

The Wolf's Bride by Coffee's Tea Novel Online Free –

Chapter 906

Andrius noticed something in Kate's tone and asked curiously, "Kate, do you know about this mural?" "Yes!" Kate also snapped back to her senses and said truthfully, "My grandpa told me that the Klein family's treasure actually consists of two things. "The four great families only know that the jade pendants contain a great secret, but they don't know that the treasure also includes a mysterious mural, which likely also holds a great treasure. "I believe the mural before us is the one my grandpa spoke about. I just didn't expect it to be hidden beneath the magma. It's truly astonishing!" So, that was it! Andrius could not help but be amazed. He was only partially aware of the details regarding the Klein family's treasure. If what Kate said was true, then Norvin had actually done him a favor. However, why did that person he suspected to be Old Hagstorm push Kate down as well? What was his purpose? "For now, it seems we can't return yet." Kate looked at the ancient mural and suggested, "Why don't we thoroughly study the mural? Maybe we'll make some discoveries." "Okay." Given their circumstances, that was all they could do. Thus, Andrius immersed himself in studying the mural. Before Kate arrived, he already noticed that several lines intersected in the mural, inadvertently forming lifelike figures. However, she joined him before he had the chance to delve deeper into it. Now, he could thoroughly investigate it. As he looked closer, he realized that the figures in the mural had different postures. There were also faint lines and dots on their bodies. For someone with exceptional medical skills like Andrius, he immediately knew that those dots were acupoints on the body, and the lines were meridians. The mural seemed to depict a cultivation path! "This is..." However, Andrius frowned as he gazed at the figures. – "Andrius, did you find something?" Kate asked curiously when she saw his expression. Kate had been quite trustworthy the whole time, so Andrius told her what he discovered. "I believe this mural is an ancient cultivation technique. Based on the acupoints and meridian paths depicted on the mural, it should be a method for practicing this ancient technique." "Why didn't I think of that?" After hearing his words, Kate looked at the mural again and was suddenly enlightened. Andrius frowned and said, "It's just my speculation. We need to try to determine if it's correct." 2/2 Kate hesitated and said, "You're still heavily injured, and your meridians haven't fully recovered yet. Practicing the technique recklessly may lead to a backlash. Let me try it first!" Andrius thought about it and agreed. Kate sat down and started to cultivate following the path shown on the mural. Whoosh... Just as she started, after less than half a minute, she felt her inner energy reversing and attacking her heart. She was startled, but before she could react, her face turned pale and she coughed up black blood, then collapsed backward. "Kate!" Andrius rushed over to support her. After a brief examination, he found the turbulent inner energy inside her body. He quickly took out silver needles and inserted them into several acupoints she used while cultivating, sealing off the erratic inner energy. "How do you feel now?" "Much better."

* Chapter 907 Kate took a long breath and said with a wry smile, "Let me recover for a while. You can continue studying it." Then, she began to recover. Andrius went back to study the mural. The only thing that puzzled him was that there were several contradictory points in the mural. In the top left image, the sun and moon hung together in the sky. It was a clear violation of common sense. That was not the only one. In the top right image, there was a large fire burning over water. In the bottom left image was darkness shrouded in the light. In the bottom right image, flowers bloomed in the middle of winter. In the central image, flesh and blood grew on corpses. Everything was highly unusual, and Andrius could not make sense of it. “Phew...” After a deep breath, Kate recovered quite a bit. She opened her eyes and saw Andrius’ troubled expression, then asked, “How is it? Did you find anything new?” Andrius shook his head with a wry smile. The pictures had completely stumped him. “Let’s leave this mural aside for now.” Kate sighed. “We’re trapped here, and it’s unlikely we’ll get out anytime soon. Our most pressing issue is food and water.”

Andrius’ expression sank. Although it was true that martial realm experts were far superior to ordinary experts, they were still bound by the needs of their physical bodies. An ordinary person would die in three days without water. No matter how powerful martial realm artists were, they would not last much longer than that. “Let’s explore elsewhere.” Andrius looked away from the mural and glanced around. “Maybe we can find something else.” Above the magma layer, Wade personally wore the most advanced equipment and infused it with his inner energy to dive beneath the cliff. However, even when the equipment’s alarms blared at their maximum tolerance levels, they still could not find any trace of Kate and Andrius. There were not even any traces of bones. This made Wade furious. Whoosh... After emerging from the magma, he called out to the others, “The temperature of the magma is too high, and it’s incredibly deep. We can’t fully explore it even with the best equipment. This path is completely blocked. However...” His face was filled with anger, and he spoke each word through gritted teeth. “That black-robed person acted swiftly and powerfully. I can’t think of anyone else with such strength and motive besides Norvin Swallow! This grudge must be avenged!” With his words, the Medicine Sect experts responded with righteous indignation. It’s clear that the Swallows want to harm the Maiden and weaken our forces while we search for her!” ‘He’s truly ruthless. We must seek revenge!’ ‘Let’s attack the Swallows!’ ‘Kill, kill, kill!’ The Medicine Sect was known for their unity, and at that moment, they were all filled with fury. “Go.” Wade ordered with a solemn face, “Gather all the experts of the Medicine Sect. After we organize our ranks, we'll storm the Swallows' residence and demand justice for Kate!"

