My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1651-When Will Mommy Come Back

It was already nine o'clock in the evening when he left the hotel.

Byron started the car subconsciously, wanting to return to the hospital.

He was still worried about that little woman, even though Mary was by her bedside.

Just as he drove the car, his cell phone rang.

He looked at the screen. It was Nox.

When Byron saw the little guy's name, he remembered what Yves said in the afternoon. He could not help but feel a little warmth in his heart.

"Daddy, aren't you coming back tonight?" When the call connected, the little boy hurriedly spoke. His voice was full of grievances yet filled with expectations.

Byron could almost picture how aggrieved and desperate the three little ones looked at home.

'If Rosalie was awake, she would definitely go home to comfort them first.'

Thinking of this, Byron slowed down the car, turned around, and drove towards home. His deep voice was comforting the boy. "Already on my way back. Have you had dinner yet?"

Nox's voice became noticeably happier. "Not yet, we want to eat together when Daddy comes back!"

Byron was moved again. "Alright, Daddy will be home soon.'

The little boy's sweet, naive voice agreed.

After hanging up the phone, Byron raised his eyes and glanced at himself in the rearview mirror.

The man in the mirror had a solemn expression, his eyebrows tightly knit.

At a glance, one could tell that he was in a bad mood.

'If I go back like this, I'm afraid it will only frighten the three little ones.*

On the way back, Byron glanced at the rearview mirror from time to time to adjust his expression.

When the car stopped at the gate of Lawrence Manor, he had already concealed all the anger on his face and within his heart.

"Daddy!"

The little ones heard rustling outside the door and rushed out to greet him excitedly.

Uneasy, Mrs. Zora followed behind the kids.

She verified that it was really the Young Master who had returned, and she went back to the living room with peace of mind.

The three little ones circled around Byron enthusiastically.

Byron's heavy heart seemed to ease at the sight of them.

"Daddy, are you busy? Have you had dinner yet?" "Daddy, I'm so hungry. Let's go in and eat!"

Estie and Nox held Byron's hand with affection and led him inside.

Lucian also had a smile on his face, but it was tinged with worry.

The little boy's mood seemed off. Byron frowned slightly and asked with concern. "Lucian, what's wrong? What's on your mind?"

Lucian frowned and asked him with a puzzled look. "Daddy, where is Mommy? She would tell us in advance whenever she was on a business trip, and she would call us when she got there."

However, there was no news at all this time.

Moreover, they called yet Mommy did not answer.

Byron's eyes dimmed for a moment at the mention of Rosalie. He quickly adjusted himself and leaned over, gently stroking their little heads to comfort them.

"Mommy left in a hurry this time. She only had time to tell me that she went to the free clinic in the mountains, where the signal reception is not good. She will call us when there's a signal."

This was the excuse he came up with on the way home. This should not be suspicious to the little ones.

Sure enough, the little ones were not suspicious.

The only questions that came after they heard Rosalie had gone to the mountains were about safety issues in the mountains.

“Daddy, will there be wild beasts in the mountains? Will Mommy get hurt?” “Is the mountain very remote? Did Mommy go there alone?” “When is Mommy coming back?”

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1652-Byron answered every innocent question by the little ones.

Although he had thought through these questions, explaining them was not difficult, but he was emotionally weary after he finished.

It was harder for him to deceive them when facing their innocent little faces...

“Daddy, can we go find Mommy?”

Little Estie asked suddenly.

The little one had only known Rosalie for a short time, yet she was unwilling to leave her side for a single minute, let alone knowing that Rosalie had gone so far.

The expression on Byron’s face turned slightly stiff, revealing a sad emotion.

In the end, he remained silent for a few seconds, held it together, and looked at the little girl as if nothing had happened.

“Daddy is also very busy these days. There is no way to take you there.

Mommy would only be there for about a week. She will come back when you are on school holiday.”

Then, he quickly looked away, pretending to concentrate on eating, for fear of being noticed by the little ones.

Fortunately, the little ones did not think too much. They were just a little disappointed.

“Why did Mommy have to go for so long? I hope that when we come back on Friday night, Mommy will be waiting for us at home...”

Byron’s emotions, which he had held back with great difficulty, surged again. The pain was so heavy that he could hardly breathe.

His Adam’s apple rolled a few times before he answered in a deep voice.” Yes, Mommy will be waiting for you at home when you come back.”

The little ones only thought he was tired, so they settled down sensibly. They cut up the food on their plate and put it on his.

Byron’s emotions became even heavier.

The meal was tasteless.

After dinner, the little ones stayed close to him, wanting him to play with them for a while.

However, Byron could not bear to face the little ones anymore. He had to forcefully hand them over to Mrs. Zora and stepped out again.

“Daddy, where are you going?”

Lucian was puzzled as he saw Daddy walking toward the door. “Aren’t you staying at home tonight?”

Byron’s eyes were filled with pain. He stopped upon hearing the little boy and raised his hand to rub the center of his eyebrows. He adjusted his expression and then turned to face the boy.

“Daddy has something to discuss with Uncle Andrius, I’ll be spending the night at his place. You have to listen to Mrs. Zora and go to bed early.”

