

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1036

Chapter 1036

George gave Harold a pointed look, and Harold suppressed the excitement in his heart. His big black eyes were shining and reflected Adeena's silhouette.

Her feelings became even more complicated.

She had always thought herself to be rather quick-witted, but why could she not see the intentions of these people in front of her?

"I'm going to the hospital with Aunt Deena. Do not follow us," Duke said in a low voice as he stood up.

"Huh? Aunt Deena, are you sick?" Melody's eyes were filled with concern.

"I'm fine," Adeena said exasperatedly. "I'm just getting a check-up, don't worry."

Duke stood beside her with one hand in his pocket. His voice turned a little colder. "George, take care of your siblings, we'll be heading off first."

"Alright, Daddy." George nodded in response.

It was not until the car disappeared from the entrance of the mansion that the four children reluctantly looked away.

"Sob, when will we get to properly call her Mommy?" Harold sighed.

Alden said slowly, "Daddy must be thinking of courting Mommy all over again."

George nodded. "Although Mommy lost her memories, she still has feelings for us, deep in her heart."

"Can Daddy do it?" Melody was very worried. "Mommy seems a little opposed to Daddy getting close to her. Should we help him?"

Harold linked. "Without our help, Daddy would take at least a month to court Mommy." "A month?" Alden sneered. "You give Daddy too much credit. I'd give it at least half a year." "Half a year is too long." George shook his head. "We've lost Mommy for four years, we can't wait any longer."

"How about this..."

Alden beckoned, and the four children huddled together.

UPLO

The car drove smoothly down the road, and the warm spring breeze blew in.

The car was not going too fast, so the wind was gentle and refreshing.

“Mr. Winters, I’m not going to the hospital. You can drop me off at the city center,” Adeena said softly.

Duke held the steering wheel and said in a strong voice, “Have the check–up first. You can leave after that. I’ll wait for the results on your behalf.”

Adeena was speechless.

Since this man had put his words in such a manner, there was not much she could do to go against it.

She pursed her lips and said nothing.

The car quickly stopped at the entrance of a private hospital that Winters Corporation invested in.

He had already called to make an appointment. As soon as the two of them entered, a nurse courteously brought them to the doctor’s office.

Duke led Adeena to sit down and consulted the doctor, “She has been suffering from cramps for several years now. She had one when she was taking a shower, and she couldn’t get up. Can you perform a comprehensive examination of her body, doctor?”

The doctor had already received Duke’s order in private. He pushed up his glasses and slowly said, “Cases like this, in particular spasms in the limbs, usually suggest a hidden problem in the body. We might need to do an MRI, a color Doppler ultrasound, and a blood test...”

Duke ordered to have all the inspections done.

Looking at the pile of prescriptions in her hand, Adeena scowled. “Is all this necessary?”

She had been going for regular check–ups every week in Cloud City and the doctor said that she had no major issues...

Duke looked at her unquestionably. “The doctor has spoken. Your lips are purple, and there must be something wrong with your heart. It’ll give us some reassurance to have it checked.”

He had to know what was going on with her body...

“Some of the results of these tests would take three days to come out, but you don’t have to make an extra trip here. I’ll send the results to you in person once they’re out,” Duke said softly again.

Adina pursed her lips.

This man really cared about her body, and if so, she had to take care of herself too.

Madam Winters’s Fight For Her Children Chapter 1037

Chapter 1037

Adeena finished the full body checkup only after about five hours.

Since around four results would only be released after a few days, she would come and get all the results in one fell swoop after three days.

The sun went down in the evening, and the lights in the city were turned on.

The entrance of the hospital was crowded and bustling, as usual.

Adeena looked at the man beside her. “Mr. Winters, thank you for today.”

The CEO of Winters Corporation was very busy, yet he was able to take half a day off and accompany her for the physical examination. This caused her to warm up to him a little, despite the initial walls she kept around him.

If this man really was trying to pursue her, he had definitely put in enough effort to make a woman’s heart flutter.

But she was not an ordinary woman.

“It’s getting late, so I’ll go back first. See you again, Mr. Winters.”

“Is that all the thanks I get?” Duke softly said, “I’ve worked for a long time. I’m hungry now.”

Adeena was speechless.

When she was undergoing the examinations, he had been going up and down to queue up for registrations and payments. He was indeed more tired than her.

She smiled faintly and said, "What do you want to eat, Mr. Winters? I'll treat you."

"What do you want to eat?" Duke looked at her tenderly. "I know that there's a pretty good Italian restaurant near the hospital. Do you want to try it?"

"Okay, let's go."

The restaurant was not far, so the two of them just walked over.

The sky slowly turned dark, and the stars shone in the dark sky.

