My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1599-They Won't Be Lost

Lucian and Nox could not wait to get upstairs to their room after they had appeased Mrs. Zora.

Then Lucian called Estie's phone watch.

Immediately, Nox turned on the computer and quickly began to locate Estie's whereabouts.

He had previously modified his little sister's watch and added another repositioning function.

The watch can also be positioned through the computer.

"How is it? Can you locate her?"

Lucian could not get through her phone, so he poked his head over to see Nox's search result of Estie's location.

Nox frowned. His small face was serious. His forehead broke out in beads of sweat from the anxiety of the search.

After a while, he tapped the keyboard hard. "I found her!"

Lucian stared at the screen. He saw a small green dot moving around.

"Where is this?" He asked in puzzlement.

Not only did Nox successfully locate Estie, but he pinpointed her exact location.

The little boy immediately replied to his brother. "She's in a shopping mall very close to the amusement park. Little sister was here the entire afternoon."

Lucian nodded. "Well, if she's in a shopping mall, she should be shopping with Grandma."

With that, the two little boys became a little disappointed.

The shopping mall was so close to the amusement park. Based on Nox's real-time location, he could roughly determine when they arrived at the shopping mall. They probably arrived not long after they parted ways in the park.

Therefore, Grandma took their little sister to the mall just to stay away from them.

Is it true that Grandma despised them so much?

The little green dot on the screen was still moving around.

Lucian brushed away his disappointment, and said to Nox, "Keep watching, if there is a big deviation in little sister's positioning, we will call Grandma directly."

He feared that Grandma would take their little sister back to the old Family Mansion just to keep her away from them.

Nox nodded in agreement.

The two little guys stared at the screen eagerly.

After only half an hour, the green dot on the screen suddenly exceeded the scope of the shopping mall.

Lucian and Nox's hearts tightened.

Nox immediately worked at the computer and began to confirm the direction in which the green dot was headed.

The boys were relieved to see the green dot heading towards the Lawrence Manor. They turned off the computer and went downstairs to wait.

After a while, Melody walked in from the outside with Estie in her arms. The driver followed behind them, carrying multiple shopping bags in his hands.

"See, aren't they right here? Don't cry, I've already told you they won't be lost!" Melody grumbled angrily at Estie.

The little girl cried for as long as she took her around the mall!

No matter what Melody had been saying or buying to coax her, it did not work. All that effort made Melody very angry.

Estie broke away from Melody's embrace immediately as soon as she saw Lucian and Nox. She bawled and quickly ran to the two little brothers.

Lucian and Nox wiped away her tears in dismay. "Little sister, don't cry. Look, aren't we doing fine?"

Estie was crying, choked up, and said, "Sob... Estie doesn't want to be separated from my brothers. I don't want to go shopping, you're not there in the mall!"

Melody's face turned livid at her cries.

Lucian and Nox were very distressed. They tried their best to appease her." It's all our fault. We shouldn't have left Estie alone. We will take you with us wherever we go, okay?"

"Grandma said she called you, but you didn't answer..."

Estie was still a little aggrieved.

Hearing this, Lucian and Nox looked at Melody suspiciously.

Since when did Grandma call them?

On the contrary, all their calls to their little sister were hung up.

Now that Estie's eyes were swollen red from crying, the boys could not bear to tell her the truth. They just accommodated her question. "Our watch ran out of battery, and we just recharged it when we came back."

With that, they took another look at Melody.

Initially, Melody was worried that these two little boys would expose her lie. A look of surprise flashed across her eyes when she saw that they cooperated with her. She immediately turned cold again.

'They cooperated with me just to please me! I'm not so easy to please!'

Thinking of this, Melody stepped forward and said to Estie, "Okay, you're already home, and you've seen them both. Go and wash your face, your face is all messy with tears!"

Estie looked at the two little brothers aggrievedly.

Lucian and Nox looked at each other. They knew that Grandma must have something to say to them, so they nodded in agreement. "Daddy and Mommy will be back soon, they will be worried when they see you like this."

Estie reluctantly went into the bathroom.

Melody glared at Mrs. Zora again.

Mrs. Zora looked at Lucian and Nox worriedly, but she could not go against Melody. She had no choice but to walk away.

Only Melody and the two little ones were left in the living room.

Lucian stood in front of Nox and protected him. He looked up at the person in front of her.

