My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1762-Meanwhile, Rosalie still looked pale. It was uncertain if it was because she was in a bad mood or that her body was weak.

Byron was worried. After leaving the hotel, he took her for lunch and drove her to the hospital for a body check-up.

Rosalie knew he was worried and cooperated with him.

After confirming that her body examination results were normal, Byron was relieved.

"I know my health. The poison has been cleared."

Rosalie comforted Byron. "Too many things happened in one day, and I can't take it. I'll be fine in a while."

Rosalie lamented how two-faced Xander was. It was because of him that Lancer Corporation perished in just one day.

Byron hugged Rosalie as he spoke in his deep voice, "Lancer Corporation became like this because of Xander. The Lancer family has to bear the responsibility because they didn't realize what he had been doing. So, it's their fault that Lancer Corporation perished."

If Lancer Corporation was left to continue developing, they might do something worse.

A more significant issue might occur even if Byron did not investigate and expose what the Lancer family had been doing.

Rather than letting more patients suffer, the current outcome was a good ending for Lancer Corporation, i

Rosalie understood that but could not help feeling pity for what had happened.

Even the Lancer family, which was a legend in the industry, turned out to be corrupted. She could not imagine how it would be for other medical families.

Was she wrong to insist on putting patients first?

As if he had seen through her mind, Byron spoke again, "No matter the industry, there's a certain responsibility to bear. Since the Lancer family is a medical family, they should be saving lives. Even if they want money, they shouldn't go astray. Doctors like you are very rare nowadays. I think it's because of your pure intent that Old Master Loewe chose to work in your research institute."

After saying that, he stroked Rosalie's hair. "With me, you don't need to worry about money like Xander. You just need to concentrate on your medical career. I can get you all the money you need."

Rosalie smiled. His words touched her.

Although Byron was not straightforward, she knew he supported her aim to be a doctor.

With his enlightenment, Rosalie felt better, and she looked less pale.

There was silence in the car.

Suddenly, the phone rang, shattering the warm moment between them.

She smiled and answered the phone. "What's up, Mary?"

Mary sounded excited. "I saw the news! Xander has been arrested! That despicable man even tried to escape after hurting you! He should stay in prison for the rest of his life." 1

Rosalie smiled at Byron.

Byron should be credited for handing Xander to the police.

"By the way, how's your health? Have you recovered?" Mary asked with concern.

Rosalie said, "I just left the hospital. I'm fine now." "Great!" Mary sounded happier than her. "There are too many things to celebrate! Let's go and have dinner. My treat! Bring Mr. Lawrence and the children along!"

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1763-Another Round

Rosalie quipped when she heard Mary said that, "Are you sure you want to treat us to dinner with Byron around?"

She knew her best friend well. Her best friend would never give up any chance to take advantage of Byron.

However, Mary rejected decisively this time. "I can get him to pay the next time. This time is on me. President Lawrence will have to wait for the next time to pay."

Rosalie laughed. "Alright. Dinner is on you."

Mary said, "I'll send you the location in a while. Let's meet at the restaurant."

They hung up the call after that.

Rosalie looked at Byron. "Mary said she's buying us dinner tonight and asked us to bring the kids along."

Byron agreed and went to pick the little ones up.

The little ones had not seen their mommy since they returned home last night.

The little ones were excited to finally see their mommy back in good health.

"Mommy! You're back!"

Smiling, Rosalie crouched and hugged the three kids as they rushed toward her. She listened patiently to what they were saying.

After chatting with them for a while, she said softly, "Come on. I'll change your clothes. Your godmother is taking us out for dinner tonight."

The little ones were excited to hear their godmother wanted to take them out for dinner. "Hooray!"

The family of five had reunited, and their mommy had been cured. They could even have a meal with their godmother tonight.

For the little ones, there was nothing better than having their dearest family by their side.

Rosalie's smile never faded since seeing the kids and seeing them so happy.

Mary sent them the location.

Rosalie and Byron drove to the venue with the kids.

Everyone took their seats in the private room.

The waiter brought the dishes to the table as soon as they were seated. All the dishes were the kids' favorites.

"Thank you," Rosalie thanked Mary. "I'm sorry for worrying you these few days."

Mary looked at her best friend and lamented as her smile faded. "I was indeed worried. Fortunately, you're fine now. That's the best thing that can happen."

Then, she glanced at Byron and said to Rosalie, "President Lawrence had a difficult time. At least I had a few hours of sleep, but President Lawrence has been awake for days."

Rosalie also looked at Byron, and her eyes met his.

They looked at each other affectionately.

Everyone was in a good mood since Rosalie had recovered. Thus, they enjoyed the meal.