Chapter 908

In the mysterious hall, Andrius and Kate remained unaware of the changes outside. They had explored every corner of the hall, from the pebbles under their feet to the ceiling, but found nothing else. They walked around aimlessly and ended up returning to the mural again. "This doesn't make sense." Andrius looked at the mural and placed his hand on it. "This hall was built near the magma, yet the air is so humid. There should be a water source nearby, and it should probably be a large one." Kate was also puzzled and glanced at some moss in a corner. "If there were no water source, the air wouldn't be this humid, and moss wouldn't grow." Both of them were perplexed. "Let's keep searching!" Andrius gritted his teeth. "I suspect there is an underground river somewhere here." "Okay." The two had already lost count of how many times they searched the area thoroughly. However, after circling around a dozen times, they still could not find any hidden mechanisms or secret compartments, let alone the underground river. As they walked, they found themselves back at the mural again. "Forget it." Andrius' meridians were still not fully healed, and he had been struck by Norvin, worsening his old injuries and adding new ones. He was already exhausted after several rounds of searching. He stood in front of the mural and continued to contemplate. As he looked around, he suddenly noticed something he had not paid attention to before. In the bottom row of the mural, in the far-off and increasingly blurry distance, many small figures were bowing toward the central altar. There was a meditating cultivator sitting on the altar. It seemed like they were participating in some kind of ceremony, and the figures were showing utmost respect. What exactly was that meant to convey? Andrius pondered but could not arrive at a perfect conclusion. He called out and pointed to the small figures. "Kate, what do you think these figures in the mural are doing? What's their significance?” Kate had been thinking about cultivation techniques. Upon hearing Andrius’ words, she immediately looked at the figures more closely. After observing them for a moment, her furrowed brows gradually relaxed, and she said meaningfully, “I think these figures are facing the central meditating cultivator on the altar. 2/2 “Maybe they’re ordinary people worshiping this powerful ancient martial cultivator, and this altar signifies their devotion.” Andrius nodded slightly. He also thought the same. However... The mural supposedly contained a mysterious and powerful cultivation technique. Why would the Klein family’s ancestors deliberately depict ordinary people like this? Could it be a guide for future generations? At that thought, Andrius immediately thought of another possibility. “Kate, if your speculation is correct, the location of the altar must correspond to the underground river!” Andrius’ tone was confident. Kate was stunned and just about to question how Andrius got to that conclusion, but he continued, “The highest virtue is that of water. Water benefits all things and does not vie, yet it resides in places that people disdain. “In ancient times, people regarded water as a path to heaven and a powerful symbol. Interestingly, the mural has a sacred altar that represents their path. “Moreover, the direction faintly indicated by the stream in the mural also aligns with the location of the altar. “If my guess is correct the position of the altar in the mural corresponds to the location of the underground river in this hall!” Andrius’ gaze was bright, firmly fixed on the mural’s altar. “That makes sense!” Kate agreed, and the two of them immediately began to analyze the mural further. The direction of the altar was easy to determine. It was situated in the east–north–east section of the mural. According to the mural’s proportions, it was several meters away from where they were standing.

Chapter 909 Andrius took out a compass from his pocket that he prepared beforehand for their treasure hunt. Then, he began to determine their direction. “It should be...”