When Adeena walked with Duke on the street, she experienced an unprecedented desire—she actually hoped that they could keep walking on the street.

She had just known and met this man a few times. Why would she have such a scary thought? "Be careful!"

A motorbike speedily drove past them, and Duke quickly held Adeena's slim waist.

She was held in his strong arms.

Her face bumped into his chest, and she heard his pounding heartbeat.

She raised her head in a startled fashion, and Duke happened to lower his head at the same time. Their lips were less than one centimeter away.

Her heart almost leaped out of her throat.

Duke rubbed the back of her waist with his hand while slowly lowering his head.

Adeena forgot to move backward. She forgot to move out of his grasp and leave. She just watched this man leaning forward and kissing her on the lips.

His lips were very cold.

His breath was extremely hot.

She went weak at the knees very quickly, and she wrapped her arms around his neck by reflex. Beep!

A loud car honk was heard.

Adeena instantly snapped out of her daze.

She turned around in shock. It was only then that she realized they were on the street!

The streetlights shone brightly, and the street was crowded. Countless people were staring at them.

“You...”

Adeena’s voice was hoarse.

She took a step backward, but her legs had turned to jelly. The moment she moved backward, she nearly fell down.

Duke held her in time. “Addy, let’s be together.”

“No... no!”

Adeena’s mind was in a mess.

What remained of her rational thoughts told her that this man had a wife and four kids. She must not fall for him.

But she had just kissed him.

Why would she become something she hated the most—a mistress?

“Mr. Winters, I need some peace. Don’t follow me!”

She moved out of Duke’s arms, turned around, and ran away.

Her words kept replaying in Duke’s ears like a charm.

Addy had once said that four years ago prior to vanishing, and he had been unable to find her, no matter what.

This time, he would not let the tragedy happen again.

Duke followed her.

He dared not move too closely, and he maintained a distance of ten meters from her.

Adeena did not realize that she was being tailed in the crowded, bustling city. It was only when she went to the boulevard, which was less crowded, that she realized that Duke was still following her.

When she turned around and took a look, she was just in time to look into his black eyes.

Various emotions were shown in the man's eyes, like affection, reluctance, and longing.

She even suspected that she knew this man in the past. Otherwise, why would he be so affectionate toward her?

But if they knew each other, why would he act as if they had never met before?

Adeena's heart was flustered, and she dared not think about it again. She moved more quickly and went home in a hurry.

Luckily, it was not very far from her apartment. In less than twenty minutes, she arrived downstairs at her apartment. When she turned around and looked, Duke was still following her from afar.

Duke just stopped about ten meters away from the apartment.

It was the season when roses bloomed. Under the moonlight, the rose petals shone in a light pink color, and the petals fell down on the man's shoulders.

The faint floral scent was like feelings of affection that could not be sorted out.

Adeena turned around and went upstairs. She dared not stand on the balcony of her bedroom and look down. Instead, she stood in a dark corner of the balcony in the living room and looked downstairs.

She watched Duke standing downstairs for a few minutes, only leaving after making a call. She finally sighed in relief.

She should not have gone to the Winters family today. Things had moved out of control.

If she did not go, she would not be able to see the four kids of the Winters family. The three boys and the girl looked like the princes and princesses from fairy tales.

"Why are you only coming back now?"

Ruth opened the door and came out of the room. She looked gloomy and upset.

She was dressed in a casual outfit, and her hair was messy. She had not removed her makeup, and her makeup was totally messed up.

Adeena looked at her. "Didn't you go on a date today? Why do you look like this?"

"Haha!"

Ruth chuckled in resignation, and her voice was filled with mockery.

She casually tucked her hair. "I'm hungry. Let's go out and eat. I want to drink some alcohol."

Today was the dimmest day in her life.

She felt that her world was falling apart.

Only getting drunk could let her seek a moment of relief.

Adeena sighed.

Today had been the most chaotic day of her life.

She also wanted some alcohol to clear her mind.

When the two of them were about to head out, the door of the living room was knocked.

"I guess Brady is back." Ruth walked over and opened the door, but a delivery guy walked in with a big box.

"Ms. Willis, this is the meal you ordered. Please receive it."

Ruth took over the box. "Why didn't you say you've ordered dinner?"

She opened the box, and she instantly widened her eyes. "Australian lobster, deep sea abalone, French foie gras. You actually ordered western food delivery. Wait, there are also steak, hot wings, and fish and chips. What the f*ck! There are all sorts of cuisines. Adeena, why did you order so much food?"

Adeena was slightly stunned.

She walked over and took out the order bill. Other than the menu, there was still one sentence.

[Adee, rest early after the meal. See you tomorrow.]

Adeena felt more conflicted.

Why was this man... so considerate to this extent?

