

WILL OF CHAOS

Chapter 2 Cap 2: Huh? Am I A Leech?(Chapter Preview)

<["REINCARNATION COMPLETED STARTING SYSTEMS"]>

Suddenly I wake up feeling weird.

My mind is still fuzzy as I tried to get my head on straight I started to look around and get even more confused and scared by the things I saw around me.

I was in a little lake of red liquid, what is this? It looks like blood but it's not that thick, more like red water, sometimes I could see some ripples but towards the center of the small lake.

I tried to look out of the lake and everything looked huge it looked like the small lake was in front of gigantic ruins, the columns were white with various carvings resembling bones and skulls, and the walls were red.

I could see some other small red lakes near mine, behind the big ruins I could see a big mountain and on the opposite side of the ruins a gigantic forest.

I went back to look at the ruins and they looked like some kind of temple the murals on the walls looked dirty and faded so that I couldn't identify what was portrayed on them, this temple seems to be very old and was abandoned, had broken walls, collapsed columns and parts of the ceilings went down with green musk and purple vines covering many parts of the ruins.

The plants around the small lakes and the temple had many different colors with reds, purples, greens, and pinks.

Turning towards the forest I could see very big thick trees with most of them being normal with the trunk colors brown and green leaves, but there were also some red trunk trees with purple leaves around.

I was also able to hear some noises and noises coming from the forest and from time to time I saw some shapes.

Phew!

It seems that I've finally calmed down a bit and I can get back to see the real problem, that I can't move or feel my arms and legs, I tried to look at my reflection in the small lake I was in the shallow end and I was paralyzed with the fright of surprise at what I saw it once more.

There is!

In place of my face, which is what I expected to see, I saw a grotesque red-skinned worm head, a ring of sharp, serrated teeth in the mouth, and a pair of completely black eyes.

Rawww!

This grotesque image made me let out a high-pitched scream that made me realize it wasn't my voice, with apprehension, I looked again at the reflection and tried to move left and right and stick my tongue out and the grotesque image did the same things and that's when I had to accept that it was my reflection.

Soon associating this grotesque appearance with the name Leech, for some reason I turned into a Leech, it made me realize that things around me were not giants but that I was very small.

I don't know what happened to me but if I stop to think and analyze it can be a dream and if I try to bite my tongue the pain in the dream can wake me up so I tested my hypothesis.

Chomp!

Ooo!

I looked around and it was still here, this was not a dream.

That means then that I died.

Bah!

I think I should face facts, after all going in and out of the coma I already knew my time was coming so I was already prepared to die.

But even if I were prepared to die to discover that reincarnation after death is true surprises me, it amazes me, even more, to discover that my reincarnation in this new life is not as a person but rather a disgusting bloodsucker.

Yuck!

I spent a few minutes looking hopelessly up at the sky as I tried to accept my current quote and get my head on straight, after thirty to forty minutes in this state and finally calming down I heard something.

Grrrr!

Roarr!

It was a roar and it was getting closer, and when it finally arrived I saw two creatures one looked like a Rabbit but it had a horn on its head, the other looked like a wolf but it had two heads instead of one. of two heads.

The two-headed wolf was faster and in a few seconds it reached the Rabbit with the horn but when he was going to bite the Rabbit he jumped very high, but then it should have been more than two meters tall, which surprised me a lot, the wolf wasted no time and tried to scratch the Horned Rabbit with his claws while he was in the air in what I thought was a futile effort due to his height until the wolf's claws began to glow as he waved creating three lines of energy that they flew and hit the Rabbit with horn and guise tearing off one of its legs whole and smearing its blood as it fell.

Va-voom!

Ungh!

Bash!

When Rabbit fell, hit his head sideways on a rock, and died, the two-headed wolf ran up to him and began to eat him.

Munch! Munch! Munch!

Seeing this scene made me realize something much more serious than simply reincarnating in a leech, which made me realize that I wasn't on earth.

Neither of these two animals exists on earth or should I refer to them as monsters?

Both that Bunny jump and the wolf's flying claw attack are inexplicable unless I consider my gaming knowledge and categorize these moves as either the Bunny's jump or the wolf's claw as abilities or magic.

As I reflected on all this I saw the two-headed wolf grab what was left of the horned Rabbit's corpse in its mouth and head back to the forest.

Ghock!

Ooo!

As I watched the wolf go I felt a bite on my tail and looked back scared, I realized that there was what looked like another leech biting me on the tail and trying to pull it from me, this leech unlike me who is red was black and had no eyes.

Wasting no time bit her on the head with all my strength twice and managed to rip almost half of her head killing her, while biting I felt a force welling up in my fangs in the second bite that was twice as strong as the first.

Ding!

I heard a noise but didn't have time to find out what it was because I saw a black leech just inches from me with its mouth open.

Before she bit me I threw myself fast to the right and after I managed to dodge I got up and tried to bite her on the head to not give her a chance to bite me, I noticed a little light green goo where I bit and I felt more tired but I noticed that the leech had stopped moving but wasn't dead.

Ghock!

I had to forget about the second leech because I felt another two leech send me on my back, turning around quickly I bit the third as I tried to pull it out of me and when I did I realized that it also stopped moving and without wasting time I bit with all my strength the fourth on the head tearing a third of her head off, managing to kill her with one attack.

Ding!

I noticed that the second leech was starting to move again so I went to her and bit her head several times to make sure she died and I turned around to finish off the third leech that was starting to move too and I bit her head several times too, I saw that there was a farm that was eating the first leech I killed, so while I was distracted I bit her head and held it with all the strength I had until it stopped moving, I realized it was still alive so I kept biting until I died to make sure who wouldn't attack me later as the others.

In the end, I was confused and completely exhausted, almost unable to move most of this battle I did without even thinking just by reflex, instinct, and desperation.

Ding! Ding! Ding!

I slowly tried to look around to see if there were more leeches but it seems not, the ripples I had noticed at the beginning must have been them swimming in this big puddle but I was too confused and distracted to notice them around me, I started to pay attention to the others puddles that were around with what little focus it still had and I saw that they all still had leeches in them one of them slipped out of one of the puddles while I was fighting and was halfway to the blood that dripped from the Rabbit with horn and then I saw a shadow descend from the sky at high speed and catch the leech and fly again, from what I saw it looked like a bird with red feathers and an eagle's head.

I was very married and so hungry I was barely able to move and as I considered eating the leeches to quench my hunger I heard that noise once more and something strange appeared in my vision.

Ding!

<[ you gained a level ]>

.

<[ the level will be on hold until you circulate the experience gained throughout your body to be absorbed and then it will be fully integrated into your stats ]>

There is?