to me? Did I do something wrong? If I did, then just tell me directly. I can't take this torture. I'll go crazy from thinking about it."

I smiled at his discomposure and assured him, "You're overthinking it. We're friends. Why wouldn't I be nice? Let's go out again next time and keep in touch."

Chapter 888 Being Slandered For Stealing Her Client

Soren's POV:

The moment I saw Marvin come with a lawyer I didn't recognize, I knew that I was in for a hard time. He had the audacity to come with a lawyer other than Helen! George would not take this lying down. Although George did not say it directly, I could read his mind. Previously he had never really paid much attention to our sales agent for he was too busy and someone else would do it for him, but now he had. He had even specifically chosen the law firm in which Helen worked, so obviously his objective was clear.

I was livid that Marvin did not catch my drift and chose to bring another lawyer from Landen Law Firm. If only he knew how this would impact on me!

The crux of the matter was that Anna was Helen's competitor. Now it was virtually impossible for me to explain the whole thing clearly.

Chapter 889 Helen's Inferiority

Helen's POV:

I was trying to concentrate on my work because I had just gotten a lot of clients through Kendal when Anna's question puzzled me. Kendal had introduced me to several companies that had a close relationship with Spacetime Finance. He also teased me for only being nice to him when I needed his help and that made me a perfect match for George.

I was looking into those companies when Anna suddenly questioned me. I looked up at her and asked, "What are you even talking about? When did I steal your client?"

"Why don't you just admit it? Kendal is my client, so why did you meet him behind my back? I'll tell you, it is because you were trying to steal my client!"

Anna glared at me so ferociously that I almost felt like I could die just from how venomous her gaze was.

Only then did I understand that the client she was referring to was Kendal.

Chapter 890 The Children Go Back To Their Own Rooms

Helen's POV:

I burst into laughter after hearing George's joke. I was nestling my head into his chest when Polly suddenly came into the kitchen and shouted, "Daddy, Mommy, have you two hugged each other enough? I am very hungry!"

She touched her tummy with a frown, and a moment later, Luis also came and said with a nod, "I am hungry too!"

Feeling shy, I slipped out of George's arms and asked the kids to have dinner.

They immediately went to wash their hands and sat down at the table.

Seeing them being so sweet, I was satisfied with my life. We were all together at last, leaving the bad days in the past. I should not overthink about the past anymore. Instead, I should focus on our future and set an example for the kids.

I had two lovely kids and George's unconditional love. Why should I feel inferior?
