

Widow 150

Chapter 150

The next morning, when Crystal woke up, Harold was no longer there. After washing up in a daze, she went downstairs and saw that Bernard had already cleaned up and was waiting for her to have.

breakfast.

"..." Crystal suddenly felt a little embarrassed.

After breakfast, Harold sent Bernard to school. Sure enough, Crystal did not see Mr. Beardsley again. The principal was very resolute. He dismissed Mr. Beardsley without any hesitation. Watching Bernard being taken away by the teacher, Crystal sat back in the car. Harold asked her, "Will you come with me to the company?"

Crystal said, "No, it's so boring."

Harold said, "... Repeat it again?"

Crystal blinked. "I mean, it's not good for me to disturb your work. Well, I'll go to the hospital to see Sister Alissa."

This was the kind of people who had no job and had nothing to do all day.

Harold asked, "Which hospital?"

Crystal said, "First Hospital."

Harold said,

fastened her seat belt. First Hospital was not far from here, and it took them about 17 or 18 minutes to reach there. Crystal opened the door and was about to run, but Harold pulled her back.

to send me, but you didn't want to..." Speaking of this, she curled

mole at the corner

his eyes.

my blessings, okay? I wish you a happy day!" Harold smiled. His smile was way too charming. When he was not cold, he showed an indescribable charm. Crystal was stunned for a moment, but Crystal's face flushed.

the kiss that Harold had planted between her brows had caused her ease her emotions and coughed. "Then... then

"Okay."

out of the car and ran faster than a rabbit, afraid that Harold would see her hospital to visit the patient, and of course, she had to buy something. Crystal not be eaten. Crystal's idea was very