Chapter 601

Crystal blinked her eyes and was sure that it was really Roy. She couldn't help but throw herself at him. The middle-aged man standing behind Roy was about to stop her, but Roy caught her with a smile. He touched her hair and said softly, "You're no longer a child. Why do you still like doing this?" Crystal's eyes sparkled as she said in a low voice, "I'm only nineteen. I'm still a child."

Roy couldn't help laughing. "Yes, you're still a child no matter how old you are."

Crystal remembered that Dan had told her that Roy had returned to the city to treat his illness, but she did not expect him to come to City W.

Although she and Roy had known each other since she was a child, they had a pure relationship. Crystal only knew that his family should be very rich. His family was in a big city, and his parents were businessmen.

"Roy." Crystal whispered, "Your legs..."

Roy lowered his eyes and said lightly, "I'm fine. It's just an inveterate disease."

Roy's words elicited various reactions from the people present.

After all, what had happened between Leilani and Old Madam Grecic that year was a topic of discussion among many people.

Even though everyone knew the truth, speaking about it on this kind of occasion would be like disrespecting the Grecic family. After all, it was not a glorious thing that the mother-in-law forced her daughter-in-law to death.

The corners of Harold's lips curled up as he said, "Jarrod, since Young Master Grecic wants to take a look, you can show him around."

Since Harold had already said that he was "Young Master Grecic", no one in the Grecic family dared to neglect him. Jarrod quickly agreed.

Roy said, "No rush. I'll burn incense for the old lady first."

The middle-aged man, who had been silent for a long time, went forward to light three sticks of incense and handed them to Roy. Roy looked at Old Madam Grecic's portrait quietly for a while, bowed three times, and then went forward to make a bow with hands folded in front. He took the incense and inserted it into the censer.

There was no sound in the mourning hall. After a gust of wind, Roy narrowed his eyes and said with a smile, "Two shorts and one long. It's a big omen."

Angelica's question stunned Danny.

He only remembered Sadie's face recently. How could he remember what Sadie had done in the past? The worst thing she had done was probably running away from the wedding. However, he was in an international meeting at that time and did not show up at all. Hence, Danny did not care whether Sadie did run away from the wedding or not or if the wedding ceremony could be held or not.

For Angelica, Danny's silence was undoubtedly a man's silent defense of self-esteem. She couldn't help but soften her voice. "President Evans, in fact, you don't have to take care of Sadie at all. She was the one who let you down first. Not to mention that you have been paying for her treatment for the past few years, even if you didn't help her, no one would blame you..."

Sadie nodded in agreement.

She felt that Angelica was right, but Angelica never thought that Danny only did all those to protect himself.

Harold ignored the guests in the front hall. He slowly walked through the crowd and into the quiet back hall.

The light in the back hall was not good. It was dark. The light was pale, and the black wooden coffin in the middle looked particularly scary.

Luke had been waiting inside for a long time. When he saw him come in, he handed him a pair of gloves.

Harold put on the pair of medical rubber gloves, and the thin rubber outlined his clear joints, showing absolute power under the light.

“Did it take a lot of effort to exchange the coffin?” Harold asked casually.

Luke smiled bitterly and said, “I didn’t think so over the years. It wasn’t until Mr. Grecic left Silent Temple that I knew that the whole Grecic family was his spy.”

Although Old Madam Grecic was not in good health, she didn’t seem as if she would pass away soon.

She could not die naturally. Of course, she could only die unnaturally.

Luke muttered,

She used her own life to make a deal with someone else.”

Harold smiled. “Guess what kind of deal it is

Luke blurted out, “Cyril!”

Cyril was about to be sentenced. Once he was in prison, it would not be easy to bail him out. That was why Old Madam Grecic was so eager to cooperate with him. She was willing to trade her life for Cyril’s!

Crystal pushed Roy's wheelchair and was very surprised. "Roy, you are actually Harold's cousin!"

