Chapter 1196

"Roca Este," Nicole said these two words with complete clarity.

"Roca Este...," Jared murmured, staring at the TV and lost in thought.

The next day, the weather was fine as Jared and Nicole sat, eating in the dining room.

'I'm going to fly home today,' Jared said. "You must take care of yourself here."

"If you're bored, you can get Kelly to come over and keep you company, but not Harvey. I don't want you getting involved with him," Jared instructed, not wanting Harvey to be anywhere near Nicole.

"Don't you worry," Nicole replied. "I know what to do.'

"When are you going to come back?" Nicole looked at him, betraying the unwillingness to let him go.

'What's up? I haven't left and you're already missing me?' Jared looked at Nicole with a smirk.

"No, I just wanted to know so that I can get others to leave before you arrive," Nicole said just to get a rise out of him.

"It seems that you still have the temerity to harbor thoughts such as these." Jared went up to her and pinched her on the chin.

Nicole looked at him with a smile, "I don't, but I cannot guarantee that there wont be any."

"In that case. I'll have to send someone over to guard you 24/7, and I'll fly over at once if something occurs."

Jared looked into her eyes with burning passion and made out with her, prompting her to reciprocate.

After a moment, he released her, gave her a loving stare, and said, "If grandpa is okay, I will come back to pay you a visit again."

"Okay." Nicole nodded. "Are you flying off soon?"

"Yeah."

"Let me send you off."

A smile appeared on the corner of Jared's lips. "Okay."

As they took a slow drive from the hotel to the airport, Nicole leaned against Jared's arms. "Remember to text me when you have landed safely."

"Okay, I will. Well, no one is going to pick you up after you get off work today. Perhaps you'll have to ride home in someone else's car," Jared said in a figurative way.

"Don't worry," she said. "Just leave your car here. I can drive it around."

Nicole then shot him a glance at him and thought, 'What a cheapskate.'

Jared looked at her and flashed her a smile without saying a word. Once they had pulled up outside the airport, Nicole accompanied him to the security terminals.

"Go home and be careful when you're driving," Jared advised while keeping his eyes locked on Nicole.

"Yeah, and remember to tell me once you have landed.'

"Bye." Jared waved and vanished into the security checkpoint with Max.

Nicole then walked out of the airport and drove Jared's car to the R&D lab. When she had reached the office, she saw that both Harvey and Kelly were already working.

Upon noticing her, Harvey came up to her and greeted her, "You're late today."

"Oh. I went to the airport earlier. Harvey, did you hire a personal chauffeur yesterday?" Nicole asked in a casual way.

"Yeah, Mr. Johnston's driver took a long time, so I called myself another. I was thinking that I should return home as early as possible to catch some rest." Harvey said, feeling that it was not necessary to tell her the truth about such a trivial matter.

Nicole did not wish to expose him either, so she looked at him and sat down.

Not long after Nicole had begun working, Ike walked in. "Nicole, what do you want me to do?"

Harvey saw Ike walking in and paused as he kept his eyes on him.

"You came here in a rush. Take a seat for bit. I'll be done in a second." Nicole looked at Ike and motioned for him to seat on the chair and wait.

"Okay." Ike turned around and sat down in a chair.

It was then that he noticed that Harvey was looking at him. "How can I help you, Mr. Ellison?"
