Chapter 19 The Phone Call From the Head Office

Melissa thought Harvey had some ideas to help her. She didn't expect that his solution was to beat Owen.

"Harvey! You dare to beat me. Brice, ask Melissa to repay the loan right now! I'll see her company go bankrupt." Owen was furious and scolded.

"Yes, Mr. Wood."

Brice contacted the bank to demand the loan without hesitation.

Melissa frowned and said, "Harvey, you make this more trouble. Now the bank has asked us to repay the loan immediately. What should we do?"

"Don't worry, Melissa. I'll make a phone call." Harvey looked calm.

He took out his phone and walked out.

Soon, he went to a corner and called a blocked number.

A few seconds later, someone answered.

A respectful voice sounded on the phone. "Boss, what do you want me to do?"

Harvey gave the order indifferently, "The manager of Oakus Bank here makes things difficult for my wife. You ask the head office to handle it."

Lucas was surprised. "Does Oakus Bank offend you?"

Harvey pursed his lips and sneered, "No, it's Owen. He covets my woman and plays tricks. I'll teach the Wood family a lesson."

Lucas said seriously, "How dares him to covet your woman! Boss, I'll immediately teach the Wood family a lesson."

"OK, I trust you."

Harvey smiled faintly. Lucas was famous for his ruthlessness.

Lucas could use the Wyvern Sect's capital to ruin a country's financial system. Even the most famous financier would be afraid.

If Lucas wanted to deal with the Wood family, it was a piece of cake. And this was what Harvey wanted.

He wanted the Wood family to know the consequences of bullying his woman.

Not long after, Harvey came back to the office.

In the office, Melissa was trying to persuade Brice. But Brice was Owen's people. He didn't care about Melissa.

Brice mocked, "Ms. Patel, Harvey is just an ordinary delivery guy. He can't be compared with Mr. Wood at all. I can't understand why you don't choose to divorce him."

Melissa frowned and shook her head. "Mr. Hodge, this is my privacy. I hope that you don't meddle this into the business."

Owen laughed arrogantly, "Melissa, it's useless. No matter who appears, he can't save your company."

At the same time, Harvey came in. He said in a playful tone, "Owen, you laugh so loudly. Aren't you afraid that you'll regret what you just said?"

Seeing Harvey coming in, Owen put on a disdainful expression. "Regret? Heh! Harvey, you're a loser. Who did call just now? As a delivery guy, who do you know?"

Brice added, "Mr. Wood, he is just a pumped-up side of beef. He has nothing but pretends to be a big shot. Shame on you."

"Mr. Hodge, I have a piece of bad news and a piece of good news for you. Which one do you want to know first?" Harvey laughed mischievously and said meaningfully.

"News for me? I don't want bad news. How about you say the good news?" Brice frowned slightly and asked alertly.

"The good news is that you'll have a new job."

"What about the bad news?"

"The bad news is that you'll be fired by your bank," Harvey said in a playful tone.

"Fired? Harvey, who do you think you are? You make a phone call and I'll be fired. Do you think you're the boss of Oakus Bank?" Brice thought Harvey was bluffing. Thus, Brice laughed loudly.

Suddenly, the secretary came in.

A middle-aged man was behind her. "Ms. Patel, this is Mr. Crane, the head of the branch of Oakus Bank."

"Mr. Crane? Why are you here?" Melissa was surprised. She never expected Victor

Crane to come here,

Victor explained nervously, "Ms. Patel, I'm here to apologize to you."

Just now, the head office called Victor and said that Brice was making it difficult for Melissa.

When Victor got the phone call, he was scared.

Although he didn't know about Melissa's background, the call from the head office showed that Melissa was not simple.

"You... You're apologizing?"

Melissa was stunned and didn't know what was happening.

"Mr. Crane, are you serious? Melissa just owns a small company. Why did you apologize to her?"

Brice asked with confusion.

As soon as Brice finished speaking, Victor was furious and scolded him, "You're one to talk. If it isn't for you to make things difficult for Ms. Patel, why will I be scolded by the head office? Brice, you're fired! Go to settle the wage today and get out of our bank."

"What? The head office..."

In an instant, Brice's face turned ashen. It was much more serious than he expected.

Even if some branches went bankrupt, the head office would not scold the employees.

Brice just asked Melissa to repay the loan early. Why would the head office notice this?

What was Melissa's background?

Brice regretted it.

He knew that things had become serious. He immediately knelt in front of Melissa and begged for mercy. "Ms. Patel, I'm sorry. I fail to recognize a great person. Please... Can you let me go? Can you contact the head office and ask them not to fire me? I have to raise my family. I can't lose my job."

Melissa shrugged and said, "Mr. Hodge, I also want to help you. But I don't know anyone from your head office."

"You... You don't know them? Then who contact the head office?"

Brice was stunned. The next second, he couldn't help but look at Harvey.

Brice's eyes opened wide and looked at Harvey in surprise. "M... Mr. Turner, did you contact them?"
