My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1584- Right And Proper

Byron answered differently than she had expected. "If selling it for a low price benefits us, I won't give in." "However, Xander doesn't want to accept it, and the cooperation will break." Rosalie could not understand.

That was what happened to her for not giving in.

Byron said expressionlessly, "I'll force him to cooperate with me."

Rosalie's forehead puckered as she asked, "What will you do?"

Byron said, "Scandal. Lancer Corporation has been established for a hundred years. Outsiders would think they're benevolent doctors. However, they refuse to lower the price of the drug. If I expose this to the public, the Lancer family will have to accept this low price because of the scandal no matter how reputable they were."

Rosalie nodded and felt she had learned something new.

However...

"This means we have to sacrifice the Lancer family's reputation. I can do it, but you can't."

Byron knew Rosalie well enough that he saw through her thought.

Rosalie nodded.

The Lancer family had a high status in the industry for years. Rosalie felt the Lancer family was a family she adored.

Moreover, the price of the drug was Xander's sole decision.

She did not want to ruin the Lancer family's name because of that.

If she did this, the traditional medicine industry would be affected.

"I can't do that."

She felt dejected again. "However, I've contacted most suppliers and found none which can replace Lancer Corporation."

Byron noticed Rosalie was troubled and lifted his eyebrow. "Maybe I can help."

Rosalie's eyes lit up, but she still hesitated. "This is the research institute's matter, and I can't always seek your help..." "The research institute needs a supplier urgently, and you have no other way," Byron convinced her.

Rosalie wanted to retort, but she could say nothing.

Byron continued as he looked into her eyes. "Moreover, I'm not doing this for free."

Rosalie looked at Byron in a puzzle. "You want a share of the profit?"

Even Byron was startled when Rosalie said that.

After a while, Byron smiled. "If it were others who needed my help, I would have taken advantage of the situation and gotten the profits from them."

Rosalie was nervous.

If Byron wanted part of the share, Rosalie would have to be his business partner.

She felt her head aching upon even thinking of it.

"However, since it's you, I have something else that I want," Byron said.

Rosalie was relieved but was still confused.

Byron whispered something in her ear and sat back in his seat, smiling.

A flush crept up Rosalie's face. She was still hesitating.

Byron did not force her to give him an answer and drove her back to the research institute.

When they were at the research institute, he turned his head and asked, "So, have you considered my offer?"

Rosalie had been pondering, and she gave in as she nodded helplessly.

Byron was happy to see her nod. He unbuckled his seat belt and kissed Rosalie.

Only when Rosalie could not catch her breath did she push his shoulder. Understanding what she meant, Byron let go of her.

"Let me know if the research institute faces any trouble during this time. I can support you financially anytime."

Byron reminded Rosalie.

Rosalie felt it was inappropriate and looked at the man beside her. "Why do I feel like you're taking care of me like a sugar daddy? You're even taking care of the welfare of the research institute."

Byron shook his head. "You're Mrs. Lawrence. It's right and proper for you to spend my money."

Rosalie's face flushed red, and she said nothing since she did not plan to take any money from him.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1585-After Rosalie entered the research institute, Byron made a U-turn and drove to Quirke Enterprise.

When he was at his destination, Andrius happened to be back from outside and was heading to his office.

"Byron, did you miss me today?"

Andrius quipped when he saw Byron.

When he saw the smile on Byron's face, he was shocked. "Wait! Are you really Byron? Did you make yourself look like Byron and enter my company, you intruder?"

Byron's expression turned cold, and he looked at Andrius speechlessly.

"That's right. Now, this is the Byron I know."

Andrius was finally sure the person who walked in was his best friend. He took Byron to his office.

"Why did you come here all of a sudden?" Andrius poured himself and Byron a cup of tea each. They sat on the sofa, and he was so curious that he asked, "You and Rosalie..."

Byron glanced at him and said, "I need you to help Rosie with something."

Andrius agreed without hesitation. "Since you've asked, I'll be glad to help."

Byron continued, "Please..."

Shocked, Andrius exclaimed, "Do you have to use the word 'please'? We're best friends. I'll blame myself if you use this word and I fail to help you."

Byron continued with his usual tone, "Find a supplier or production plantation which can supply the research institute with medicinal materials with the same quality as Lancer Corporation as soon as possible. Agree to whatever price they offer." 1

Andrius' smile froze upon hearing that. He chuckled awkwardly. 'This matter is challenging. I think the 'please' suits it..."

Byron lifted his eyebrow, but his gaze was threatening.

Andrius quickly explained, "Byron, you don't know much about the pharmaceutical industry and know nothing about the quality of the Lancer family's supply. They're famous today for a reason. It'll be difficult to get medicinal materials with the same quality as the Lancer family's."

Byron's expression remained unchanged.

Andrius shuddered and changed his attitude. "However, I think there are still possibilities of finding a supplier that can do it. It's just that this will be a troublesome and tough job..." "Lawrence Corporation has a new project. Maybe Quirke Enterprise could take it."

Byron spoke casually.

He knew Andrius wanted something in return.

Indeed, Andrius was interested in the project. However, he wanted to know why Byron was going through all this trouble more than anything now.

"Did the cooperation between Lancer Corporation and the research institute fail?" he asked carefully.

Byron nodded.

Andrius lamented when he got the answer he wanted. 'This is great! With that, you won't need to be afraid Rosalie will be too close to Xander."

Byron sipped the tea and said, "If you can get me the supplier, I won't have to worry about Xander. Other men will be unable to take Rosalie away from me as well."

Andrius was startled.

It took him some time to digest what Byron meant. He guessed, "Did she accept your proposal?"

Byron smiled and looked pleased. "Kind of. However, I have to get this matter done."

Andrius sighed and lamented again, "You two are finally getting married again after so long."

He now understood why Byron was smiling when he entered the building.

Then, Andrius swore to Byron, "Since you've said so, I'll get this done for Estie and you! Wait for my good news!"

Byron chuckled and toasted Andrius.

They drank the tea like they were drinking wine.
