My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1505– A Complete Fool

Melody shook her head, her face downcast, unwilling to say another word.

The fact that she got cheated on by someone like Wendy was shameful enough for her.

Worse still, she had to admit it in front of Rosalie!

From her response, Byron and Rosalie looked at each other with heavy emotions in their eyes.

“What do you want the police to do with her?” Benedict expressed concern.

Byron said calmly, “She should be dealt with according to the crimes she did. However, now that Wendy has gone off the radar, we must locate her whereabouts to be able to do something.”

Hearing this, Melody frowned. “Why didn’t you tell me about such an important matter earlier? If I had known earlier, I wouldn’t have spoken to her in that tone!”

If Melody had known earlier, even at the expense of her disgust she would pretend to care for that woman to lure her back!

Byron knew what his mother was thinking. He said, “She is very cautious. I asked you to call only to give it a try. I didn’t have much hope anyway.”

Benedict quickly held on to Melody as he sensed that his wife was about to get angry again.

“Since the matter has been clarified, your mother and I will not bother you. If you need my help, please contact me at any time. I will also send more people to help locate Wendy’s whereabouts.”

Under her husband’s embrace, Melody suppressed her anger and said coldly, ‘TH talk to Magdalene and her family again. I’ll ask them to persuade Wendy to surrender and obey the law as soon as possible!’

Byron saw that his mother finally got over her obsession with Wendy. With a smile on his face, he nodded and agreed.

“You two should rest early, too.’ Benedict gave another meaningful exchange as he led Melody to the gate.

Once they left the manor and sat in the car, Melody was in deep remorse.

“Why didn’t I see how cruel and merciless Wendy was before?! Our baby Estie is already so pitiful, yet she still causes harm to her!”

Benedict started the car slowly, turned his head, and glanced at her. “Well, I’ve already persuaded you not to meddle in Byron’s private life.”

Melody frowned and glanced at him. She was about to speak, but Benedict had already looked away.

“Why do you think Byron wouldn’t marry her after so many years? Why didn’t Estie accept her after so many years?”

Melody opened her mouth, but could not answer.

The answer was obvious. Their son could not let go of Rosalie, while Estie had already seen through Wendy’s true colors.

Melody was wracked with guilt and distress thinking of her little granddaughter being tortured by that woman for so many years, but unable to speak.

All these years, she was the person who has been pushing the little girl toward Wendy.

No wonder Little Estie has such a big prejudice against her now...

Benedict noticed that she was silent, so he asked again, “Just now, why did Byron ask you to call Wendy yourself?”

Melody had already realized why and replied reluctantly.

“He just wanted me to see the true colors of that woman. Tell me, dear, am I a complete fool?”

Benedict said earnestly. “No matter who becomes the Young Lady of the Lawrence family, this is a matter that only Byron should decide. If you still insist on intervening, there is no guarantee that you won’t meet someone like Wendy next time. Would you be happy to hand over your son and the Corporation to a woman like that?”

Melody knew she was wrong. Her husband’s statement was irrefutable, so she snorted coldly and stopped talking.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1506– Regretting It

After Melody and Benedict left, Rosalie looked at the time.

“It’s getting late, I should go back. I don’t feel at ease when the children are at home by themselves.”

Byron frowned slightly, then said, “I’ll send you.”

Indeed, it was late now. With Wendy’s whereabouts unknown, she may appear at anytime to threaten Rosalie’s life. Byron was worried about letting her go back by herself.

Rosalie knew that he was worried about her, so she did not refuse. ‘ Alright, thanks for the ride.”

The two got into the car. Byron started the car and drove towards Rosalie’s house.

On the way, they talked about Wendy.

’I wonder where Wendy is now. I will never be at ease if she is still at large...

Rosalie looked at the scenery outside the window with melancholy in her eyes.

Byron slowed down the speed of the car. His deep voice soothed her. “The evidence is solid. The police will not let her go unpunished, and I will do my best to locate her whereabouts. Before that, I will have my men protect you in secret.”

The thought of this crisis being discovered by Byron in time puts Rosalie’s tense emotions at ease, “Thank you.”

What happened this time made Rosalie doubt herself again.

She had to admit that she really could not take good care of the children by herself. She could not even guarantee their basic safety.

“I should be the one apologizing to you.”

Byron saw through her self-blame, and his gaze deepened. “If it wasn’t for me, Wendy would not have messed with you and the children. It was my negligence for not protecting you well before.”

Rosalie frowned slightly, just about to say something.

Byron continued, "Starting today, I will send more people around you.

Besides, I will think of other ways to ensure your safety."

Rosalie swallowed her words. She just turned around and said, "I hope Wendy will be caught as soon as possible. Hopefully, she would turn over a new leaf after."

Byron nodded in response.

The two chatted a little more. It was already after eleven o'clock at night when the car stopped at the gate of Rosalie's house.

After a busy day at the research institute, Rosalie experienced such terror at night. Her emotions went on a rollercoaster ride. Inevitably, she was exhausted from the day.

In addition, Byron drove the car slowly on purpose, which lulled her sleepiness even more.

When she got out of the car, her eyes turned blurry.

'It's getting late, drive safe on your way back.'" Almost instinctively, she insisted on telling Byron.

Upon the little woman's care for him despite being sleepy, Byron could not help but raise his hand and touched her face.

Rosalie's eyes became slightly focused, and she looked at him blankly.' What's wrong?"

Byron said tenderly, "Maybe I was in shock by what happened earlier and I don't want you to go."

Rosalie subconsciously found it humorous. "Nonsense."

She could not imagine how frightened Byron was. She never thought anything would ever scare the fearless man.

The grin on her face had not dissipated yet. Suddenly, she was pulled into his arms.

Different from the hug at the study room door, Byron's embrace was a little cautious now.

'How long do you want me to wait?"

Rosalie was stunned. Her hand that was about to wrap around his waist stopped mid-air and then she retracted timidly.

Sensing her movement, Byron's arms tightened suddenly. "Are you regretting it?"
