

Widow 119

Chapter 119

The look on the salesperson's face froze, and she confirmed, "Only this tie? Then these..." Crystal said, "I'm not the one buying these things. Why should I pay the bill?"

Debbie's face immediately turned livid. "Crystal, what do you mean? You don't want to pay?" Crystal blinked her eyes and said, "This is what I want to buy. I've already bought it. If you have clothes that you like, you can pay for them yourself."

The shop assistant's expression became strange. One of them neatly wrapped up the tie and asked, "Are you paying using the card?"

Crystal took out the card from her bag. When the salesperson saw it, her face immediately changed.

here for four years. It was the first time she had seen this card. She immediately became more respectful to Crystal and said with a smile, took the bag, turned around, and was about to leave. Mia grabbed her so full of themselves when they entered the shop, and it would be a shame if they didn't buy a single piece of was unwilling to let her go. She sat down on the ground and cried, "Everyone, come and have a look! Look at this ungrateful person! She's rich now. She doesn't care about her parents. Now she can't even in dismay. They had never dealt with such a shrew, so they

The old woman worked so hard to raise you. You made money, and you are not even willing to in her 40s or 50s. She looked at Crystal contemptuously and said, "If my daughter grows up like you, I will die of look at the clothes of those two people. I guess this woman doesn't have much money, but she likes to show off, so she came here with her family to put on a show, right? As a Debbie heard that someone was supporting her, she immediately became even more self-righteous. "I've raised you up to this age. Is this how you repay me?! Why am I still alive? I should