Chapter 134

Chapter 134

Sally was standing in front of the French window in the room. She was talking to someone when her voice suddenly went up a pitch. "What did you say? She's not dead?"

There was a rough male voice on the other end of the phone. "We did it, but she didn't die and was saved. We couldn't help it as well. When will you pay us the amount you promised?" 1

Sally grasped her phone tightly, her hands shaking with anger. She even burst out swearing, "She's not dead so just what exactly have you done for me? You still have the nerve to ask me for money?"

"We kidnapped her just as you said and slit her wrists. Who would have thought that someone would save her so soon? Besides, I also sacrificed two of my men. That's two lives, so you can't give us any less!" The man was also very tough. "What does it matter to me if any of you die? You can't even execute this well, so they deserve this even if they died! I'm telling you, I will only give you this amount. Nothing else!" Sally scolded the man fiercely.

She just wanted Sharon's life. It was such a simple thing and yet these people could not do it, so how could they have the cheek to ask her for payment? He said Sharon was rescued? Who could be so quick? Was it Simon? Except for him, she could not think of anyone else who could be so fast. If that was the case, had this alerted Simon?

If so, then this would be tricky.

Before she had time to panic, the other party's curses came from the phone, "You b*tch, are you going to fall out with us and deny any involvement in this? Are you not afraid that we will expose you and let the woman know that you hired someone to kill her?"

To be frank, Sally was not afraid of Sharon finding out. The only person she was afraid of was Simon, but... If she dared to do such a thing, naturally she would not have left any information that could be used against her. She smiled coldly. "Okay, go and tell her. Don't even think about getting a penny from me!" She hung up the phone violently. Damn it, what a bunch of trash! How dare they threaten her?! Sharon was recuperating in the hospital for three days and was almost recovered. She asked to be discharged from the hospital because she wanted to go home with her son.

In the past three days, Simon would come to see her after he got off work. She did not let him spend the night in the hospital and asked him to go home to be with her son.

She called the little guy too. He believed that she was really on a business trip. Over the phone, he kept clamoring for her to go back soon and said he missed her.

She also missed her son very much.

As such, even if she was not really well, she needed to be discharged from the hospital. Simon had started to get busy again in the past two days. Instead of coming himself, he sent someone to pick her up after she got discharged. Sharon returned to the Zachary household, and the little guy ran over to give her a big hug. “Mommy, you’re finally back! I miss you so much!” He gave her a kiss on her face. Sharon also hugged him and kissed his face just like he did to her. “I miss you too.” She had not fully recovered, so she did not have much energy when she said that.

Sebastian noticed something strange. He looked at her without blinking with his eyes that looked just like Simon’s. “Mommy, are you tired? Why do you sound so exhausted when you talk?”

Sharon’s eyes twinkled. Was the little guy so observant?

She pretended to be tired and leaned on his little shoulder. “Yeah, I’m exhausted. I’m so exhausted after this business trip.”

“Then I’ll give you a massage.” The little guy immediately stretched out his hands to help her massage her shoulders. Sharon was very ticklish and quickly grabbed his little hands. “I’ll be fine after I rest.”

She and her son went back to the room. Douglas was resting in the room, so she did not disturb him. It was still office hours, so Simon and his eldest sister were not home.

When her son heard that she was coming back, he had asked for a leave of absence so that he could wait for her at home.

At night, she could finally have a good meal with her son again. There were only three of them at the dining table—Sharon, her son, and Douglas. Simon had to work overtime tonight and Penelope also said she would be busy, so they did not come back.

Douglas was still cold and indifferent toward her. If it were not for the child, he would never have let her live in his house.

Sharon respected him, but she did not know how to please others. Maybe it was because they had parted for a while, so the little guy was very clingy. After eating, he pestered her to build a model aircraft with her.

Sharon was a little overwhelmed. She lay on the sofa in the room and did not want to move. "I'm tired, so I'll just watch you play." Sebastian pressed his lips together. "If Dad were here, he would build it with me." The little guy's eyes lit up. "Mommy, can you call Dad to ask him when he'll be back?"

Upon seeing the little guy's pleading eyes, Sharon naturally could not bear to refuse him. It seemed that when she was away from home, Simon and her son had bonded pretty well. Simon later bought her a new phone and applied for a new SIM card as well. Her lost phone could not be retrieved anymore. "Okay, I'll call him." It was so late and he was still not back yet. She was inexplicably worried about him. Sharon's new phone only had Simon's number on it, and she dialed it. His phone rang for a long time but no one was answering. She pondered secretly, 'Is he really so busy? Am I disturbing him?' Just when she thought he would not be able to answer the phone, there were some sounds on the other end and the call was connected.

