

Chapter 34

Hendrick immediately explained, “Ms. Crestfall, wait! It’s a misunderstanding! I was wrong to put you in a tough spot. I am sorry that I have offended you. The good sir has taught me a lesson last night. Please forgive me, I beg of you.

“These are the funds for the Northern Point construction site. Not a penny less! Please have a look!”

Hendrick waved his hand, and four bodyguards came over with briefcases that were filled with money.

Hendrick then opened his own briefcase to pull out a document. “Ms. Crestfall, this is the land that New Moon Corporation offered to purchase the other day. I have told my men to make the necessary arrangements, and the ownership will be transferred to your company soon. Take it as a token of apology.

“Ms. Crestfall, I hope I’ve done enough to make up for my mistakes. Please inform the good sir that I have done my part.”

Hendrick held the document with both his hands and offered it to Luna who was completely dumbfounded.

Hendrick had been arrogant and impolite yesterday , and he even made rude demands on Luna, yet he had now turned into an entirely different person overnight.

Not only did he deliver the Northern Point-related funds , but he even offered a piece of land to the company as a token of apology.

It felt surreal.

Luna pinched her own arm to make sure she was not dreaming. She then noticed something strange in Hendrick's words.

Did someone teach Hendrick a lesson last night and force him to apologize to her?

Who could that be?

Since Luna didn't say anything , Hendrick broke out in a cold sweat. He carefully asked, "Ms. Crestfall, if this isn't enough, I can offer you another piece of land.."

"That's enough," Luna interrupted him and added, "I am happy with your sincerity, but I don't want the land."

“No! No!” Hendrick was flustered by the refusal. He pleaded, “Ms. Crestfall, please. Take it, just take it as a token of apology.”

Luna did not know how to react.

The chairman of Mystic Wood Group was begging her to take his land, which sounded outrageous. If news got out, people would think that Hendrick had lost his mind.

Luna was forced to take the land since Hendrick pleaded with her so desperately while kneeling on the ground.

After collecting the funds and taking the land from Hendrick, she went upstairs to her office and called her secretary in.

“Danni, I want to know what happened last night.”

A while later, Danni came back with an update. “Ms. Crestfall, I got news from inside Mystic Wood Group that someone brought a hundred bulldozers to the Northern Point construction site and leveled the entire place to the ground.”

“A hundred bulldozers?”

Luna was stunned.

Mystic Wood Group was a well-known company in Sumeria. It was no secret that Hendrick was close with Third Master Ringstone, or Jamire, yet someone dared to send a hundred bulldozers to destroy the construction site.

The 'sir' to whom Hendrick referred must be someone powerful.

However, Luna could not think of anyone among her acquaintances that would have such formidable influence. It piqued her curiosity.

On the other hand, the news of Hendrick apologizing to Luna in front of the New Moon Corporation building reached Solomon.

Solomon had a grim look on his face as he called Hendrick to question him. "Hendrick, you took my money and betrayed me?"

"Go to hell!"

The Northern Point was a profitable project, yet Hendrick wrongly trusted Solomon's words and the place ended up being leveled to the ground.

At the moment, Hendrick was furious because he had trusted the man.
