

Watch Out, CEO Daddy! Novel

Chapter 165

She wanted to look for Simon. He should be able to find out who was the anonymous user that posted the photos and article.

When the door of the elevator was about to close, an arm suddenly stretched out to stop the door. She saw Howard appear at the next second.

When their eyes met, her face became cold.

Meanwhile, Howard looked frivolous. He walked into the elevator and pressed the close button.

The door closed, and there were only the two of them in the elevator. He glanced at the floor number she had pressed and sneered, "What's wrong? You're running to my uncle to help you solve the problem?" He turned his head to look at her after saying this before continuing with mockery, "Why didn't you just tell those people you're the president's wife? That way, you can tell them that you kissed him because you wanted to show your affection in public, not because you wanted to seduce him."

Howard had left the celebration early last night. He did not expect something so exciting to happen after he left. If he had known earlier, he would not have left so soon.

Had it not been for the photos posted on the corporation's internet forum, he would not believe that Sharon was so shameless now!

As Sharon listened to him mock and ridicule her, she felt anger boiling in her heart. She stared at him coldly. "Howard, you posted those photos, right?"

Suddenly, Howard laughed strangely as if he had heard a joke. "You were the one who did something so shameless, how could you blame it on me?"

He narrowed his eyes and took a step closer to her, his eyes full of coldness. "Sharon, have you always been so licentious and depraved?" Otherwise, where did those photos from five years ago come from?

Sharon was so mad her body was shaking. Finally, she could not take it anymore and wanted to lift her hand to slap him. However, he grasped her wrist.

"You want to slap me again? Are you flying into a rage out of humiliation because I'm right?"

"Did you post those photos from five years ago?" Sharon could not retract her hand, so she glared at him and questioned.

Howard snorted. "You kissed my uncle in front of everyone, and so many eyes under the stage saw you. You've become an eyesore for those crazy women, so it won't be surprising if they dug out your past."

Sharon stared at him coldly. According to what he said, he was not the one who posted those photos and accused those women who admired Simon instead. Were they jealous of her so they dug out her past and posted those photos as well as that article?

However, she did not believe him. She still wanted to question him but the elevator had already reached Simon's floor. He pushed her hand away and turned around to walk out.

After he walked out, he suddenly remembered something. He stopped in his tracks and turned his head to look straight at her. Chuckling coldly, he said, "If you had listened to me like a good girl and gotten out of this place after divorcing my uncle, there wouldn't be so many issues now, would there?"

After he said that, the door of the elevator closed slowly, but not before she saw the cold hatred and resentment in his eyes.

Sharon was still clenching her fists. Was he the one who posted those photos?

Only those working in the corporation could post something on the corporation's internet forum. Aside from Howard, she could not think of anyone else who would have those photos from five years ago.

Of course, she could not rule out what he had just said. Someone might be holding grudges against her and had deliberately dug out her past so they could expose her.

Sharon came to the president's office and was told that Simon was not around. He was out discussing an important project and it was uncertain when he would come back.

She could not sit here and wait for him to come back. If he was out discussing a project, it would not be appropriate for her to call or text him as she might disturb him.

She figured that Simon might have seen the article on the forum by now. After all, it was the corporation's internet forum, so he had to investigate this.

Perhaps she could just ask him for the result after that. 1

The secretary told her that the manager of the designing department wanted to see her and she needed to go to her office immediately.