My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1459– Less Awkward Than It Used to Be

Byron did not expect his father to want to meet Estelle so soon.

After hanging up the call, Byron looked at the time. It was still early. He wanted to call Rosalie to tell her about it, but after pondering, he headed downstairs with his coat.

Downstairs, Mrs. Zora had prepared dinner. When she saw Byron, she said, "Sir, dinner is ready."

Byron paused and said, "You can have dinner. I won't be eating at home tonight."

Before Mrs. Zora could process what he had just said, he strode out of the manor.

Upon seeing Byron leaving, she was a little puzzled but soon realized what he meant.

Who else could make Byron go out with such an expression and leave the house in a hurry?

Byron was going to Rosalie's place again! He must be having dinner there that night.

When she heard the doorbell, Rosalie had just finished cooking dinner and was taking the kids to a table.

She put down her cutlery, got up, and looked at the intercom. She froze momentarily when she saw the person on the screen and opened the door.

Byron stood at the door, and his gaze on her was gentle.

After a few days abroad, Byron's attitude toward her had softened.

Although she was used to him being like this, Rosalie still felt strange.

After all, Byron was always cold to everyone.

"Why are you here? Didn't you say we should avoid meeting each other for a few days?" She gathered her thoughts and looked at the person before her, puzzled.

On the way back, Mary suggested they should avoid meeting each other for a few days if possible.

Rosalie decided to follow the plan strictly, but Byron visited her unexpectedly.

The man at the door lifted his eyebrows and quipped, "If you want to avoid scandals, shouldn't you invite me into the house? If I stand here for long, the paparazzi might take photos of this."

Rosalie was flustered and quickly made way for Byron to enter.

Carefully glancing outside, Rosalie ensured no one was around before she closed it.

Noticing her nervousness, Byron said, "Rest assured. I've ordered the bodyguards to check the area."

Rosalie was relieved.

The project would get back on track in a few days, and she did not want to go through what had happened the other day.

Upon seeing Byron, the little ones were excited. They stopped eating and approached him.

Rosalie could not believe it even now.

She had always thought Byron's character would not gain the children's favor. Unexpectedly, he was patient when he was with the kids.

Lucian and Nox favored him almost as much as they favored her.

Rosalie lamented and felt grateful at the same time.

The little ones loved him so much that she did not have to worry about them taking it badly when they found out they were his children...

She took a plate and a pair of cutlery for Byron. "Have you eaten yet? Why don't you have dinner with US?"

After getting along with Byron for quite some time, her perception of him changed. When she was with him, it felt less awkward than it used to be. He nodded and sat beside her.

"What's the matter? Why are you here at this hour?" Rosalie asked again.

Byron looked at the little ones and said, "I'll tell you about it later. Let's finish our meal first."

Noticing his expression, Rosalie understood his concern and stopped asking further.

A family of five was having a meal together, and the little ones enjoyed their dinner.

After dinner, knowing that Daddy and Mommy had something to say, the little ones obediently ran off to the garden to play.

Rosalie took the plates and cutlery to the kitchen. She thought the matter was serious and wanted to talk to Byron about it in her study.

Unexpectedly, when she turned around, she saw Byron standing outside the kitchen, folding his sleeves. 1

Before she realized what he was up to, he was already in the kitchen, looking like he was in his house. He took the plates she had washed and wiped them.

Rosalie was startled to see him do house chores. 1

That gave her the illusion that they were a married couple who had lived together for years.

Moreover, seeing President Lawrence doing household chores in the kitchen was unbelievable.

It shocked her to see that.

Byron casually stated his intention to visit her, "My dad said he wants to pick Estie up from kindergarten tomorrow."

Rosalie snapped out of her thoughts and said, "You..."

She remembered Byron had told her that if his parents wanted to meet Estelle, they had to ask for his permission.

Byron said, "I agreed to his request. He seems to have misunderstood your relationship with my mom. So, I thought I might as well let him see it for himself."

Although his father said nothing about it, Byron knew his father suspected Rosalie might have said something to Estelle, making Estelle dislike Melody.

