

Widow 77

Chapter 77

As long as Corey's brain was normal, he would not give her the money. Harold was simply using this as an excuse to cause trouble. After all, at that time, Crystal's face was full of tears and she looked very pitiful.

"If you really want it..." Harold said, "I have a way to make him give us."

"Forget it, forget it." Crystal said, "My head no longer hurts. I'm a forgiving person. I won't argue with him anymore."

Harold asked, "What did he say to you today?"

Crystal was very good at coming up with the main points. She counted on her fingers and said, "First, he told me that Bonnie went to the Coombs family and scolded him for two hours yesterday. Second, he told me that you blackmailed him for three hundred thousand dollars. Third, he wanted me to compensate him, but I'm very poor. I can't afford it. To sum it up, he's very unhappy." "That's it?" Harold raised his eyebrows.

"That lunatic Corey, even if he feared me and wouldn't do anything to Crystal, he didn't even scare her at all?"

"That's it." Crystal nodded. "He seems to want to make trouble for me, but someone called him, he left first."

As soon as she finished speaking, she heard a sudden ringing. It turned out that it was her old-fashioned phone that was ringing. Crystal quickly took out the phone and answered it. "Hello?" "It's me." Antony's voice was a little hoarse. "I heard that Luke took you away."