The little boy felt strange and stared at his Daddy’s face. “Daddy, did something go wrong in the company?”

With Mommy’s past response as a reference, the little one only thought that Daddy had encountered problems at work.

Byron responded. “Well, it’s not a big deal. Daddy can handle it, but I might be a little busy these two days.”

Byron still remembered how the little ones cried their eyes out the last Rosalie had an accident.

'This time, there is no need to let them know.

'They just need to wait at home sensibly...'

When the little ones heard that something happened at Daddy's company, they put away their playful thoughts and became serious.

Little Estie ran over with little legs and hugged him, cheering him up in her childlike voice. "You can do this, Daddy! Daddy is the best!"

Lucian and Nox also came to hug him.

Byron held the three little ones in his arms, and his mood gradually settled down. "Daddy got this. I will do my best."

Then, he stroked the heads of the little ones, asked Mrs. Zora to watch over them, and drove away by himself.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1653-At this moment, Mary's phone call came in.

Byron frowned. His first immediate response was to ask about Rosalie's condition. "How is Rosalie?"

Mary glanced at her best friend on the hospital bed and said with a heavy tone, "There is nothing unusual for now, but we've discussed it all afternoon. No result so far."

After that, she sighed helplessly.

This made Byron's heart heavier. "I'm on my way right now."

Mary said, "There's no point for you to come here, you don't have medical skills anyway. I called to ask you, have you visited the Quirke family?"

The Quirke family was formidable in the medical world too.

If the Quirkes could lend a hand, they were likely to find out what material Rosalie inhaled.

After Mary mentioned the Quirke family, Byron kicked into action. "I'm going there now."

Mary nodded.

The two did not say anything more and hung up the phone.

Byron was so anxious that he forgot the biggest help in front of him.

If Mary had not called, it would not have crossed his mind...

Late night.

Andrius sat in his study with his legs crossed, methodically arranging tomorrow's work plan with his assistant.

He would never have guessed that the Quirke family secured a massive deal for nothing by simply providing a lead.

The new drug developed by Rosalie would be a huge sensation in the entire pharmaceutical industry.

And the Quirke family was about to be involved with this new drug. This would more or less add credentials to the Quirke Enterprise portfolio!

Andrius could not help but sigh in his heart when he thought of the future of the Quirke family after the new drug was launched.

When he first met Rosalie, he was in luck. Choosing to help his brother chase Rosalie was the best decision of his life!

Rosalie has brought countless benefits to the Quirke family!

From the resources acquired after the downfall of the Fuller family to this new drug now...

Regardless of financial resources or reputation, the development of the Quirke family was all thanks to Rosalie!

'When the new drug is on the market, I must express my gratitude properly!'

Just as he was thinking about the future, the housekeeper's voice suddenly sounded at the study room door. 'Master, President Lawrence is here. He's waiting for you downstairs.'

Andrius suddenly put away his thoughts upon hearing this. "Why did you make him wait downstairs? Just let him come up directly!"

The two families were tight. He and Byron were as close as brothers. When did he ever let him wait downstairs?

The butler was about to go downstairs when Andrius came out of the study.

“If he’s here at this hour, maybe there is something wrong. Forget it, let me go down!”

Then, he strode downstairs.

As soon as he arrived downstairs, he saw Byron sitting on the sofa, drinking tea with his head hung low.

If one did not know, one would think that what he was holding was a wine glass.

“Buddy, why are you here so late?” Andrius’ heart sank slightly. He strode over to sit beside Byron and poured himself a cup of tea.

Andrius took a glance into Byron’s cup, there was barely any tea left so he filled it up casually.

In the next second, Byron picked it up and took a gulp.

Andrius glanced carefully, only to see the full cup had only half left, even the tea leaves in it were significantly gone.

Only then, did Andrius realize immediately that his brother was in a terrible mood.

‘Don’t tell me something happened to Rosalie, right?’

Apart from this, Andrius could not think of any other reason that would make Byron’s face look so bad.

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1654- Created An Opportunity

“Why are you here alone? Where’s sister-in-law?”

Andrius asked carefully.

The atmosphere turned grim at the mention of Rosalie.

Andrius kept quiet and stayed silently by his buddy's side, waiting for him to speak first.

After an unknown amount of time, Byron spoke. His voice cracked from exhaustion.

"Something happened to Rosalie."

Andrius had already guessed it. However, his heart still dropped to his gut when he heard Byron's tone.

Based on his understanding of Byron, Rosalie must have encountered a massive problem this time.

He offered. 'Is there anything I can do to help?'

Byron put down his teacup and leaned back on the sofa. He raised his hands to cover his eyes and spoke in a heavy voice.

"Xander poisoned her... Rosalie has been in a coma for one day. I have called so many doctors, but they are helpless about her situation. Those people don't even know what poison affected her!"

Andrius was shocked. 'Xander? How dare he...'

Then, in mid-sentence, he saw Byron's face. Andrius suppressed the shock in his heart and immediately kicked into solution mode.