She said she would treat him to a meal, but she ran away halfway.

This man had even gone out of his way to order a food delivery for her.

Chapter 1038

A dozen dishes were laid out on the table, and the table was beyond maximum capacity.

"Ruth, go down and buy some beers," Adeena sighed and said.

"Why should I be the one running about? You go." Ruth was starving, and she could not wait to eat.

"You wanted to drink, not me." Adeena glanced at her. "Besides, I ordered dinner. It's not going too far to have you buy some beer, right?"

Ruth was suppressed by her aura, so she had to put on the jacket and went downstairs to buy beers.

When a box of beers was put on the dining table, the two of them started having dinner.

Ruth picked up the beers and drank half a bottle. When she blinked, her tears streamed down like water flowing out of the pipe.

"Adeena, you can laugh at me now." She ate lobster while crying loudly. "Daniel Jones is a jerk. He pursued me, then he abandoned me. Am I that easy to bully?"

Adeena frowned. "What did Mr. Jones do to you?"

The two of them were still very close previously. The plot twist should not have happened so quickly, right?

"He... he said he gave me so many expensive gifts because he mistook me as another person. Sob!" Ruth cried badly. "He also said since the gifts were given to me, they could be considered as an apology. Who wants him to apologize and compensate? Sob... Adeena, why am I so miserable? Why would I encounter this kind of person?"

Adeena looked despised as she passed a few tissues over. "Wipe your face. You look so ugly when you cry."

"He's not here. Can't I be ugly now?" Ruth acted as if she gave up on herself. "I thought it was love at first sight for me. I can't believe that he mistook me for someone else. I hate him! I hate him!"

Adeena ate while she asked, "Did you ask who he initially wanted to give those presents to?"

"He refused to tell me!" Ruth gritted her teeth and said, "He must be afraid that I would trouble that woman!"

Adeena said, "The gifts that he gave you cost at least six million dollars, but he also did not ask them back. He's quite responsible."

"Who wants those stupid gifts! Nobody cares!"

Ruth threw the fork away before she stormed back to her bedroom. She threw all the gowns and bags from her cabinet to the bed. Then, she held a knife and crazily cut those things into pieces.

Adeena let her be.

Since that man had gotten the wrong person, everything could be explained now.

She believed Ruth could get through an emotional injury like this one.

It was mainly because her own thoughts were in shambles. She did not have the energy to bother other people.

She drank beers like water as she drank one after another. In the end, she dizzily went back to her room and slept until the next morning.

Ruth's scream woke her up

"Did a thief invade our house last night?"

Ruth scratched her messy hair and fearfully asked.

Adeena pulled open the door and went out. She saw that the floor of the living room was full of broken pieces of gown, and some broken pieces of jewelry had also been thrown on the ground.

It really did look like a thief invaded.

"My gown! This gown costs $300,000." Ruth knelt on the ground and picked things up. She looked so painful. "This pair of earrings costs $800,000. And this bracelet! Oh god, why is it broken into halves?"

Adeena massaged her forehead. "This is done by you after you're drunk. I even recorded a video. Do you want to watch?"

It was mainly because she worried that Ruth would put the blame on her after she woke up from being drunk.

Ruth's scream instantly stopped.

"I will go to work today, and I'll go back to Cloud City tomorrow. Come back with me," Adeena indifferently said.

"Didn't you want to stay in Sea City and become the secretary of the CEO of Winters Corporation? Why are you going back to Cloud City so soon?" Ruth asked.

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1039

Chapter 1039

Adeena pursed her lips. "There's still another week before I start working in Winters Corporation, so it's not a rush."

Ruth held the things in her hand tightly.

Daniel had just cut off ties with her without any explanation. How could she be willing? She had to know who Daniel initially liked, so that she could put this matter to rest.

After Adeena got ready, she directly went to the business office building in the center of Sea City.

She planned to slowly translocate the company to Sea City, so before that, she had to buy a floor of office.

Her company was established three years ago. Its scale was not huge, but it was not small either. There were two hundred staff, so the office had to be at least 2,000 square feet.

"Miss Willis, you're here."

The service assistant who was in charge of receiving her was extremely respectful.

Adeena frowned slightly.

When she had previously contacted this service assistant, he had not seemed to be this respectful.

"Miss Willis, you're here in time today. There's a discount on our commercial properties. It's not a 10% discount, but 50%. The original price was $30,000 per square foot, but it is now only $15,000 per square foot. The total price is thirty–two million dollars. If I get rid of the change for you, you can probably get this floor of more than 2,000 square feet of office at thirty million dollars.”

Adeena became more surprised. “$15,000 per square foot? Are you being serious?”

