

The Wolf's Bride by Coffee's Tea Chapter 777

Chapter 777

The commanders' reactions were mostly similar.

They were all brought out by Andrius, and some of them even owed him countless lives. Their reactions were reasonable.

"Good." Noir's tone was practically emitting sparks. "I've decided. Everyone, lead your troops and immediately set out for Kiyoto.

"Make sure to arrive before the Wolf King's trial and use overwhelming firepower to force Registus to release him."

"Yes!"

"That's exactly what we should do!"

"Then, let's go."

"We'll rescue the Wolf King and restore his glory."

Then, the Lycantroops set off, stretching for kilometers, valiant and spirited, and headed toward Kiyoto.

Swoosh...

Shortly after they set off, someone blocked their path. It was the First War God, Conrad Gibbs.

Conrad frowned and asked, "Noir, what do you plan on doing?"

"We're going to Kiyoto to save the Wolf King," Noir answered without hesitation.

"Nonsense!" Conrad shouted coldly, leaving no room for refutation. "I won't allow it."

"Then, I'm sorry!" Noir remained expressionless as he snorted coldly and leaped in the air, heading straight for the First War God.

The only thought in his heart now was to save the Wolf King. Whoever dared to stand in the way, even if it was the First War God or the emperor himself, he would not show any mercy.

Whoosh...

In the blink of an eye, Noir covered several meters and appeared in front of Conrad to throw a punch. The punch was swift and fierce like a descending tiger, carrying unmatched momentum.

Conrad remained calm.

The moment Noir's fist was about to connect, a claw suddenly extended and easily gripped his hand. Then, with a twist and push, Noir was sent flying.

Swoosh!

Whoosh!

Swish!

The Eight Commanders rushed over to support him.

The nine of them were all top experts of the Lycantroops. Even Conrad struggled to withstand their attacks and was forced to retreat step by step.

However, he did not make way.

“First War God!” Noir attacked while saying calmly, “Considering your relationship with the Wolf King, I won’t make things hard for you. Step aside quickly!”

“Step aside?” Conrad’s expression remained cold as he snorted, “If I step aside, it’ll end up harming the Wolf King, and you all will become sinners of the Lycantroops!”

Noir and the others were stunned, and their movements paused.

Noir looked at him and asked in confusion, “What do you mean by that, First War God?”

Conrad sighed. “The Wolf King never rebelled at all, but if you lead the Lycantroops to Kiyoto, it will only confirm the rumors of his rebellion.

“By then, not only will you fail to rescue the Wolf King, but you’ll also push him into an irredeemable abyss and plunge Florence into turmoil.”

Noir and the others trembled with sweat forming on their heads.

Yes, if they marched the Lycantroops to Kiyoto, the Wolf King would appear to be guilty. They would be harming the Wolf King.

“Thank you, First War God...” Noir said guiltily, “If you hadn’t stopped us, we would’ve caused a catastrophe and harmed the Wolf King.

“However, if we stand by and do nothing, Registus will undoubtedly use all sorts of schemes to target the Wolf King. Furthermore, the Wolf King is infected with that insect now. I’m afraid that...”

Noir had a point.

Given Registus' character, he would not rest until he achieved his goal.

"Stay calm." Conrad said in a low voice, "You know about the relationship between me and the Wolf King. If you can trust me, I'll set off for Kiyoto now to seek justice for the Wolf King."

Among the seven War Gods, Conrad had the closest relationship with the Wolf King.

Noir and the others had no reason to doubt him, so they said solemnly, "First War God, the Lycantroops entrust everything to you. Please save the Wolf King!"

Noir saluted after finishing his words.

"Please save the Wolf King!"

The Eight Commanders and the rest of the Lycantroops also saluted.

Conrad said solemnly, "I swear on my name that I'll definitely rescue the Wolf King and provide an explanation to the Lycantroops and the people of Florence!"

Then, he left and headed toward Kiyoto without turning back.