He looked at the compass while moving, leading him and Kate to a specific location in the spacious hall. "Right here." Here? Kate frowned slightly and leaned down to knock the ground twice but found nothing unusual. Andrius focused on the spot beneath his feet and seriously, "Kate, try to break this area." "Okay!" Kate nodded and gathered her inner energy, then delivered a powerful punch to the floor. Crash! The powerful surge of inner energy from a Martial King struck the floor, cracking it open to reveal the real surface. A stone staircase extended downward into the darkness, and there was no visible end in sight. However, aided by faint light, Andrius could see glimmers of reflection. "There really is something!" Kate was shocked upon seeing this path. "Let's go down and have a look." Andrius led the way, kicking aside the debris and rocks to the side, and continued deeper onward. Kate immediately followed him. "Look! There really is an underground river!" Kate pointed to the end of the stone staircase in surprise and happiness. Then, she hurried down to the edge of the river. Swoosh! Even though it had been a long time since Kate had water and her lips were starting to chap, she hesitated to drink directly from it. She took out a long silver needle and dipped it into the water. After about ten seconds, she took it out and observed it closely. There were no changes. "The water isn't poisonous. We can drink from it," Kate reported back to Andrius with a smile, then reached down to sip the water. Andrius did not mind either way. He scooped up the water with both hands and drank it eagerly. The underwater river water was not ice-cold and tasted pure and refreshing. It was even better Chapter 909 than ordinary well water. After drinking their fill, they began to think about their next step. The water issue was resolved. Now, the problem was food. Kate's attention was naturally drawn to the underground river. 2/2 "Andrius, you rest first. I'll dive down to take a look. Since the water is so clean, it probably leads to the outside. I'll see if I can find an exit," Kate said to Andrius, then turned and dove into the water with a splash. She swam into the water like a mermaid, graceful and elegant. Andrius was worried about any accidents, so he did not leave. Ten minutes later... Splash... Kate emerged from the water. Her long hair floated along the water and clung to her skin, making her complexion look fair and white. Her soaked clothes stuck tightly to her body, outlining her curves more vividly than before. Andrius glanced at her and instantly felt his mouth go dry. He immediately looked away. Splash... Kate walked out of the underground river. She was like a flower blooming above clear water. At that moment, it was as if a goddess was walking over, radiating boundless enchantment and an allure that made it difficult to meet her gaze. Just a glance at her was enough for others to feel self-conscious. "Ahem..." Andrius cleared his throat, trying to conceal his embarrassment. He acted as if nothing was unusual and asked, "Did you discover anything underwater?" "No." Kate saw Andrius' shy expression, and a mischievous glint flashed in her eyes. Then, she crouched down in front of him. "Andrius, take off your clothes."

Chapter 910 Upon hearing this, Andrius instinctively tensed up and looked at Kate warily, but he did not speak. He was both puzzled and greatly surprised. "Don't overthink it." Kate said, "You also don't want to keep staring at me while I'm all wet, so I'm just borrowing your jacket. I'll return it to you once I dry my clothes." Andrius was relieved after understanding the situation. "Here." He did not think much of it and took off his jacket to hand to her. "Turn around," Kate took the jacket and said shyly. Although she was bold, she could not be too casual. "Right." Andrius immediately turned around. Then, he heard the sound of rustling. Kate said, "Okay, you can turn back now." Andrius turned back around. At that moment, Kate had some of her own clothes in her hands. She wore Andrius' oversized jacket. Surprisingly, it did not look too out of place on her slender figure and even added a unique allure. Fortunately, when they had come to Mount Albus, everyone was wearing thick, warm jackets. Thus, it was hard to discern any details of their bodies. Otherwise, it would have been quite embarrassing. Hiss... Crackle... Since Kate went into the water, her fire-starter was not working well, so Andrius took the initiative to gather some dried wood and branches from the surroundings to start a fire. Then, he picked several relatively clean branches to use as racks. "I'll help you dry your clothes." Andrius thought back to the Medicine Sect. If not for Kate, he did not know what state he would be in right now. Whether he could have survived was another question altogether. Thus, he wanted to do something to help Kate. He stepped forward to take her "Wait..." pants. Kate noticed Andrius reach over and realized something was wrong, but she was too late. Andrius had already picked up her pants, and her words got stuck in her throat. "What's wrong?" He looked up at her and saw that she had turned completely red in an instant. He comforted her and said, "Don't worry, I know how to be a gentleman. I won't do anything inappropriate." As he spoke, he unfolded the pants and was just about to hang them on the branch to dry. At that moment... Flutter! Flop! Two items fell out from inside the pants and landed on the ground. Andrius instinctively looked down. One item was shaped like a triangle with lace edges. The other looked like an eye mask, but much larger. Well then! Andrius instantly knew what those two items were and was extremely embarrassed. His face turned beet red. His right hand held the pants, not knowing if he should hang it up or give it back. Kate's face was red as well. Her heart pounded rapidly as if it might leap out of her throat. "I, uh..." "Um, you..." The two wanted to break the awkward silence and spoke at the same time. That only led to them stopping again, wanting to hear what the other had to say, and caused another pause in the conversation. The situation became increasingly awkward. "Ahem..." Kate cleared his throat and went up to Andrius to pick up the two items, saying nonchalantly, "I'll dry them. You can do your own thing." "Right..." Andrius felt like he had been granted a reprieve and quickly ran off. "Pfft..."

1) Kate suddenly burst into laughter as he watched him dash up the stone steps and disappear back into the main hall. Then, she began to dry her clothes seriously. Andrius went back to the mural but found it unexpectedly difficult to concentrate on the mural. The two distinct shapes kept invading his thoughts. “Phew...” He had no other choice but to close his eyes and focus. He took a deep breath and opened his eyes after half a minute, smiling wryly. “It really feels like my cultivation was for nothing.” He shook his head.