

Widow 791

Chapter 791

In the first 19 years of Crystal's life, she had always thought of herself as a person with a good temper until she came to City W and met a group of very unreliable people.

For example, the one sitting next to her now.

Crystal took a deep breath."... What do you mean by 'they're doing to take action'?"

Corey was very calm. "They are going to force us to stop and then kill you."

"?!" Crystal opened her mouth wide. "Aren't they your enemy? Why do they want to kill me?"

Corey glanced at her and said, "Because I can run away, but you can't."

If the car's performance was bad, it might have crashed into the guardrail. However, Corey stepped hard on the brake all of a sudden. He turned around in front of the black Volkswagen before the driver could react and forced him

There was a big hole in the man's forehead caused by the windshield. There were glass fragments in the wound, and it was still bleeding. He must have been choked by the seat belt. At this time, he was lying on the ground and coughing like crazy, as if he was going to spit out his lungs. Sweat, blood, and dust mixed together. He looked extremely embarrassed.

Corey squatted down and pointed his gun at the man's temple. "Tell me, who is behind you?"

"I..." The man's voice was extremely hoarse. His hands, which were full of blue veins, twitched for a while before he grabbed the ground. He looked extremely weak, but it was at this moment that he suddenly turned over with the help of the force of the ground and grabbed Corey's wrist. With a grim smile on his face, he said, "Your father sent me to deal with you, an unfilial son!"

Crystal quickly took two steps back, afraid that they would accidentally hurt her, the innocent onlooker. Corey's expression did not change. The man gritted his teeth and tried to get rid of his gun. Suddenly, Corey's lips curled into a smile and his hand moved as fast as lightning. The hand that was caught loosened, and the gun fell down. The man's eyes narrowed, and he hurried to catch it. However, Corey's speed was much faster. His left hand swept in the air. With a click, the trigger moved slightly. As long as he pulled hard, the bullet would be shot. The cold muzzle was pressed against the man's temple again.

"She's Harold's woman. She has nothing to do with me," replied Corey casually.

The two men's faces changed instantly.

It was already troublesome enough to provoke Corey. If they provoked Harold as well—

Crystal clearly felt that the person who kidnapped her trembled, and her little heart immediately beat twice. What would she do if this guy's hand shook and cut her throat?

"... Don't talk so much nonsense!" The man who kidnapped Crystal said, "If she was really Harold's woman, why would she be in your car?"

Corey a shrug. "Harold and I are sworn enemies. It's normal to steal his woman and play with her."

Crystal was speechless.

“I don’t know what they are doing today.” Jeremy used the toes of her Martin boots to flip over the body of the person who kidnapped Crystal. In October weather, he was wearing a thin leather jacket on the outside of his vest. His whole person looked very fierce and his muscles were bulging. He was the kind of person who could scare a child to tears at first glance, not to mention that his action of turning over the body with the toes now was with a kind of usual coldness, which was even scarier.

Anyway, Crystal felt that it was quite scary, so she quickly ran to Corey. Before Corey could ask her, she said, ‘I’m fine. I’m not injured.’”

She tugged at his sleeve again. “You’re not going to fight him, are you?”

“At present, we can be considered...” Corey thought of a word and said, “We are partners, so we won’t take action for the time being.”

Crystal breathed a sigh of relief. “That’s good. I think he’s very powerful. I’m afraid you can’t defeat him.”

Corey was speechless.

Originally, he didn’t want to fight, but now he really wanted to fight with Jeremy.

Crystal looked like a flower ravaged by the wind and snow as she clutched the box and wept. Meanwhile, Jeremy swiftly tidied up the area and left just as he had come.

"What kind of expression is that?" Corey was bewildered. "Aren't you happy to accept the gift?"

Crystal said, "If Jeremy were to give you a gift, would you be happy?"

Corey answered, "He would give me a gift? I think it would be a bomb, wouldn't it?"

These words changed Crystal's way of thinking. "Is there a bomb inside?"

Corey touched his chin and seriously thought for a while. Looking at Crystal's nervous expression, he sneered, raised his hand, and pressed Crystal's head while saying, "What are you thinking? Jeremy wouldn't be crazy enough to send you a bomb. Do you think it's easy for him to deal with the Evans family or the White family?"