She was about to speak when a soft female voice sounded from the other side. "Hello." Sharon was startled. Why was a woman picking up his phone?

Sharon was startled when she heard the female voice on the other end of the phone. 'Isn't this Simon's number?'

She looked at the phone and it was indeed his number. She had not made a mistake. If that was the case, who was this woman?

She remembered Franky telling her when he helped her set up the new phone that President Zachary would never let anyone touch his phone, especially a woman. What he was saying was that it was an honor for her to be the first person.

If it were someone else, she would not have believed those words. However, when Franky said it, she could not help but believe him.

That was why she was wondering whether she had made a mistake after she heard a woman's voice.

Perhaps she had been silent for too long, so the other party asked again, "Hello, who are you?"

This time, Sharon could hear that it was Rebecca's voice.

After Douglas gave the order, Rebecca had become one of Simon's secretaries.

If Simon was working overtime in the company, it would not be surprising that Rebecca was the one who answered his call. He might be busy with something.

Sharon did not realize that she was thinking like that to comfort herself. She silently cursed Franky for lying to her and making her think that Simon's phone was not accessible to anyone.

After Rebecca answered the phone, Sharon suddenly lost interest in looking for him. However, her son was still waiting, so she would just help the little guy ask him when he would be back. "This is Sharon. Where's President Zachary?"

Rebecca could not help feeling surprised when she heard this. Sharon?

However, why did Sharon's number show up as an unknown number on Simon's phone? He had not saved Sharon's number at all?

She suddenly recalled that Fiona had told her Simon and Sharon were secretly married. However, he only married Sharon for the sake of the child. He did not take Sharon as his wife seriously.

It also meant he did not have Sharon in his heart. When she thought about this, she understood why Sharon's number was not saved. Rebecca curled her red lips, and her voice suddenly became very charming as well as a little shy. "Oh, Designer Jeans! President... Simon is taking a shower. Why don't you call back later?" "Shower? He... Isn't he working overtime?"

Chapter 136

"We're in the hotel. If you have any urgent matters, I'll have him call you back when he comes out." Rebecca's tone was not one a secretary should be speaking in.

Sharon's expression changed slightly, but she said, "No need. It's not something urgent. You don't have to tell him. That's all." She hurriedly hung up, not wanting to hear Rebecca Lawrence's voice utter another word.

They were at a hotel? Simon was still showering?

Was he clocking overtime in a place like that?

Sharon could not control her own thoughts. Why was it that the moment she thought of these things, her chest made it seem that it was hard for her to breathe? Also, what was with that sour feeling?

Why did she care so much about whether he was in a hotel room with Rebecca?

If he really was spending time with Rebecca in such a place, it was a good thing for Sharon. In the agreement they signed, whoever brought up divorce first was in breach of the agreement, so the child would go to the other party instead. Rebecca was the wife candidate the Zachary family had determined for him. Absolutely nobody would object to them being together. In that case, did that mean she could leave with her son very soon?

To her, this was something worth being happy about, but strangely, she could not feel happy. In the hotel room, Simon was indeed showering. He had a social activity tonight, and there was a woman at his table who daringly kept pouring him wine. When he pushed the woman away, the wine splashed all over him.

He could only go back to the room to shower and change. As for Rebecca, she had insisted on accompanying him to socialize. He could not stop her either, and she drank a lot of wine for him tonight.

After Rebecca answered Sharon's call, she hesitated over whether to delete the call record. Since Simon did not even save Sharon's number, deleting the record would probably not be a problem.

Rebecca moved her finger, just about to delete the call record when a clear, icy male voice sounded behind her. "Who permitted you to touch my phone?"

Rebecca jumped, her entire body bouncing, causing her to nearly drop the phone. She saw Simon glaring coldly at her the moment she turned around.

"I... I came in to see if you were done showering yet. President Zahn and the others are waiting to apologize to you. When I came in, your phone kept ringing. I saw that it was an unsaved number, so I took the initiative to answer it for you, but... the caller hung up without saying anything." As she was saying this, Rebecca felt very guilty. The man's gaze was too frightening. She did not dare to meet his gaze at all.

"Give me the phone." Simon's tone was frigid.

Rebecca hastily passed him the phone. Only then did she notice that the man who had just come out of the bathroom only had a towel wrapped around the lower half of his body.

She stared at him for a while, her heartbeat speeding up involuntarily.

On the other hand, Simon did not give her another glance. Once he retrieved his phone, he looked at the previous incoming call. When he saw the number, he knew it was Sharon.

It was Franky who had helped Sharon set up her new phone. Simon did not have the time to save her number, but he remembered it and knew it was her at a glance. “She didn’t say anything?” Simon looked at Rebecca, his eyebrows knitted together.
