

Widow 90

Chapter 90

"..." Caleb felt a throbbing pain all over his body. He quickly shut his mouth and didn't dare to speak. "Please follow me to the police station to make a statement." The middle-aged policeman said to Crystal gently, "It's okay. Don't be afraid. I just want to ask a few questions."

Crystal nodded obediently.

The middle-aged policeman sighed and said, "Girl, are you scared?"

He touched his pocket, took out a lollipop, and said with a smile, "Come on, this is for you. I bought this for my daughter yesterday and I left one in my pocket."

Crystal took the candy and said softly, "Thank you, Sir."

"No need, no need." The middle-aged policeman waved his hand. Looking at this well-behaved little girl and then at Caleb, who had a ferocious look on his face, he felt so bad. "Why are you glaring at her? Even the police are here, you still want to fight her, don't you?"

...No," Caleb said hatefully.

"Take him away!"