"Don't worry, the Quirke family still has connections in the medical field after so many years. Many famous doctors chose to withdraw from society. Even if you have money, you can't hire them. I should be able to seek out one or two doctors if I use my grandpa's name to ask them for help. I will send someone to deliver invitations!"

As he said that, he took out his mobile phone and called his assistant, asking him to prepare invitations overnight and send them to those hidden masters.

Byron's voice was hoarse yet grateful. "Thank you."

Andrius frowned unhappily. 'No thanks are needed between us. If we had to be so formal, I'd have to kneel and bow in front of you and my sister-in-law. You both have helped me so much before this.'

With the Fuller family's resources alone, the size of Quirke Enterprise has expanded nearly twice as much as before.

Not to mention Rosalie's new drug. The Quirke family's reputation would soar to greater heights after the drug is on the market.

Byron sighed deeply but did not answer.

Andrius comforted him. "Don't worry, my sister-in-law is blessed. She has saved so many patients daily. God won't let her down so easily.'

Despite that, Andrius felt a little uncertain.

'The Lancer family had been hiding from the world for many years, with a century-old heritage in the research of medicinal materials.

'I don't know what insidious method Xander used...' "I hope so."

Byron sat up and reached out to grab the cup, trying to calm the turmoil in his heart with more tea, but the hand holding the cup trembled unconsciously.

Andrius was alarmed.

He had always known that Byron deeply loved Rosalie, but he never thought that Rosalie's situation would terrify him like this!

He also knew that he was the only person Byron would show such vulnerability to.

'Once Byron stepped out of here, he would return to the outside world as the impenetrable President Lawrence again.'

Thinking of this, Andrius could not help feeling sorry for his best friend.

No one knew better than him how difficult it was for these two people to get together.

No one would expect that after finally getting together, they would encounter this...

"She could've avoided this."

Byron's tone was heavy with self-blame.

Andrius looked at him puzzled.

Byron said, "She was in negotiation with Xander about the new medicine. I gave her an idea that solidify her persistence toward the negotiation. She went to Xander again and again, but unexpectedly, her attempts to meet created an opportunity for Xander to attack her."

The little woman would not care about the profit sharing if he never mentioned it.

'We could have avoided this situation if we had agreed on a 50-50 split with Xander from the start...'

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1655-Andrius could not say anything but just comfort him wryly.

"It's not your fault, it's Xander's fault. No matter what you do, he will find an opportunity to attack sister-in-law."

After he finished, he remembered something else. "He must have some other purpose for doing this. What is it?"

Byron did not intend to hide it from Andrius, so he briefly talked about the negotiation between himself and Xander that night.

"Is he crazy?"

Andrius' face was full of disbelief when he heard about the conditions.

'Forget about the ten most profitable subsidiaries of the Lawrence Corporation. With Byron's ability, they could make up for it soon.

'The partnership with Rosalie's research institute. She is still in a coma, why should they decide for her?

'Moreover, Byron had to marry another woman!

'What was Xander thinking?'

Byron's eyes were also full of disgust. "I have no problem with other conditions, except for the last one. I will never agree." 'It was hard for him to win that little woman's heart, and he would never let her go again!

'Even if she dies, she will die with him!'

Although Byron's thoughts were not spoken aloud, Andrius felt the aura around him, and his heart felt inexplicably tight.

They were brothers who grew up together. So Andrius just shuddered and brushed it off, nodding in agreement.

"Xander has gone too far, and his greed is immense. Sooner or later, he will suffer the consequences."

With solemn expressions, the two discussed their plans for three days later.

By that time, if they still could not find a way to wake Rosalie up, and Xander insists on these three conditions...

Meanwhile, in the kitchen.

When Andrea went downstairs to get water and heard Byron arrive.

She did not dare face Byron because of the stupid things she had done before. So, she just wanted to wait for him to go upstairs before sneaking up by herself.

However, unexpectedly, her brother came down from upstairs, and the two sat on the sofa and chatted.

Andrea did not dare to make a sound and listened to their topics. She even suppressed her breathing desperately, for fear that they would discover her existence.

From the conversation between her brother and Byron in the living room, Andrea could not help feeling terrified.

Even though she did not like Rosalie and resisted her being with Byron, she never thought that Rosalie would encounter such a thing.

Xander would resort to poisoning her, to the point where many famous doctors were helpless...

Andrea was even thankful that when she was with Wendy before, she was not stupid enough to offend Xander.

'I never knew that Xander was such a hypocrite!'

After feeling emotional for a while, Andrea could not help feeling worried again.

'If something happened to Rosalie because of Xander's poison, then my plan with that man would also fail...'

Realizing this, Andrea felt that she had to find time to contact that man.

She must tell him about this matter and discuss what to do next.

In the living room, Andrius and Byron were so focused on Rosalie's affairs that they did not notice that there were other people in the kitchen.

"It's getting late. Do you have to go back to the hospital?" Andrius asked him when the two ended their discussion at the break of dawn.

Byron nodded deeply. "I'm worried."

Andrius did not want to keep him anymore and sent him to the door. "I'll visit my sister-in-law tomorrow, be careful on the way."

Byron nodded silently, leaving with his back turned.

Soon, the lights of the Bentley came on, and Byron drove away.