Mary kept muttering about how Xander deserved it and praised Byron. She almost wanted to tell her best friend not to let go of such a good man. i

The three little ones nodded as they listened.

Byron was delighted. Before Mary could get the bill, he already paid for everything.

Mary was still unhappy that she did not get to pay for the meal when they left the restaurant. She quickly dragged Rosalie to a corner when she saw that Rosalie was about to leave with Byron.

"I haven't treated Rosie yet! President Lawrence, you can drive the kids back. Rosie and I are going for another round."

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1764-Rosalie had just recovered. After what happened, Byron was worried about letting her stay outside alone.

"You can go back first. I want to hang out with Mary for a while."

Rosalie could see Mary had something she wanted to tell her. Thus, she decided to go along with Mary's plans.

Byron frowned, and he looked worried.

Mary understood his worries and said, "If you're worried, you can send someone to protect us. You don't have to worry about me making Rosalie do something that'll betray you."

Byron agreed readily, saying, "I'll send someone to protect you girls. Call me when you're done and I'll pick you up."

It seemed he had planned to do so from the beginning.

Mary had no objection to this. She even quipped, "Looks like having a husband is different from being single like me."

Rosalie smiled as she spoke to the kids, "Mommy will go out with Godmother for a while. You guys return home with your daddy."

The kids nodded obediently.

Byron called his men and left after making sure they had arrived.

"What's the matter? Do you have something to say?"

Mary dragged Rosalie to a bar nearby, and Rosalie asked when they were seated.

Mary sipped her wine guiltily and looked around them.

It spiked Rosalie's curiosity. "Is there anything that you're hesitating to tell me?"

Mary hesitated for a while before speaking, "Do you still remember Miss Lincoln?"

Rosalie was startled for a moment before she remembered who Miss Lincoln was.

Many things had happened these days, and Chloe had only appeared before her one time. She did not pay much attention to Chloe because her mind was occupied with something else.

"Yes. Byron has explained this to me. They're childhood friends. What's wrong?"

Mary sighed and advised her, "In my opinion, although President Lawrence was a bit of a scumbag six years ago, he's a very good man now. Miss Lincoln grew up with him, and the timing of her return is a little strange. You'd better be careful. She might be the next Wendy."

Then, she explained, "I don't mean anything else. I've seen how President Lawrence took care of you the past few days, and I believe he'll never change his mind. However, we're not certain what Miss Lincoln's intentions are. It's better to be careful."

Mary was now cautious because of what happened with Wendy.

On the one hand, she was happy that her best friend had found true love. On the other hand, she feared her best friend would be hurt again because Byron was too popular.

Since Rosalie returned, she had almost lost Rosalie twice.

Mary did not want to experience it again.

Rosalie furrowed her brows upon hearing her best friend's words that warned her about Chloe.

After a while, she shook her head slightly. "I don't think Miss Lincoln is someone like that."

She remembered Chloe being sincere, and from Byron's comments about her, she seemed nice enough.

Rosalie wanted to believe in her instinct.

Mary said, "I'm just reminding you to be careful. When you were unconscious, she told me she had no feelings for President Lawrence, but it's better to keep your guard up."

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1765-"I see. I'll be careful."

Rosalie knew her best friend was telling her this for her sake, so she smiled and nodded.

Mary was glad Rosalie listened, and soon, they talked about something more relaxing.

Meanwhile, Andrius had just returned to the Quirke family's villa from the police station after dealing with Xander's arrest.

As soon as he entered the house, he saw his sister sitting on the sofa, watching TV. She would glance at the door occasionally as if waiting for something.

Her expression changed when she saw him, and she welcomed him home eagerly.

"Andrius, I saw the news. Xander has been arrested, so Rosalie must be awake now, right?"

Andrius nodded. "Yes. She regained consciousness last night. We've been busy trying to get Xander, so I had no time to tell you about it."

This time, his sister contributed by looking for Old Master Loewe, who helped Rosalie regain consciousness.

Therefore, it was only right for him to tell Andrea that Rosalie was now better.

He thought Andrea would be displeased, yet he saw no such emotion on her face.

Just as he was wondering, he heard his sister saying something. "I suppose Old Master Loewe helped her this time, didn't he? Didn't Byron say anything about rewarding me?"

She was claiming credit for her action.

Andrius' brows furrowed, and he felt a little uncomfortable about it.

Indeed, Andrea did contribute a lot. Byron should thank and reward her.

However, even if it was just a gift of thanks, it should be Byron who brought it up instead of her asking for it herself.

Moreover, Andrius felt Andrea's act of helping Rosalie was compensation for the harm she had brought to Rosalie previously because of her foolish decisions. How could she even ask for a reward now?

