When EX-wife's Identities are Revealed by Natalie Wilson Chapter 10

Chapter 10 Understand

After hearing what Lillian said, everyone was so depressed that they almost vomited blood. What was she talking about?

What did she mean?

Did she think the document was as easy to understand as the arithmetic so that she could understand it at a glance?

Could it be that the headquarters saw that this group was not going bankrupt, so they sent such an ignorant woman here?

A shareholder couldn't bear it, slapping the document on the table. "Ms. Hall, since Ms. Wilson likes that position, you give place to her. And we can continue to discuss it in another place." Others stood up and left after seeing that.

And seeing everyone leaving, Diana picked up the documents and was about to follow them. Lillian was a little surprised. Was it a head-on blow at the first encounter?

They didn't scare her.

Feeling aching lumbus after standing for a long time, Lillian adjusted her sunglasses on the bridge of her nose and said in a cold voice, "Whoever gets out of this door today will be fired!

"And who made this data? Couldn't the person even see such an obvious error?"

Hearing her words, the shareholder in charge of the data turned purple with rage, and said with dissatisfaction, "What is wrong? Ms. Wilson, please don't smite with the tongue."

"Really? Then, open your eyes to look at the third column of the fifth table on the third page of the document. Is it wrong by a percentage?"

The shareholder took out the document immediately and turned to the place Lillian mentioned. He found that the percentage was wrong with a closer look.

Glaring at the shareholder bitterly, Diana turned to look at Lillian. "Finding out the means nothing."

wrong data

"Well, what if I say that the plan you are discussing now will cause irreversible damage to the Regal Group after being implemented?"

Lillian said calmly.

After Lillian finished speaking, Diana retorted immediately, "It is impossible. According to the current situation, it will be the most beneficial plan for the Regal Group.

"Ms. Wilson, I respect you. And you can tell me if you hate me. But it is no need to joke about the future of the Regal Group."

Lillian snorted lightly and ignored Diana,

"As we all know, cultivating artists to debut is always the central development of the Regal Group. However, the group had frequent troubles, causing those more significant shareholders to withdraw. So you don't have enough working capital if you recruit artists now, except if the funds are insufficient, who is willing to come to the Regal Group, with its reputation alone?"

"Do we have the resources for them to develop even if they come?"

“If the company goes bankrupt before the artist has developed, who will be responsible for the multiple times of liquidated damages?”

11:42

Everyone was shocked, feeling that what Lillian said was reasonable.

But if they didn't recruit artists, it was helpless to rely on the artists in the group now.

Maybe seeing the shareholders' doubts, Lillian smiled slightly. “Since we don't recruit artists, why not use this fund to invest in the existing excellent artists?”

Diana didn't know how to retort to what Lillian said, so she was highly embarrassed.

“Do you have any other opinions?” Walking up to Diana leisurely, Lillian looked at Diana before her with disdain.