Since he had such concerns, Byron did not mind letting him see why Estelle did not want to get along with Melody.

Rosalie nodded. "I understand. Estie might not be willing to leave my side for now, but I'll persuade her."

Byron looked at her gratefully. "Thank you."

Rosalie lowered her gaze and smiled. "Estie is their granddaughter, and they raised her. It's normal for the elderly to miss their grandchildren. However, Estelle is a little stubborn. I'll try convincing her, and I'm sure she'll agree."

However, she was still worried. She had no idea why Estelle repelled Melody's approach. She was afraid Melody would trigger Estelle's emotional side.

Byron seemed to see through her thoughts. He comforted her, "I'll talk to my mom about it and convince her. It must have been difficult for you before this to deal with things like that."

Rosalie froze and was touched by Byron's words.

She thought Byron would be neutral while dealing with her relationship with Melody.

Unexpectedly, he was on her side.

As for Melody's attitude toward them, it turned out that she was not the only one trying to make a change.

For a moment, she did not know how to describe her feelings.

After a while, she calmed down gradually. Then, she looked at Byron and thanked him softly, "Thank you."

Byron looked at her affectionately and said, "It's me who should thank you for everything you've done. You held on until now, even after my mom treated you like that."

Then, Byron's gaze on her deepened with a glimpse of remorse. "After making her realize her mistake, I want..."

Before he could finish, Rosalie smiled. Td be delighted to be part of your family if she can stop showing hostility toward the kids.”

Her tone was sincere without a trace of forgery.

When his eyes met her sincere gaze, he lost control and leaned over, getting closer to Rosalie.

Sensing his approach, Rosalie was a little bewildered and nervous.

Before she knew it, his lips were already on hers. His hand was on her waist, leaving no room for her to escape.

Fortunately, it was only a light kiss, and Byron soon let go of her lips.

Noticing that Rosalie was still in a daze, Byron could not control his hand touching her cheek.

‘You...’

After being stunned for a few seconds, Rosalie snapped out of it and felt embarrassed.

Byron had constantly sneak attacked her when they were abroad, and Rosalie later understood what made him do that.

However, she did nothing this time, yet that man still...

Byron looked at her innocently. “Sorry, I couldn’t help it.”

Rosalie glared at him upon hearing his excuse, but she could say nothing about it. All she could do was turn around as if nothing had happened and put the plates back in the cabinet.

They spent some time washing dishes. The little ones clung to Byron for some time when they came out, and he played with them.

Only when it was late at night did he get into his car and head home.

Rosalie and the kids watched him leave.

Back in the villa, Rosalie looked at Lucian and Nox, who lay in bed, and headed back to her bedroom to tuck Estelle into bed.

“Estie, is it okay if you return home with Grandpa and Grandma tomorrow?”

Lying on the bed, Rosalie mustered up her courage and tried to convince the little girl.

The smile on Estelle’s face disappeared when she heard that request. She hugged Rosalie’s arm and protested, “No! Estie wants to be with Mommy!”

Rosalie appeased the little girl’s emotion and hugged her. “Mommy also wants to be with Estie, but Grandpa and Grandma miss you. Why don’t you go and accompany them for a few days and Mommy will pick you up from their place, okay?”

At last, the little one stopped resisting after Rosalie persuaded her for quite sometime.

The following day, Rosalie drove the kids to kindergarten. When she was about to leave, Estelle grabbed onto her shirt and was reluctant to let go.

Rosalie comforted Estelle patiently for some time before Estelle finally was willing to go to the classroom.

Estelle was moody all day as she was about to part with Rosalie and had to head to her grandparents’ place.

In the afternoon, the kindergarten held a fun sports day. Only then did Estelle finally smile. She played with other kids as Lucian and Nox guided her.

The teachers were happy to see Estelle was energetic and lively again.

“I didn’t expect Rosalie to be Estelle’s birth mother.”

The principal lamented.

Only when the principal talked did the crowd dare to gossip.

“Yes. I didn’t expect Estie, Lucian, and Nox to be triplets. No wonder the little girl who was previously always alone started to get close to the boys.