Melody was condescending, looking at the two little ones in arrogance." Don't even think that I will accept you like this! Even if you serenade the moon for me, I will never accept you for you are not the descendants of the Lawrence family!"

Lucian frowned and retorted in his impish voice. "I think you have misunderstood; we just want to comfort our little sister; we are not trying to curry your favor!"

Melody's expression changed drastically when he refuted her. She was so angry that she almost reached out to grab the little b*stard's ears.

"You have a sharp tongue at a young age! I wonder who taught you this!

You have no manners at all!"

When Grandma scolded them like that, Nox could not help but retort. "If we have good manners, will you accept us?"

Melody almost laughed angrily. "How could you say you are not trying to curry favor with me? No matter how well-mannered and excellent you are, as long as you are not Byron's children, I can't accept you as part of the Lawrence family!"

Then, she issued a cold threat. "Will you complain to Byron and that woman? Let me tell you, I'm not afraid of your complaints because I dared to do it! I was just thinking about how to get you and your mother evicted from Lawrence Manor!"

She had been holding her breath for the past few days!

If these two little b*stards go to Byron and Byron argues with her about it, Melody will take this opportunity to drive these three people out!

Melody's words were very decisive.

She clearly expressed her intentions; she would never accept the two boys unless they were Byron's children!

Nox was very upset by what she said. He could not help but contradict her. "How can you be sure we're not? What if we are?"

Melody's complexion changed suddenly. Her eyes darted back and forth between them.

After a long while, she was adamant. "Impossible! Stop dreaming! Estie is Byron's only daughter!"

With that said, she turned and left with a long face.

Estelle washed her face and saw only Lucian and Nox in the living room. She was in a puzzle.

"Has Grandma left?"

Lucian and Nox snapped out of their daze. They suppressed their sadness but could not hide it all. They nodded slowly, answering Estelle's question.

Looking at her brothers' expressions, Estelle approached them seriously. "Did Grandma say something to you guys again?"

She could see that her brothers seemed a little upset.

Lucian smiled at Estelle, trying to appease her. "Nothing much. She asked us to take good care of you."

Then, he diverted the topic casually. "It's already so late. Why aren't Daddy and Mommy back yet?"

Estelle's focus was not on her brothers anymore when Lucian mentioned their parents. She stared at the door.

When Mrs. Zora had prepared dinner, she saw that the kids seemed listless unlike how they were usually. They sat on the sofa gloomily as they stared at the door.

"Young Masters, Little Lady, dinner is ready. Are you guys hungry? Do you want to have some first?"

Mrs. Zora could see the little ones in a bad mood and tried to coax them.

The kids shook their heads in unison.

Lucian said, "We aren't hungry. We'll wait for Daddy and Mommy to have dinner together later."

Mrs. Zora knew she could not change the kids' minds and stopped persuading them. She could only wait with them and pray that Master and Mrs. Lawrence would return soon.

Only at seven in the evening did they hear noises coming from outside.

Mrs. Zora glanced at the little ones.

They seemed to have heard the noises and strode to the door.

Outside the manor, Byron got out of the car and opened the front passenger's seat.

Rosalie got off the car.

They kissed naturally, but it was a light kiss.

When they turned around and headed to the door, Rosalie saw the three kids and froze.

Even though it was not the first time her children saw them kissing, she still felt embarrassed.

Rosalie glanced at Byron, blaming him for kissing her.

Byron smiled innocently at her and said, "I didn't notice them either..."

Usually, the kids would wait for them in the house. Never did they expect the kids to be outside today.

"Why are you three welcoming us home so eagerly today?"

Byron knew Rosalie felt shy and walked before her, blocking the triplets from staring at her.

The little ones felt wronged and subconsciously wanted to be close to their daddy and mommy.

However, they did not want to worry their parents.

Estelle and Nox did not know what excuse to come up with and looked at Lucian.

Lucian could only speak on their behalf as the big brother, "Daddy, why are you and Mommy back so late today? We've waited for so long."

Byron did not think much and touched the little ones' heads. "We've been busy at work these two days, and we finally had some time to bring you out."

Speaking about going out reminded them of what happened that afternoon, and they were not in the mood. However, they forced themselves to look happy.

Byron noticed something was wrong with the kids, and he frowned. "What's wrong? Why do you guys seem unhappy about going out? Do you feel unwell?"

Rosalie also noticed their strange reaction and stood beside them with concern.

The little ones looked at each other and pondered how to answer Byron's questions.