Getting no answer from Andrius made Andrea pout her lips and complain, "Old Master Loewe is a difficult man to invite. You know I spent a lot of effort trying to save Rosalie. I should have already made up for what I owed her."

Andrius's expression turned gloomy. "What do you mean?"

Andrea frowned. "Did I say something wrong? You're on good terms with her, so you're willing to save her. But I'm not! Even if she had saved Grandpa's life before, the medicine we gave her was enough to repay her kindness. I didn't do her such a great favor for nothing!" "Shut up!"

Anger shot through Andrius. He looked at his sister and said, "Tell me the truth, how did you invite Old Master Loewe? Did you find his contact information online, or is the man behind you..."

He did not believe that Old Master Loewe's contact information would be so readily available.

Before this, he did not have time to care about such a small matter.

Since Andrea was asking for a reward now, Andrius felt he was responsible for finding out the truth.

He looked into Andrea's eyes. "Did he tell you to ask for a reward? What's his motive?"

Andrius kept attacking her with questions.

These were questions she had yet to discuss with Alistair.

Andrea felt guilty and was at a loss for words. She tried to explain, but she could not.

Andrius' heart sank upon seeing this. "You've been turning a deaf ear to my warnings, haven't you?"

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 1766-Andrius had some idea of the situation judging from his sister's reaction.

'What's that man's purpose?

'He's obviously against the Lawrence family. It was clear when he assisted that fugitive Wendy by smuggling her abroad, but this time, he hired Old Master Loewe to cure Rosalie?'

Every action of his was contradictory and strange. He could not figure it out.

Andrea held back for a long time as she faced her brother's imposing aura. Her face was resentful. "What purpose can he have? You were always the golden boy of the Quirke family, trained to be the successor since young. As for me, no one has ever given me a chance. In the eyes of others, am I just an arrogant and wilful young lady? Am I not worthy of having an ambition of my own?"

Andrea became more emotional as she spoke. "Brother, listen. I'm also your competitor from today onward. Besides, I'm unlike you, who'll only take orders from the Lawrences in everything!"

Those words made all that Andrius had suppressed within him blow up.

"The Lawrences have never been bad to us. They're even quite generous to us. What's stupid is to treat the Lawrence family as an enemy. Moreover, Byron would definitely credit our family for inviting Old Master Loewe. I'd share any benefits with you."

After that, Andrius coldly left the house.

Behind him, Andrea's expression changed. Her eyes dimmed.

In Lawrence Manor, Byron was working on his laptop. Work had piled up after several days of absence.

Although Luther could handle most of the matters, there were still some agreements and contracts that needed to be personally reviewed and signed by him.

Rosalie noticed the man was deeply immersed in work. She brewed a cup of hot tea and brought it over without disturbing him.

There was a smile in her eyes. The man glanced up, and the corners of his mouth could not help but curl upward too.

"The poison in your body hasn't completely dissipated. You should focus on resting and recovering. Don't worry about me. You can go to bed first," Byron took a sip of tea and whispered, 1 "Well then, don't work too hard! I'll go and see if the kids are asleep."

This quiet life made Rosalie feel particularly comfortable. Although she almost died from poisoning this time, she gained something else.

She turned and went upstairs. The three kids were tired from playing and had fallen deeply asleep. She decided to take a nice, hot bath.

Not long after, a car arrived at the yard, and Andrius hurried into the living room.

'It's so late now, but Byron asked me to come over so suddenly. Could something have happened?' "Buddy, what's the matter?" Andrius asked straight to the point.

Byron closed the laptop. "Don't worry, it's nothing serious. Sit down. I have something to talk to you about."

Only then did Andrius sit down with ease. He looked up at Byron, who was brewing tea slowly.

Byron was skillful with the way he brewed the leaves. Then, he took a cup that was almost full and handed it to Andrius.

"Have a sip of tea first," he said.

Andrius took a whiff of the tea. The aroma was refreshing and fragrant.

“Buddy, I have to say, your mood over the past few days has been the most irritable that I’ve ever seen. You’ve finally returned to normal now that you’re like this.” Andrius sighed sincerely while drinking tea.

Byron smiled deeply. He nodded in admission.

“Indeed! After all, she’s the most important person in my life. The main reason I asked you to come over tonight is to inquire about the status of the Lancer family’s assets.

No matter how bad something was, there would always be value in it. Not to mention, the Lancer family had a long history of traditional medicine. Xander was talented in business, but his intentions were wrong, so he went astray.

The collapse of the Lancer family had a domino effect, with many people coveting a slice of the benefits.
