

Chapter 648 Wanda's Desperate Thoughts

A crushing weight of despair settled over Wanda as dark thoughts swirled through her mind like a relentless storm. The anxiety felt like a massive boulder pressing down on her chest, making it hard to breathe. What would happen to her if the Campbell family decided to cast her out? Where could she possibly go?

Going back to the Craig family wasn't even an option worth considering. They had only treasured her because they assumed she was the Campbell family's precious daughter—a valuable connection that boosted their own social standing. But without that golden identity, she would become completely worthless to them. They wouldn't just ignore her; they'd probably treat her like dirt under their feet.

But if she couldn't return to the Craig family, then what other choices did she have? Her prestigious position at the Enlightenment Institute had been secured entirely through the Campbell family's powerful reputation. Eva had used her influence to pull strings and make it happen in the first place. If she got kicked out of the Campbell family, she'd almost certainly lose that job. Everything she'd worked for would crumble to nothing.

The same question kept torturing her mind: What was she supposed to do now?

Finally, swallowing what little pride she had left, she came up with a desperate plan. Maybe if she could somehow get on Lilah's good side—if she could prove how useful and loyal she could be—then perhaps Lilah wouldn't push to have her removed from the Campbell family. As long as she managed to stay in the Campbell family, she would keep that precious identity. And with that identity, she could continue using the family name to get what she wanted.

With this thought driving her forward, she became determined to win Lilah's approval at any cost. She quickly ran through everything she knew about Lilah, mentally checking to make sure she hadn't done anything in the past that might have offended Lilah.

After carefully reviewing every interaction she could remember, she felt a surge of relief. She hadn't personally clashed with Lilah at all. It was Trinity who had created all the drama and conflict with Lilah.

A cold, calculating idea began forming in her mind. What if she completely cut ties with Trinity and then publicly turned against Trinity? What if she made Trinity pay for all the trouble she'd caused and did it in a way that would clearly demonstrate her loyalty to Lilah? Surely that would win Lilah's favor and trust, wouldn't it?

Without wasting another moment, Wanda grabbed her phone and dialed Trinity's number to find out exactly where she was.

No matter where Trinity might be hiding, Wanda was determined to track Trinity down and film her roughing Trinity up. The video would be perfect proof of her dedication to Lilah.

The phone rang briefly before someone picked up, but it wasn't Trinity's voice that answered. Instead, it was one of her sycophants, Mindy.

Mindy's voice was sickeningly sweet as she spoke. "Oh, Wanda! Are you trying to reach Trinity?"

"Just put Trinity on the phone right now!" Wanda snapped impatiently.

Mindy suddenly sounded hesitant and upset, as if she was struggling not to cry. "Wanda, didn't anyone tell you what happened? Trinity was brutally attacked. She has three broken ribs, injuries all over her body, two chunks of her scalp ripped out, and she even lost three fingernails. She's still unconscious in the hospital."

When Wanda heard this news, her face twisted with irritation. "What kind of mess has she gotten herself into now? Not long ago, she was drenched in filth, and now she's been beaten half to death? What kind of chaos is she creating every single day?"

Mindy quickly launched into a detailed account of everything that had happened at Ublento Medical University earlier.

After listening to the whole story, Wanda felt her anger explode like a volcano.

Trinity had used Wanda's identity as a Campbell to make herself look important, but instead, she'd stirred up trouble and faced backlash. She hadn't just destroyed herself—she'd dragged Wanda down with her, leading to Wanda being attacked online and called horrible names.

"Trinity, you absolute idiot!" Wanda snarled through clenched teeth, her voice dripping with venom.

Now, the entire internet was tearing Wanda apart, accusing her of pretending to be part of the prestigious Campbell family for her own gain. The shame was so overwhelming that she felt too embarrassed to even use the Campbell name anymore. Everyone online had started calling her by her birth name—Craig—and it felt like the ultimate slap in the face.

Wanda considered this the most humiliating moment of her entire life. Even though she'd been born a Craig, she'd been living as a Campbell for so many years that going back to her original surname felt like being demoted to garbage. She would honestly rather have no last name at all than be forced to use Craig again. Having Trinity as a sister was like carrying around a curse. That fool had never brought anything positive into her life—only endless problems and disasters.

Wanda genuinely wanted to get rid of Trinity permanently, just like she'd pulled off with Elliana. She wanted Trinity to disappear from the world completely.

For her own survival and success, Wanda had actually started fantasizing about murdering Trinity. But no matter how desperately she wanted Trinity gone, she couldn't act on those thoughts right now. Going to the hospital to beat up an unconscious woman wouldn't prove her loyalty to Lilah—it would only make her look like a heartless monster. Lilah would probably be disgusted by such cruelty. Trinity's punishment would have to wait for another opportunity.

Right now, Wanda resolved to race back to Harmony Estate and come up with a strategy alongside Eva.

With Lilah officially returning to the Campbell family as the true heiress and clearly in a relationship with Cole, Eva had to be just as worried about her own future as Wanda was.

At this critical moment, Eva's and Wanda's fates were completely tangled together. They needed to work as a team if they had any hope of surviving what was coming next.

With this plan in mind, Wanda pressed down on the accelerator and sped toward Harmony Estate.

At the same time, Elliana and Cole were also making their way to Harmony Estate.

Cole focused on driving while Elliana scrolled through her phone, catching up on all the drama unfolding online. She couldn't help but feel incredibly satisfied with how everything had played out. Wanda and Trinity had joined forces to destroy her reputation, but Milton had used only a single social media post to completely demolish both of them. Milton's intervention had been absolutely brilliant and devastating.

A genuine smile spread across Elliana's face as she typed out a message to Milton. "Thank you so much, Milton!"

His response came back almost immediately. "You're my sister—you don't need to thank me. By the way, I went ahead and told Dad that you're Death Thorn. When he found out that your biggest enemy is Blaze Wraith, he was absolutely furious and officially declared war on the entire Blaze Wildfire organization..."