Crystal was speechless.

She kicked him angrily, but Corey easily avoided it and said, "I guess you just imagined that there was a human head or finger inside."

When they finally arrived at the Pina Garden, Crystal went to find Peggie as soon as she entered the door. After hearing the sound, Peggie immediately rushed out of the room and lay at Crystal's feet, rolling on the ground like a spoiled child.

Even though he had expected this, he still felt that his cat had been replaced. This smart old cat was completely different when with him.

Corey went to the island to pour a glass of water for Crystal. He sincerely asked, "Can you give it a bath? It has been a year and a half since it took a shower, and it always likes to roll on my bed after I go to work. I really can't stand it."

Crystal asked, "Can't bring it out for a shower?"

Corey rolled up his sleeves, revealing the scratches on his arm. He smiled and said, "Have a look for yourself. Do you know why we can't bring it out for a shower?"

There was no one who could compete with Corey in raising cats.

Crystal picked up the cat and said, "Okay. Go and prepare the necessary things."

It was five o’clock in the afternoon when Crystal returned to Flower Land from Pina Garden.

Corey had ulterior motives and deceived her in the name of cat grooming, but he probably felt a little guilty. He held his car keys and said, “Let me give you a ride”

Crystal said, “No. If you meet Harold, who should I help if both of you fought against each other?”

“You’ll still help me?”

“Why not?” Crystal said seriously, “HI help you call the ambulance or find a one-stop funeral service.”

With a crash, the car key was thrown on the low cabinet. Corey put on a fake smile and said, “Take care.
I won’t see you off.”

Crystal picked up her candy box, thought for a moment, opened it, and put it on the tea table. Corey raised an eyebrow. “Haven’t I already tested it?”

“Could you not use your own mean measure to judge my humble heart?” Crystal closed the box and said, “This is a treat for you. There’s no need to thank me.”

“I don’t want you to worry.” Crystal lowered her head, looking like a kitten who had done something wrong. She looked dejected, but after a while, she had to secretly raise her eyes to look at the other party’s expression to see if there was any sign of tenderness, so that she could take the opportunity to act like a spoiled child and let this matter go.

“I’ll be more worried if you don’t say anything.”

Crystal leaned over and sat on his lap. She held his neck, rubbed her face against his, and whispered, “I know I was wrong. Don’t be angry anymore, okay?”

Harold: “You’re using this trick again.”

Crystal raised her head and kissed him on the lips, saying, “I’ll change to another one.”

Harold said, “You can change into another one in the evening.”

Crystal was shocked.

That night, Crystal deeply realized her mistake. She cried and promised that if she encountered any danger in the future, the first thing she would do would be to call Harold, and then she was finally let go.

The next day, when Crystal got up, she found that Harold was still there.

Larry almost got out of the car and fought with Harold. "What do you mean by the flirtatious virus?"
Harold gave her a mocking smile. "You don't know about it?"

Larry was about to curse, but Harold had already closed the window coldly and drove forward.

Larry was speechless.

Crystal said thoughtfully, "I think Mr. Reynes..."

"Hmm?"

"I feel like he doesn't really care about being in a relationship." Crystal analyzed. "For him, as long as there is a mutual attraction, they can be together. When conflicts arise or when he gets bored, they'll just separate without any emotions involved."

Harold said, "According to incomplete statistics, he has officially dated more than 30 girlfriends before. It would be strange if he had feelings for all of them."

Crystal said, "He really doesn't take his girlfriend seriously then."

Perhaps because this beach was well-preserved and few people came here, Crystal was able to quickly gather a large pile of beautiful seashells. She was wearing a T-shirt that belonged to Harold, which she used to scoop up the shells by tucking the hem into a makeshift pouch. When she saw Harold approach, she eagerly showed off her treasure while exclaiming. “Ta-da! Look!”

Harold looked down at the coconut juice in her hand, but Crystal didn’t take it. She simply sat on the beach, took a sip of it from his hand, picked up a shell, and asked, “Do you know this?”

Crystal’s eyes sparkled. “You even know the seashells.”

Harold said, “Just a little bit.”