She had been watching the price of housing in Sea City. The prices of normal housing were ridiculously high, while the prices of commercial office buildings were also increasing.

The place she wanted was in a rural area, and the price was relatively cheap. It was at a modest rate of $30,000, and the previous promotion was a 10% discount. In total, it would be several million dollars cheaper.

But now this person was offering a 50% discount!

A 50% discount would cause a huge loss, right?

But this service assistant looked serious and behaved respectfully. He looked as if he wanted her to make the payment, while he also made her feel that he could also earn a lot, even if the price of the unit was at a rate of $15,000.

She did not invest in properties, but she also knew that the cost of the land could not even be covered by a rate of $15,000.

Did something happen to the unit, and the unit could not be sold?

Adeena smiled faintly. “I’ll give it more thought.”

“Miss Willis, why do you still want to think about such a discounted price? This office building is in a perfect location. It currently houses several branches of global multinational groups, and its development is extremely great.”

The service assistant tried his best to persuade her.

Adeena took out her phone and checked, but she realized that the price on the internet was still between $30,000 and $40,000.

Besides, no one on the internet mentioned anything about a 50% discount.

She vaguely felt something was wrong.

Suddenly, she felt a few enthusiastic gazes staring at her. She immediately turned around, and she saw four kids squatted at the corner of the Sales Office.

The kids probably were not expecting her to suddenly turn in their direction, so all of them were caught off-guard.

At that moment, she suddenly understood it.

She looked at the service assistant. "You can go to work first. I'll come to you later."

When the service assistant saw the four kids showing up, he knew that he failed. He dispiritedly scratched his chin and went to work.

The kids had said that if he could sell the unit at a low price, they would give him a $100,000 commission.

He initially thought that such a matter could be easily achieved. Unexpectedly, he was unable to complete it.

Chapter 1040

Adeena walked over.

The kids knew that it was useless to hide, so they obediently walked out with their heads bowed down.

The three boys were wearing a gray casual outfit with a peaked cap that covered half of their faces.

The girl was wearing bib pants, and a pair of bright, clear eyes peeked through her black fringe. "Why are you here?"

Adeena lowered her head and asked them.

The boys looked very tall, and their heights were nearly 1.5 meters. They should be considered very tall among nine-year-old kids.

The girl was slightly shorter, but she was also at least 1.4 meters.

The kids stood in front of her in a uniform row, and it was very peculiar.

"We..." George did not want to lie, but he was unable to find a reasonable excuse. He hesitated for a long time without answering.

Adeena had to open up the main point. "Did you do anything with the sudden 50% off for the office building?"

"Aunt Deena, we just wanted to give you something." Harold blinked and pitifully said.

Alden pursed his lips and said, "The Winters family doesn't lack any money."

He had investigated that the market price of Willis Corporation was less than $100,000,000. It would be slightly difficult if she wanted to buy a floor of office that cost sixty million dollars.

They just wanted to reduce some of the burden on Mommy.

"Winters Corporation doesn't lack money, but you also shouldn't spend it like this," Adeena helplessly said. "I'm not poor, so I can afford to buy this office building. I thank you for your sincerity."

Melody clenched her fingers. "But we really like you, Aunt Deena. Can you please accept our sincerity?"

Her eyes were like a lake with a rippling surface, making people want to pamper her. Adeena's heart instantly softened. "You can give me other things, but not property."

She paused for a while before she asked, "Do the four of you like me?"

Harold nodded strongly. "I like you very much!"

Melody blinked. "Yes, I like you very much!"

Alden pursed his lips. "I don't only like you. I love you."

"We like you very much, Aunt Deena," George concluded, "We've liked you since the first time we met. "

The kids' words were like honey that lightened up Adeena's mood.

She continued asking, "Why would you like me?"

"Because..."

Alden looked at her, and he directly said, "Because we want you to be our Mommy." "What?" Adeena thought she had heard it wrong. "Don't you have a mother? Why..."

"We like you. We just want you to be our Mommy!" Harold grabbed her arm and swung. you marry our Daddy?"

Adeena was shocked.

They had their own mother, and their mother had been missing for four years, and she did not seem to have divorced Duke.

What were these kids thinking?

While she was about to ask in detail, a commotion suddenly came from the entrance of the Sales Office.

She turned around and looked over.

Two rows of bodyguards squeezed the crowd to the side and formed a passage. Then, a man in a black suit walked over.

"Can

When he showed up, all the lights shone on him, and everything else became dull.

"Daddy is here!"

"Daddy came to find Mom... Aunt Deena!"

"Aunt Deena, you can go on a date with Daddy. We'll leave first."

The four kids held hands and instantly ran away from the side door.

Adeena was speechless.

She never before came across any kids who would matchmake their own father with another woman.
