Chapter 931

“Zane, take it easy. Carl and I will go out and see what is going on.”

“You guys protect Zane. Make sure nothing goes wrong.” Nicole instructed the ten bodyguards she had selected earlier.

“Aye.”

“What are you doing? I don’t need protection.” Zane looked at Nicole, not too happy.

Nicole knew Zane’s temperament and could only look at him with a solemn face.

“This is not the time to try to be brave. All you have to do is protect yourself, so Carl and I can concentrate on the enemy. If something happens to you, then there is no point in us coming here.” Nicole took Zane’s hand and held it with force.

What Nicole said made sense. Zane saw she was now no less capable than he was, and besides, he did have mobility problems, so it would be worse if he went and got into trouble.

“Okay, you guys must be careful.”

“Don’t worry. We won’t die until we get you out of here.” Nicole smiled, then left with Carl and the others. Nicole and Carl arrived at the best observation point and found a group of sneak attackers approaching the minefield.

“Carl, take a few men to this side of the minefield and ambush anyone who crosses it,” Nicole instructed.

“Okay, you guys come with me.” Carl led a group of men toward the minefield.

“You take a couple of guys and stay on guard in case someone sneaks up from somewhere else.” Nicole looked at the man beside her.

“The rest of you hid around the house, and don’t let anyone get near it.” After finishing deploying the men, Nicole found a higher ground to get a panoramic view of the situation, as well as the best sniper spot.

It did not take long for the sound of an explosion to come from the minefield. Everyone tensed up. Nicole took the binoculars to watch Carl’s side.

Smoke billowed as one after another explosion sounded. The sneak attackers were blown apart, and no one dared to come forward anymore.

“This is a minefield. Do not move! Fall back the same way we have come!” The leading guy with beard ordered.

After seeing his comrades being blown into pieces, they did not dare to go further.

Carl watched the sneak attackers withdraw beyond Roca Este. Only then he had the battlefield cleaned up and the minefield rigged up again. It was to erase the traces of the explosion that had just occurred so that it looked as if nothing had happened here.

Nicole met up with Carl.

“Have the sneak attackers retreated?”

“Yes, they have suffered huge casualties in the minefield and are pulling out beyond Roca Este.”

“This is the gear we have captured, and the minefield has been rigged up again,” Carl reported to Nicole.

“Good. Distribute the gear among our people, send reinforcement to the entrance of Roca Este, and get someone to keep an eye on the waters close to the shore.” With that, Nicole walked toward Zane’s location.

“Zane, the sneak attackers have retreated. This time, there was a minefield, and that was why they didn’t cross over. But things would be uncertain next time. I'm worried that they will find another opportunity to sneak in, so we should leave as soon as possible." Nicole looked at Zane and asked for his opinion.

"Indeed. Judging by the number of people in this sneak attack, they are just testing the waters. The minefield can't hold them off all the time, so you contact the rescue people now and tell them to come over immediately," Zane said.

"Okay." Nicole immediately took out her pager and made contact.

"Since we can't use local boats, boats will take half a day to arrive at the earliest," Nicole reported back to Zane.

"Okay."

"Order some men to hide for an ambush. Tell them to intercept any enemy entering Roca Este. The rest of the men head near the pickup spots and withdraw to the nearest boats as soon as they arrive."

"Leave the best equipment and ammunition for the men guarding the entrance." Zane looked at Nicole with a serious face.

Nicole understood what Zane meant and then walked out with Carl to get ready.

“Carl, you go to the middle pickup spot and ambush. Keep an eye on the pickup spots on both sides.” “Aye.” After Nicole completed the deployment of one of the pickup spots, she found a higher ground nearby to observe the entrance to Roca Este. Zane also led an ambush near the pickup spot and then had to wait quietly for the boat to arrive.
