Chapter 940

After that, the director of research and development came on stage to introduce the first new product.

“Thank you for your patience in listening to the introduction. Next, I’m going to reveal the first new product for you.” After saying that, a staff member pushed a display cart onto the stage.

“It seems that there are really two new products,” Everyone in the audience said.

“This thing on the display cart is our new tech product this year. Let’s witness it together.” With that, the director of research and development pulled the silk cloth covering off the display cart.

An artificial intelligence robot appeared in front of everyone’s eyes.

“I call this AI robot Brave because it can help humans do dangerous tasks, go to places that humans can’t reach, and protect humans from injury in some environments, reducing human casualty.”

“Next, I’m going to test Brave for everyone to see if it is up to the snuff in handling different emergency situations.”

The director of R&D took out a flamethrower and aimed it at a staff member who was wearing protective clothing. With a gentle press, a flame shot toward the staff member wearing protective clothing. Brave quickly made its judgment, lunged at the staff, and led him away from the flame. It only let go of him after making sure there was no danger.

The staff member stood up unscathed and faced everyone, saying that he was fine and had not been harmed

There was applause from the audience. “With Brave, you don’t have to hire a bodyguard. One Brave can take on a hundred men.”

“This year’s new product is a surprise.” Some people sitting in their seats praising Brave on stage.

“Brave has passed the test. Next, we will test its rescue capability.”

A staff member trapped in an iron barrel was carried and placed at the center of the stage. He called out to Brave and then shouted for help.

Brave saw the staff member trapped in the barrel, scanned the surroundings to make sure there was no danger, and walked over. First, it scanned the physical condition of the trapped person, determining that he was okay, and scanned the iron barrel before the rescue began. It took Brave just a few minutes to get the trapped staff member out.

The audience applauded again. Just then, a group of men came in from the entrance, sat in the back seats, and looked at the stage.

Zane, Nicole, and Carl were alerted by the scouts outside and immediately noticed those men. They reiterated the situation to everyone, and the mercenaries raised their guard further.

There were many tests on stage, and Brave completed them excellently. Its performance was unanimously recognized by everyone present.

“Are you all surprised after seeing Brave’s performance?” The R&D director tried to hype up the atmosphere on the stage. “If anyone is interested, you may order it from the staff after the event.”

“The showcase of our first new product ends here. Next, I’m going to show you another new product, which is an advanced medical instrument. Without further ado, please welcome this new piece of product.” The director gestured to the staff members under the stage, and then they pushed the exhibition cart to the stage and handed it to the director.

“After you all have seen the first product, you must wonder about what this medical device is next to me, right? After all, our current level of healthcare is still limited in many aspects, and our emergency rooms can’t treat patients in time, which is unfortunate for the patients and their families, and we deeply regret it.”

“But starting from now on, we don’t have to worry about it anymore. There will be no more regrets because we have developed a world-class advanced medical instrument. With it, even if you encounter an emergency, you will be taken care of at the soonest possible time so that there will be no more regrets in your family, and the death rate in the world will decline.”

After the director made his speech , the audience erupted into thunderous applause, which showed the audience resonated with what the director said.