Roy said in a gentle voice, "It's our first time meeting each other today, so we're not familiar with each other." Crystal said, "You do look alike." She stopped and bent down to look at Roy's face. She touched his chin and said, "Your eyes look like his."

However, Roy was gentler and less aggressive, while Harold was cold and stern.

Roy said, "My father and aunt have similar eyes. They must have been passed down from generation to generation."

There was a garden in front of them. Although the flowers in the summer were blooming beautifully, the sun was so bright that Crystal was unwilling to go over. She pushed Roy into the pavilion.

The servants of the Grecic family were very thoughtful. Even though they didn't know if anyone would come to the pavilion, they left the frozen plum desserts and tea there. Crystal poured Roy a cup of tea first, took a sip of the sour and sweet plum dessert, and said, "In fact, I just came back from Sunshine Village two days ago."

Roy said slowly, "Didn't Uncle Dan tell you not to go back before?"

I could take Harold to see the place where I grew up." Roy held a porcelain teacup with his fair fingers. He looked at the clear tea in

There was a loud boom in Crystal's mind. She held onto the stone table with her hand to stabilize herself

At that moment, she only felt cold all over, as if she had fallen into an ice cave in the middle of the winter, and even the blood all over her body stopped flowing.

What do you mean by that?"

After a few seconds of silence, Luke said, "It's easy to catch fire in summer. It's sunny in Sunshine Village the past few days. The fire went out of control as it burned. The village has been burned down. Not many people escaped."

Crystal! Roy's face changed. "Calm down first"

Crystal bit her lip hard. She took a deep breath and asked, "Then... where are my father and Kyle?"

However, Harold was different. He was four or five years younger than Valeri, but he called him in a rude manner. Valeri was never angry.

For the small team back then, Valeri was not only the leader, but also the soul.

Those frivolous days of drinking and singing seemed to have become distant and blurred, which made Harold think that he was like a spectator as he recalled the memories. Only the day of Valeri's death was still vivid in his mind.

It rained heavily that day, and even the trees were shaking. He and several surviving comrades knelt under the tree. No one made a sound, but it seemed that everyone was crying.

Valeri was shot several times. He blocked the bullets for Harold. His face was pale and his breath was short. He leaned into Harold's arms, but he still smiled and asked, "Do you have any cigarettes?"

Larry said in a hoarse voice, "Why are you still thinking of smoking at a time like this?"

Crystal had a lot of dreams intermittently.

She dreamed that when she was very young, for some reason, she was beaten by Debbie and locked in the woodshed. She was in pain, hungry, and thirsty. She leaned against the wooden door and looked at the light outside the crack

In the middle of the night, everyone in the village fell into a deep sleep. When Crystal almost fell asleep, she suddenly heard a “creak”, and the door was pushed open.

Dan came in with a tray against the moonlight. When he saw her leaning against the corner of the wall, he said in a low voice,” Crystal, I’ve made hot porridge for you. Come and eat it.”

Crystal hurriedly leaned over and saw a bowl of vegetable lean meat porridge. It was fragrant and warm, causing Crystal’s tears to fall instantly.

She leaned against Dan, crying and drinking porridge. Her tears fell into the bowl. Dan sighed and wiped her

"I don't know," Kyle replied. "When I woke up, the fire was already burning."

Crystal turned to look at Kyle and grabbed his collar

She was always gentle and rarely got angry like this. At this time, her eyes were red and she asked directly, "Why did you escape on your own?! Why didn't you save Dad?!"

Kyle did not resist. He looked down at the tear stains on Crystal's face. After a while, he said, "I couldn't save him."

"Why couldn't you save him? Crystal cried and asked, "Your room was so close to his! Why didn't you save him after you woke up?"

Kyle's lips moved, and he said, "I'm sorry."

Thick smoke was billowing, and the fire was all over the sky. The tip of Kyle's nose seemed to still smell the burning, and there were heat waves rolling around him.

"You're sorry.. You're sorry!" Crystal released her hand and sat on the ground dispiritedly. She was like an injured beast. "What's the use of being sorry... Dad won't come back to life again..."