From then on, she’s always clinging to them.”

Miss Leigh Ann was delighted to see the kids getting along well.

She had been teaching Estie for quite some time and was sincerely happy to see Estelle getting better.

Lucille noticed that the principal and Miss Leigh Ann seemed to be on Rosalie's side. She was annoyed. However, she still chose to go with the flow. "Indeed! Those wealthy people are sometimes difficult to understand."

Miss Leigh Ann looked at her strangely.

She felt Lucille was trying to say something else through her words.

Sensing Miss Leigh Ann's gaze, Lucille smiled casually and said, "However, they have a happy ending now. The kids have a family with both parents, and that's the best thing ever for them."

Only then did Miss Leigh Ann dissipate her doubts about Lucille and nod.

A cold murderous intent flashed across Lucille's eyes when Miss Leigh Ann stopped staring at her.

Rosalie's family had a happy ending because that b*tch snatched her best friend's place as Mrs. Lawrence.

Wendy would not have ended up like this if it were not for them!

She swore to teach the family a lesson for her best friend!

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1462– Never Got A Chance

As Lucille watched the little ones play happily not far away, she could not help but think of the days when she scrimped and saved abroad.

If not for Wendy, she would have had trouble continuing her studies.

Initially, Wendy planned to give her a job at Fuller Industries when she returned.

Lucille was grateful that Wendy would help her no matter what.

When Wendy complained about Rosalie, Lucille also started hating Rosalie.

However, neither expected the Fuller family to fall before Lucille returned.

According to Wendy, the biggest reason her family perished was that Rosalie snatched her man and even instigated Byron to hurt her. Only then did Byron intend to destroy her family.

First, Rosalie hurt Lucille's only friend. Second, Rosalie was the reason Fuller Industries perished, making Lucille lose her opportunity to get a good job.

Lucille would, of course, hate Rosalie.

Her return to the country and choosing to work at the kindergarten was also Wendy's idea.

Since Rosalie had disrupted their lives, they naturally had to seek revenge on her!

When Lucille knew Wendy's plan, she agreed to cooperate without hesitation.

She intended to lay her hands on the little bastards to teach Rosalie a lesson. However, she never got a chance to do so these few days.

The sports day was her best chance.

Lucille's eyes almost never left the three kids. Her mind spun fast as she thought about what to do.

Meanwhile, the three children were focused on the competition.

The game they took part in was arranging puzzles.

Since it was a competition, the teacher gave them a few challenging puzzles to arrange. It would provide the kids with more time to experience the game.

Although other children were also born into wealthy families and attended extra classes, they were still troubled by the difficulty of the puzzles.

Lucian and Nox completed their puzzles effortlessly and dusted their hands with smug expressions. However, they noticed Estelle making the same gesture when they turned around.

The little ones looked at each other, thinking their sister had not finished the puzzle. They were about to teach her when they saw that Estelle had completed the puzzle before her!

"Estie, you're so clever!"

Nox praised her in his cute voice.

Estelle smirked, feeling delighted and proud.

Other children saw them finishing so fast and forgot about their puzzles. They approached the three siblings and praised them.

The three little ones were surrounded by kids who were flattering them.

The next project was to cross the obstacle blindfolded, and the three kids cooperated well. Lucian and Nox moved much faster, finishing their part first. Then, they took off their blindfolds and began to help Estelle.

Under the guidance of her two brothers, the little girl also finished quickly, smiling brighter.

The little ones were addicted to the competition, unaware of Lucille's gaze on them.

The principal and teachers were also paying attention to the children.

Lucille thought for a long time and finally came up with an idea. Then, she carefully looked around.

Upon seeing that she was not being noticed, she quietly backed away from the crowd and went to the equipment room.

In the equipment room were the sneakers that the children would need for the next session.

The kids' parents prepared the shoes and arranged them neatly in the shoe cabinet with the children's names plastered on the front.

Lucille searched the cabinet and found Nox's shoes in the outermost cabinet. She took them with a sinister smile on her face.
