My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1539-Suddenly, Rosalie's heart was moved by his gaze.

Without Melody, dinner was filled with warmth.

For the first time, Byron didn't have to leave in a hurry after dinner. The little ones could stay with their parents until late at night.

The three little ones had a great time.

However, Rosalie's mind was preoccupied while Byron still had some business to deal with. They only managed to spend a short time with the little ones before sending them to bed.

The two went into the study room and the bedroom respectively.

It was so natural as if they had lived together for a long time.

Rosalie came out of the bathroom. The bedroom was still empty, and Byron had not come back yet.

She checked the time. It was already late.

Rosalie wanted to drop in to remind him to rest early.

As soon as she walked to the door, the mobile phone on the bedside table suddenly rang.

Rosalie had to turn back, pick up the phone, and took a look.

It was Xander.

Rosalie stared at the caller ID, kept thinking of what happened in the afternoon, and hesitated whether to answer it or not.

The phone rang for a while, with no sign of hesitation on the other end.

Rosalie brushed aside the discomfort in her heart and picked up the call." Young Master Xander, it's so late now. What's the matter?"

On the other end, Xander sounded apologetic. "Sorry, did I wake you up? I didn't want to disturb you at this hour, but I feel that I need to apologize for what happened in the afternoon."

Hearing this, Rosalie's eyes flashed with confusion.

Xander's attitude switched too quickly.

She suppressed the awkwardness in her heart and smiled politely. "It's nothing, you just had a little too much to drink, I'll just pretend I didn't hear it."

Xander sighed, "Alright, then. Actually... After knowing your relationship with President Lawrence, I wanted to bury those words in my guts. I thought that after some time, I will gradually see you as a partner as we work together. I did not expect that got carried away, accidentally drank too much, and started talking nonsense."

After finishing speaking, he asked again with great concern, "I lost my composure this afternoon. I hope I didn't scare you, did I?"

What he said just now was almost a confession to Rosalie again.

Rosalie frowned slightly, and her tone became estranged. "No, Young Master Xander, you just said something that shouldn't be said. If you want to apologize, don't mention it again."

Xander's eyes turned cold from her reply, but his tone was somewhat cautious.

"I see, I will pay attention in the future. By the way, you told me several times today about the distribution of profits. This matter should indeed be decided earlier. I was so happy today that I delayed the business matters."

Rosalie became a little more natural when he mentioned work. "Since we are on the same page now, would you have time tomorrow? Shall we talk?"

Xander wanted to meet earlier as well, so he agreed without hesitation. "Yes, then I will meet you at your research institute tomorrow."

Rosalie thought about it, nodded, and agreed.

The two agreed on a time, then hung up the phone.

Just then, Byron opened the door and came in to see her putting the phone down. He frowned and asked, "It's so late, who called?"

Rosalie rather focused on the purpose of the call than dwelled on Xander's antics. "Young Master Xander called me to make an appointment to meet tomorrow. I was supposed to go to Lancer Corporation to talk to him.

Come to think of it, it was his responsibility to delay this matter until now, so I decided to meet him at the research institute."

More importantly, after Xander's confession, Rosalie felt safer in her territory.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1540- Devoted

Since Byron was going to face Xander with her tomorrow, he did not ask further and went to bed early with Rosalie in his arms.

At first, Rosalie thought it was a little inappropriate. Then, when she considered what they had already done last night, there was nothing left to hide. She obediently lay in his arms and fell asleep.

The next morning, the two of them woke up early, and Byron personally drove her to the research institute.

The two checked the details of the contract in Rosalie's office, waiting for Xander's arrival.

With Byron's guidance, Rosalie became more certain about the details of this partnership.

At nine o'clock in the morning, Xander appeared at Rosalie's office on the dot.

He saw Rosalie sitting on the single sofa at the side, while Byron lounged on the couch in the middle, discussing something with his head down.

Although they were not on the same sofa, their gestures were intimate.

For a moment, Xander's eyes darkened at the presence of the other man.

"Young Master Xander."

Sensing his arrival, Rosalie greeted him with a smile.

Due to Byron's presence, Rosalie's demeanor seemed very relaxed.

Xander put away the astonishment in his heart, nodded to her with a smile, and then looked at Byron who was sitting leisurely by the side.

'What a coincidence that President Lawrence is also here. However, Miss Jacobs and I have a business to talk about later. I wonder if it's convenient for President Lawrence...'

In the politest way possible, he asked Byron to leave.

Before he could finish his sentence, he met with Byron's warning eyes.

"It's inconvenient indeed. There shouldn't be anything between Young Master Xander and Rosalie that needs to be kept from me."

Xander's expression froze for a moment. "It's about the partnership between Lancer Corporation and the research institute."

Byron pulled his lips lightly. "All the more needless to hide it from me. The Lawrence Corporation is not involved in the medical field. Even if I knew the details of your cooperation, I have no right to intervene. What's more. Young Master Lancer should also trust Rosalie's integrity to the contract."

From Byron's expression, Xander knew that he was determined not to leave. The latter's face sank and smirked. "Then may I ask, in what capacity is President Lawrence sitting in our discussion today?"

Byron raised his eyebrows slightly, and his eyes drifted to Rosalie's face.

Rosalie noticed the stalemate between the two of them and felt helpless. However, she somewhat leaned towards Byron, so she looked at Xander and explained to him.

"Sorry, I didn't explain it to you in advance. I don't know enough about business, so I hired President Lawrence as my consultant."

After that, she turned to look at the person beside her, and seek his approval with her eyes.

Byron nodded in satisfaction.

Xander frowned and smiled inexplicably. "President Lawrence willing to stoop down to be Miss Jacobs' consultant, no wonder she's so devoted to you!"

Regardless of whether Xander was sincere or not, Byron accepted it calmly. "It is my honor to be Rosalie's consultant." "Okay, it's getting late, let's start! I'm afraid it will be lunchtime if we drag it on."

Rosalie did not want to see these two bosses arguing in front of her anymore, so she changed the topic to business.

Xander nodded with his arms folded in front of his chest, and sat down on the single sofa opposite her, assuming a businesslike posture.

‘Miss Jacobs, you’re so anxious, President Lawrence must’ve given you some great ideas just now, so you might as well lay it out for me now.’
